THE PALM GROWER'S TROUBLES.

Making the Best of Restrictions:

Between a shortage of stock, due to the absence of imports, and a shortage of coal with which to heat his houses, the lot of the palm grower does not seem to be a happy one in the year of grace, 1918. Some few palm seeds may come in, providing they were shipped early enough to avoid embargo in transit, but it will be a very uncertain quantity, and the indications are not by any means favorable for a crop to succeed those now in course of growth.

The kentia seed crop, being now subject to governmental regulation by the British authorities, there is doubtless a more stable supply guaranteed under normal conditions, but at present all shipping is required for other purposes, so the wails of the hapless florist are not likely to attract much attention.

Cocos seeds come into marketable condition much earlier in the season than the kentias, and a sufficient supply of these has been received for the year's crop, but while this palm is deservedly popular, it cannot be used for other than small decorative effects, on account of its dwarf habit.

Areca seeds come from various sources in South America, and while shipping from that section of the globe is irregular and rather slow, yet there is some possibility that such seeds may get in, and in the shortage of kentias there may be found more of an opening for arecas. But in this case, there is found another disadvantage to overcome, from the fact that the coal shortage will work more harm to a crop of arecas than it would to the kentias, for the latter will endure a night temperature of 45 degrees without serious harm, while the arecas should be held at 60 degrees in order to keep them in condition. Of course it will be readily understood that kentias will not grow when kept for the winter in so low a temperature as that noted above, but if the plants are well established in their pots before being exposed to this low temperature, and the watering is done with care during the winter, it is quite possible to hold them in fair condition until spring.

However, before the necessity for these heroic measures arrives, there are several months of good growing weather, and in order to have the stock in the best condition for next autumn's business, it must be put right and kept right for progress now. This means that cleaning, dipping, potting and re-arrangement should be pushed on as rapidly as possible, and that sufficient shading to avoid sun-burning should in all cases be provided.

The close of spring business usually finds plenty of space in the houses, and this is the time to take advantage of it by spreading the stock, thus giving the light and air a chance to do its good work among the plants.

Kentias are now rooting freely, and as young plants in 3-inch to 6-inch pots will doubtless be in demand, it seems the part of wisdom to take care of such stock first, thus taking advantage of just as long a season of growth as possible. The making up of larger sizes of kentias by those fortunate enough to have the plants to do it with, may be deferred until the small sizes are put in order, for not every plant grower has help enough to perform all these operations at once, the present season being an especially trying one in regard to the labor problem.

Quite a good many phoenix and livistonas are now used in a season, but unfortunately both of these palms enjoy a good amount of heat throughout the year, so that the coming of winter may not prove to be a happy one for the growers of these plants, when they will be confronted with a 50 per cent coal allowance. Livistonas are liable to get off-colored when kept too cool, but we shall at least have a chance to grow them during the summer, while the supply of natural heat is sufficient for their needs. Some of the phoenix, notably P. canariensis and P. dactylifera, may be kept safely in quite a low temperature during the winter, but under such conditions they do not require very much water, especially overhead, for when kept too wet overhead, there is very likely to be an outbreak of that troublesome fungus, the pustules of which break out something like "rust" on the foliage.

Phoenix Roebelenii and P. rupicola are both much more satisfactory when kept rather warm during the winter, for they lose both form and color when grown cool. But in June, July and August, one may water freely and syringe vigorously, and the ensuing moist atmosphere will do a good deal toward discouraging those troublesome pests, thrips and red spiders, both of which have the pernicious ability to ruin a good crop of palms in a short time, if allowed to go on unchecked.

Some night ventilation is also helpful to the plants at this season, for fresh air is always beneficial to vegetation, and it disposes of a portion of the condensation on the foliage, too much of the latter sometimes working injury to the leaves.

Cyclamen.

It is very easy when you know how, whether you are sinking a submarine, or raising cyclamens. If you know how, the achievement is soon a matter of record.

The Robert Craig Co.'s establishment at Norwood, Pa., is famous for its cyclamens. They have this plant down to a science. A visit here during November or early December when the stock is in flower is a delight. Seed is sown in flats August 1. As soon as the seedlings are large enough they are picked off into flats with more room. A large block of seed is sown in September, one seed to a 2½-inch pot. Many are potted from the seedling flats direct into 2½-inch pots. Strong plants are selected and set out in leaf mold and well rotted manure on tables where they make rapid growth, much faster than when in pots. In March every other plant from this table stock is potted up into a six, which gives the remainder a chance to develop. These are later placed in eights. An immense stock is grown in 2½-inch pots for the trade, many growers depending on this firm for stock.

The greatest difficulty with most growers is getting the stock safely over the hot summer weather. They are grown here in light airy houses with side and top ventilation. Shading cloth on rollers over the glass is let down at nine a. m. and taken up at four in the afternoon. While cyclamens must never be allowed to get dry, they are best kept on the dry side during the very hot month of August. Everything must be done to avoid a soft, spongy growth, as such a plant will produce but few flowers and is never a success in the dwelling.

The seed heretofore has been of the best German strain, but the coming season they will set aside a large block of the best plants and raise their own. They expect great things of this "Made in America" stock.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kliff, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

With the comparatively little doing at this season, there should be all the more attention paid to the essentials. Nearly all the trade is for funerals, and everything pertaining to this work, with the exception of fresh flowers, Perilous War Finance.

There is a deeper difficulty involved in a tax on so-called luxuries than mere enhancement of cost to consumers.

This is a nation of 100,000,000 people, of whom about 2½ per cent are now diverted from industry to war.

The remaining 97½ per cent must live, move and have their being, besides providing for the requirements of the 2½ per cent in the shape of food, clothing and munitions. Up to the prosperity and well-being of the 97½ per cent depend the Nation's strength to fight and power to endure.

The off-hand policy of the Treasury Department and of bureau heads generally is to ignore the needs of the 97½ per cent and to concentrate all energies, physical and financial, behind the 2½ per cent.

No one for a moment questions the necessity for a most complete and thorough support of the soldiers and sailors.

But there now arises a sharp difference of opinion as to how that support can best be maintained.

The collapse of the Coal Administration last winter was a blow to industry from which the country still staggers.

Yet in the face of that experience and its consequence it is proposed to adopt methods which will curtail many industries and stop others, and totally to disregard the greatest factor in the situation—which is:

The need of providing for redistribution of the enormous sums poured into the Nation's war purse.

A limited number of concerns make munitions, build ships and furnish war supplies for the 2½ per cent of the population directly engaged in fighting.

The rest of the country must furnish the bulk of the funds and maintain itself at the same time on a basis that shall grow stronger rather than weaker.

If the proposed plan of taxation prevails, how will it be possible to redistribute the money thus concentrated in such wise that each citizen may be properly provided with the means of making a living, which will enable him to go on contributing his quota to national confidence and prosperity?

It needs but little thought to realize that the sale of so-called luxuries constitutes one of the best means of insuring a normal, healthy flow of money through all parts of the industrial organism.

The necessities of life are relatively few. Luxuries count heavily on the profit-making side of industry. A bare living for the individual contributes little to the common prosperity.

The Government pays colossal wages. It has lifted the cost of labor in all lines to the limit of endurance.

Employers and employees in a few industries engaged in the making of munitions profit enormously.

But other Americans—millions and tens of millions of them—must suffer to the verge of ruin unless somewhere the vein is tapped.

If Federal War Finance continues to form its programme on the easy theory that its sole task is to get money out of the country, without any provision for outflow money back, and assuming its easy, stimulating flow through accustomed channels, the Nation will presently find itself stricken with industrial paralysis—at the time when, of all times in its history, it has need of its full health and strength.—New York Evening World.

should be at hand ready for instant use. Frequently at this vacation season, bodies of deceased persons are brought from a distance, with funerals direct from depot, there being no home ceremony. In other cases, customers hear at the last minute of funerals in adjacent towns or cities, orders for which must be almost ready made, to get there in time. The man who does not have the right card to play at this stage of the game, misses a trick that is sometimes quite expensive.

Each day's stock of fresh flowers should be on hand as early in the morning as possible. Asters are coming in; these are the great summer standby, the only objection to this summer favorite is that its stems foul so soon. Fresh flowers in water over night have a distinctly stale odor, and the second day, while the flowers are perfectly good, the stems are slimy and all the foliage gone. This can be easily remedied with two or three drops of formaldehyde in each jar of water, which stops fermentation and keeps the water sweet and the stems clean. Ten cents worth, obtained at any drug store, will answer for a lot of vases.

Fresh foliage wreaths to fill out-of-town orders at this season are better than cut flowers. When made of croton, begonia, pandanus, dracæna, fittonia and other tropical leaves they are very effective. Young plants of pandanus, Rex begonias, dracænas, cocos and ferns, with the roots tied in moss, will last better than when the leaves are cut off and stemmed. A good-sized, well-made wreath with plants of these varieties makes an effective show as a window piece.

Red, white and blue pond lilies lend a patriotic touch to the window that is worth while. Nothing is quite so attractive at this time as a good showing of water lilies, particularly the large white.

Gladioli are now becoming a factor and should be in stock at all times. They have value as a cut flower for vases, and are very effective in sprays and design work.

There should be a fair showing of plants about the store, particularly ferns; while some are doing duty for decorative effect, those that are salable should be kept to the front, featured with the price label fairly conspicuous so that anyone desiring the price can see it without asking. The price tag is a silent salesman on duty all the time. Commission on all sales made in this manner would amount to a tidy sum in the course of the year.

Just before the closing hour, at least once a week, all plants should be taken to the rear and given a good hosing; this removes the dust and helps to keep down the red spider. Twice a week is really better, particularly in killing the spider.

Has the inventory been completed? If not it should be attended to at once. There is a great satisfaction in knowing just what is on hand and its value. The standard stock necessary for the coming season should be ordered at once, as all lines of florists' requisites are steadily advancing in price, while freights, boxing, draying and similar expenses are becoming very burdensome. Get what is necessary for your next winter's supply. Get it at once, have it on hand, and avoid embargoes, bad weather conditions, and the inevitable higher prices.

Feature the slogan, "Say It With Flowers." Keep it always to the front, on your stationery, tags, etc. It is the continuity of advertising that makes it effective. The S. A. F. publicity committee is hard at it and is doing good work. Send along a check to help them, and thank yourself. It will come back to you two fold and more.

ADVERTISING THE NECESSITY OF THE HOUR.

How Publicity Built Up Large Business Under War Conditions.

Charles N. Wheeler, London Co-correspondent, in the Chicago Tribune.

Record Sales Result.

London, June 30—"On August 5, 1914, the day after war was declared, I increased our advertising space. From that day I have been buying all the advertising space available. I would do more advertising today if I could get the space.

"We are limited only by the limitations of the newspapers. We are taking right now every inch they will give us and at rates that would make us in the States turn somersaults and fall over backwards.

"I am paying at the rate of $1 per agate line for display space right now. I will take more space if they will give it to me—and at that rate. I probably will pay more before the war is over. But I will take all they will give.

"The first four months of this year have been the biggest four months in our history. This growth has come because we have forced it. At the beginning of this year we were the sixteenth largest house of the kind in the world. At the end of this year we will be the sixth. Within two years after the new store building is completed we will be first.

Ads Shatter Traditions.

"A big factor—a very big factor—in this record has been and will continue to be newspaper advertising. We never could have broken through these traditions over here without it. We had to use all we could to break down prejudices. We made people stop, look and listen. Then the store itself did the rest.

"We now talk to millions of people every day through our advertising columns, and they believe in us, trust us, respond to that advertising quickly and continue to be our customers in all kinds of weather. The large business enterprise that is not going the limit in advertising just now is making a huge mistake.

"Now, more than at any other time, it is necessary to push the display advertising. If retrenchments appear necessary they should be made in every other department but the publicity one—the newspaper advertising one. The prices they are soaking us now for space are simply awful—but I'll take more space if they will give it to me."

American Store in London.

The foregoing statement was made by Harry Gordon Selfridge. I dropped in at the Oxford street store the other day to have a chat on business and the effect the war was having on great mercantile establishments of this character. People here refer to the Selfridge store as the "miracle store" and the "brilliant business romance."

The store has had a truly brilliant career. Mr. Selfridge achieved what all his friends and all London told him impressively was impossible—the establishing in the heart of London's great drapery district of a typical American department store of huge size. They told him—and proved it to him to their satisfaction—that he would lose every dollar he intended putting into it. They endeavored by every kind of dissuasion to have him see the light and return to America before he had to borrow the price of a steerage ticket.

Advertising is Secret.

Today they still marvel. They cannot understand it. Perhaps if Mr. Selfridge were to answer why he fooled everybody and made himself the merchant prince of London in a few years, and had to compress his answer into one word, he might truthfully reply:

"Advertising."

That is, it was the judicious and intelligent publicity that brought the store to the people of London. His greatest task was to get in touch with the purchasing public. He found a stone wall of tradition opposing him. Innovations, particularly from America, made no appeal. Then he turned on London a searchlight of newspaper advertising that stands in the record one of the most expensive and brilliant pages in mercantile publicity.

Harry G. Selfridge.

Former Chicagoan, Now Merchant Prince of London, Eng. Mr. Selfridge is an Enthusiastic Horticulturist.

Invests Huge Sums.

He began spending money as if he had the Bank of England back of him. He realized that the London populace might not gasp in wonderment at a small advertisement extolling the merits of a silk stocking. He realized that he had to do something on a big scale, and something, above all else, that would compel attention.

He knew that Londoners have a weakness for art. The average Londoner will waste half his time going down the Strand—or improve it—stopping to view the crayons and water colors and sketches in the shop windows. A beautiful picture, an artistic drawing, a clever cartoon, will get an audience, anytime in old London town. So Selfridge started out to do something big in the artistic line.

He ascertained the names of the leading black and white artists of the English capital. He got in touch with the foremost artists of the day—the men who made Punch, and the Graphic, and the Illustrated News, and other great illustrated periodicals famous the world over. He got in touch with other artists. Then he set them to turning out the finest drawings they were capable of.

London "Falls."

London fell. London, though not in a hurry about it, casually dropped around Oxford way if that happened to be between any two points to be visited that day. Many, no doubt, came to scoff, but remained—to pay! Like wild turkeys following a trail of corn to a trap, they were shy and walked around a good bit before venturing in.

But once they ventured in, the old American department store system scored—delivered the goods, dollar for dollar; quality service; courteous treatment; making every word good; every line of the advertisement a solemn contract between the store and the purchaser refunding with a smile when it was requested; no trouble to show goods; whether purchasing or not as welcome as the sunshine; a cordial welcome on every foot of the floor space; a come again smile that was on the square and not a lure; the building up of that big family spirit of mutual helpfulness and understanding, and sympathy; and the quality of the wares that spoke most eloquently in service.

Buyers Crowd Store.

Today the drawings of the artists who made London stop and look at the Selfridge ads are shown in the art stores. Copies are sent to all quarters of the world. And after confidence in the store was firmly established there was no further need of the artists. Then page advertisements of wares were all sufficient. And the more Selfridge piled his money into page ads the greater became the volume of business and the larger the Selfridge family of buyers.

There was another little stunt in applied psychology that won out big. The Selfridge wisemen realized that London could not get out of bed and enjoy a breakfast without the "leader" article in the morning newspapers. So Selfridge copyrighted a byline: "By Callisthenes." And Callisthenes began writing "leaders."

Leaders For Five Years.

For five years these "leaders" have been appearing in the Evening Standard, Pall Mall Gazette, Westminster Gazette, and Globe. At the head of the column for these five years has appeared a little editor's note, reading as follows:

"Note.—This column is occupied every day by an article reflecting the policies, principles, and opinions of this house of business upon various points of public interest.

"SELFLEDGE & Co., LTD."

DEC 30 1919

These "leaders," brilliantly written, were paid for at special advertising rates, and they were "some" rates. London will read a brilliant article on any subject, just as London will praise a poem if it is up to their standard of brilliancy, regardless of the subject treated. They will stick for form.

Selfridge has taught London that there is nothing commonplace or unworthy in advertising and publicity. He has made it pay big, and has dignified it. He has outstripped those in the same business who frowned on the "vulgar" system of exploiting one's wares through advertising.

Now all London is trying to catch up with him—and there is little advertising space to be had by the laggards owing to war economies. Selfridge has the cream of it.

Of present conditions Mr. Selfridge says:

"The business man who fails to realize that right now—in wartime—he should drive ahead with his advertising at greater speed than ever before has overlooked a golden opportunity. At no time in the history of our business here has advertising paid such large returns as right now. My only regret is that I cannot buy more space."

Lily Bulb Production.

Some suggestions by David Griffiths, United States department of agriculture.

Florists will be interested in some preliminary work being done in the greenhouses of the department of agriculture at Arlington Farm, Va. The investigation is not far enough advanced yet to warrant definite recommendations and directions to be drawn, but there are indications that the Easter lily bulb can be produced in the latitude of Washington on a combination greenhouse and out-of-door basis very satisfactorily. Since the exigencies of the shipping situation of the world have necessitated an embargo on importations of bulbs, we shall have to produce the stocks ourselves or go without these almost indispensable decorations. A few suggestions, therefore, based on the department's investigations may enable some of our florists to work out a plan for the production of their own stocks. As the time necessary for building up a stock is considerable, it seems desirable to offer these few suggestions now—all with reservations—for the benefit of saving time for those who may be in a position to take advantage of them.

Years ago it was proven through the work done by George W. Oliver that it was perfectly feasible to produce flowering bulbs in one year's time from seed under greenhouse conditions. With this as a starting point, a large batch of seedlings was produced two years ago. These have just passed through their first full flowering and have been segregated for further seedling generations. But that is aside. The points which it is desirable to emphasize here may be summarized as follows: I. The Easter lily can be carried out-of-doors and blossomed in the vicinity of Washington (and probably very much farther north). II. The seed sown in August to October in flats in the greenhouse will germinate quickly and may be pricked off into three-inch pots in winter or early spring. III. A few of these may produce blossoms during the summer. IV. In the following autumn, the bulbs can be dried off and matured for a few weeks and then potted up for forcing. Eighty per cent, at least, should be large enough for this purpose. V. The bulbs too small to force may be planted late in the fall out-of-doors in a friable and preferably fertile soil at a depth of eight inches, and mulched after cold weather sets in. These will be ready to force the following year.

From the above it will be seen that the greenhouse room necessary for the production of flowering bulbs is a small space (two or three flats) during winter, and a comparatively small space for three-inch pots during the summer when plenty of room is usually available. As a matter of fact it is thought it may be possible to cut out the summer in three-inch pots in the greenhouse. This is being tried this season. The seedlings were set in beds out-of-doors in April. They are doing very well at present, but it cannot be told yet how the bulbs will grow. At all events, if greenhouse space is short for the three-inch pot period, frames will suffice as well as greenhouse space for growing the bulbs on. It is quite certain that a smaller percentage of the bulbs will reach flowering size under the uncontrolled out-of-door condition, but this will simply necessitate that a larger proportion of small bulbs be grown on out-of-doors another year.

Seed production in the Easter lily is a simple matter, as practically every blossom will set. It is needless to say that only the best plants should be used to produce seed. A cross between the varieties giganteum and Harrisii has been recommended as producing great vigor. On the other hand, satisfactory results have been secured by selling good plants of formosums. Experience is too limited to enable one to say which cross is the best that can be made. It is safe, however, to recommend that the florist select the best and most uniform plants, pollinating with other individuals in the same variety.

It is to be expected that special growers will come along after a time, who will make it their business to produce the bulbs for the florist trade in this country. But until that comes about, the florists can produce them themselves with little, if any, more space and effort than that now required to keep up the propagation of carnation or any other similar stocks.

It should be borne in mind that all forced bulbs can be used again by growing out-of-doors a year, providing they are allowed to mature naturally in the pots. This necessitates only that the pots be set out-of-doors with proper moisture control after cold weather is by. This requires that the florist, when he has gotten up his stocks, need carry only double the number of bulbs which he forces each year, plus a margin for losses and plants sold. Those not actually in forcing are carried out-of-doors, where their handling should be paid for by flowers which will be produced in abundance in June. Of course, cutting at all times must be carefully done to preserve the leafage for bulb production.

Stocks produced from seed will be irregular in size, but so is the stock imported from Japan for that matter. Uniformity of stock can be brought about only through selection and further breeding. The department is now endeavoring to produce uniformity through successive seedling generations. This may be a difficult thing to do. It is not felt, however, that it is at all imperative that it be done. If it shall be found that it is difficult or impracticable of accomplishment, vegetative propagation can be resorted to, and that without practicing the scale method in vogue in Bermuda years ago. Bulbs planted deeply will always produce a number of axillary bulblets, the number of which will be multiplied still further by "hilling" or banking the earth about the plants as they grow. We have had 12 bulblets $\frac{3}{4}$ inch in diameter produced naturally on bulbs planted nine inches deep. This natural bulblet propagation will serve to keep up the stocks. They need but one year's growth to be brought to forcing size, and where but few are produced on a stem, they may be large enough to produce one or two flowers the first year.

Many will no doubt be skeptical about the repeated use of the bulbs year after year for forcing on account of their experience with diseases in imported stocks. But with care in handling, there should be no more difficulty with diseases in the lily than in the hippeastrum or a score of other plants that might be mentioned. It should be noted that a seed generation leaves the diseases behind, for how long will depend to a very large extent upon the conditions under which the plants are handled. No disease has yet appeared in our stocks.

It may seem rather revolutionary to advocate the production of Easter lily bulbs this far north, when the venture has been so disastrous even in Florida, and especially when the advice in all the trade journals is, to throw the bulbs away after they have flowered. But it is not at all impossible that the northern situation has decided advantages. Diseases and pests will certainly be less troublesome. In the south, the bulbs appear above ground in the fall and go through the winter in vegetative condition. In the north, they are planted late to preclude this autumnal development. We have also mulched in the vicinity of Washington. This is an added expense, but the space covered by bulbs used by any one florist is small, and the cost of mulching is inconsiderable. We must remember that the whole bulb industry of Holland is built up very largely upon a mulching system.

It is rather felt that it may be necessary to dig all bulbs and ripen them off in storage each fall, planting such as are not needed or are too small for forcing late, so that no top growth will be produced before winter sets in. However, it may be shown later that it may not be necessary to dig each autumn. We have had two lots undisturbed out-of-doors now for the second winter with good success, the plants producing from three to 11 flowers each. We have even had small bulbs go through the winter with no protection when planted but six inches deep.

Japanese Lily Bulbs.

Harry Goldstein, who sailed for Japan April 5, to look after the interests of the American Bulb Co., Chicago, has returned. While in Japan he called on the important lily bulb growers. He reports the crop is favorable for a good harvest this season, but owing to the restrictions of not allowing lily bulbs to come into this country this year, the Japanese farmer is very much discouraged, and the jobbers in Japan will suffer considerable financial losses, as lily bulbs are contracted for in advance by the jobber and a payment is made during the planting season to enable the farmer to cultivate his crop. This method is similar to the method used in the south by the cotton planter, who always received his financial aid through cotton brokers, and payment was made after the crop was harvested.

Due to the import restrictions of lily bulbs into the United States the jobber in Japan will have no market to dispose of the bulbs in any quantity, so it is probable that the farmer will not spend any money in harvesting his crop. The Japanese are trying to ship lilies into South America and other countries, but in no way will it take up the amount formerly used in the United States. The Japanese jobbers fear that should the United States not raise the embargo now placed on lily bulbs into the country before next season's planting, many of the farmers will entirely give up the cultivation of lilies and go into other lines. This will make lily bulbs very scarce and expensive when the embargo is lifted.

Mr. Goldstein states that the Japanese merchants are very independent and care very little about the embargo being placed on merchandise, such as cotton goods, baskets, furniture, etc., due to the fact that they are tremendously busy sending their merchandise into South America, England, Australia, Canada, and are getting very high prices, much more than the American merchant formerly paid. It is the wish of the American jobber that the embargo be lifted, before the next planting season comes on, to avoid the small crop, and also a high price.

National Publicity for Flowers.

The secretary is able to report a very satisfactory continuation of his trip in behalf of the national publicity campaign fund. In Milwaukee he, with Chairman Geo. Asmus of the publicity finance committee, were guests of the local florists' club, which held a special meeting in order that the objects of the campaign and its benefits to the trade might be properly explained, and the work of the promotion bureau demonstrated. Many subscriptions were forthcoming at this meeting, and a number of new members for the society obtained. Next day, the secretary made a round of calls upon the florists of the city and vicinity and was most cordially received everywhere; the results of his visit are quite noticeable in the subscription report, and in addition to the subscriptions he has to report an influx to the membership roll of 21 annual and three life members. He feels under deep obligation to Messrs. Hunkel, Rusch, Kennedy and Pollworth for courtesies extended and help given during his stay.

In Minneapolis and St. Paul, the secretary had a most hearty reception, and the support given him was generous, and in volume, somewhat unexpected. The florists of the twin cities held a special meeting, and gave a banquet at the Elk's club. The meeting was largely attended and much enthusiasm over the work of the society was apparent; Hans Rosacker presided, and the proceedings were interesting indeed. The secretary explained the work of the society and told of what was being accomplished in behalf of the trade. He, of course, dealt at length with the work of the publicity committees, and explained fully the details of the campaign in progress. The result of his visit was a subscription list amounting to about $500, 22 new annual members, and two life members. The thanks of the secretary are due to all who rendered him assistance, and particularly to Hugh Will, Cal. Rice, Theodore Wirth, Hans Rosacker, R. A. Latham, Max Kaiser and Olaf Olson.

In Fargo, N. D., every florist subscribed to the fund or took out a membership in the society. In this city, as in others, the secretary's reception was most gratifying; he desires particularly to express thanks for the very great assistance given by John Shotwell and F. D. Smedley.

With the florists falling into line as they appear to do on the secretary's route, should those whose locations preclude the possibility of personal contact hesitate to send in their contributions—especially as, if they will only stop to think, they are florists who have much to gain from the publicity secured? One of the objects of the campaign is to promote inter-city business. It would be a surprise to some of those who are hesitating were they to know of the very large number of letters received by our promotion bureau from people in remote communities asking for information as to how orders for flowers could be filled at distant points. These letters have come from all parts of the country and from France, England, Cuba, the South American republics, and other countries. All were indicative of immediate business, and no doubt, much business of a continuous nature. The writers of these letters received courteous replies and the fullest information possible.

The fund now is nearing the end of its fourth stage. The fifth stage is "the last ten thousand." How soon can we accomplish its completion? Those who now have the spirit of the campaign thoroughly within them, feel that completion should come speedily—and it will, if the, no doubt, well-intentioned nonsubscriber will only exert himself to overcome his hesitancy, and turn in a subscription. It is not a "gamble"—it is money well expended, and the assurance goes with it that it will come back through increased business, and consequent prosperity. Remember the parable of the talents. Do not let the little subscription which you assuredly are able to provide go unused—use it in this great cause, and be sure of a manifold return.

"Put It Through"

KEYNOTE OF WAR LABOR CONFERENCE.

At a meeting held at Washington, it is one of the vital points for the success of the war. We hear a great deal of talk lately throughout the country on the scarcity of labor for greenhouses. Well, it strikes me that one of the first necessities of the American citizen who has his country's interests at heart, is to do his part so as to release men for the government's needs. Just for a moment consider that Uncle Sam needed you and beckoned you to come. Would you hesitate? No. You would go gladly to do your all. Why not look at the labor and coal problem in the same manner?

Now then, here's where we get off. The government expects you to produce and sell all you can to help pay the war taxes, by cutting down expenses or by speeding up production with less men, and one of the most important jobs every citizen has on his hands, is to create a more profitable business, so that he may be privileged to pay his share and feel that he lives in a country that gives him the right to do this, rather than live under a government with a mill-stone around his neck.

Now, what has all this to do with publicity? Well, before I answer, I want to mention that I received a fine note from our good friend Albert Pochelon, F. T. D. secretary, who has done so much for the telegraph delivery, that one wonders how he does it, so from his experiences, quoting his own words, "Dear Friend Penn: There are so few people who ever believe that some men are willing to do something for our profession to help build it up unselfishly, that I wonder how you ever find the time to superintend the job of national advertising, etc."

Well, my answer is, that it becomes any man's duty to his fellow-man to do his all, not his bit (I've cut that out of my category) for every part of his country's needs, and if my job as chairman of the national publicity committee is going to help speed up our business by causing to be done more advertising nationally and locally than the florists were going to do, then we will be doing our share in the world's work by devoting more energy to our business than ever before to create a place for ourselves, so that when the world's war is over those who have participated will make a name and place for themselves for all time.

This is the pleasant duty that has been my task for the past few months, that of receiving so many compliments as well as criticisms, that the job is going to be worth what I hope some day to merit—the good will of the craft which is all one should expect.

HENRY PENN.

Chairman, National Pub. Committee.

The Business Diary.

Keeping a diary is almost every boy's resolve, but to him it is very difficult an accomplishment. A business diary, if a man will give it the required few minutes each day, will, at the end of the year, afford a splendid resume of the business and present a guide that will steer clear of the mistakes of the year before. Many men who grow a variety of plants, from a desire to fill orders, will sell from reserved stock of popular varieties, while those in little demand are left on the benches, and more than fill their allotted space in the cutting bed later on.

From January to December there is scarcely a week passes in which there is not something transpires; an important item of work done or not done, as the case may be, that if written down at the time would help to avoid the error another season. Members of the craft in every branch of the trade would find such a record of their business a paying proposition and a most excellent book of reference.

AT THE HOME OF THE LATE JAMES DEAN, FREEPORT, L. I., N. Y.

James Dean.

James Dean, past president of the Society of American Florists, chief executive of the national organization at its Washington convention in 1892, also president of the New York Florists' Club during the same year, and one of its charter members passed to his last rest at his home at Freeport, N. Y., July 16, of arterial sclerosis, after a long and useful career. He had reached the age of 74 years. Mr. Dean was born on the estate of the Marquis of Queensbury, Dumfriesshire, Scotland, where his father was employed as gardener, coming to the United States in 1850 and attended school at Astoria, L. I., his father having secured the position of gardener on the estate of the Rev. Dr. Howland at that place. At the outbreak of the Civil war in 1861, the deceased ran away from home and enlisted in the Seventy-second New York Volunteer Regiment, returned at its close as commanding officer of his company, and entered the employ of W. C. Wilson, who at that time conducted one of the largest florist establishments in America. Later he became gardener on the estate of W. C. Langley at Bay Ridge, L. I., who during the 60's and 70's had large conservatories and was a successful exhibitor at the New York and Brooklyn shows. Later he formed a partnership with J. M. Keller, the firm being Keller & Dean, but after five years, following its dissolution, Mr. Dean started into business on his own account, making a specialty of foliage and Easter plants for the New York and surrounding markets and met with excellent success. Another of his brilliant achievements was the supervision of the floricultural exhibit of the State of New York at the Chicago World's Fair, in 1893, the display covering six and three-quarter acres and being awarded 82 medals and diplomas. This number was about equal to that given to all the rest of the states combined in the same classes.

A man of kindly disposition and sterling qualities, James Dean commanded the highest respect of all who knew him. He had served three terms as president of the village of Freeport, was commander of the U. S. Grant Post, Grand Army of the Republic which went to Mount McGregor and which placed General Grant's body in the tomb at Riverside, and under whose auspices services are held at the tomb each Memorial day. During his residence at Bay Ridge, the deceased was much interested in educational affairs and served as president of the board of trustees for 20 consecutive years until consolidation made the district schools a part of the educational system of Greater New York. In 1867, Mr. Dean was married to Miss Louise L. Labrousse, who with three daughters, Mrs. C. W. Bouton, Mrs. A. G. Firth and Miss A. M. Dean, and two sons, Dr. Julian Dean and David Dean, survive. The funeral services were held at the home on the evening of July 18, and interment the following morning with Grand Army ceremonies.

Only a few weeks ago, Mr. Dean sent us some reminiscences of his early days, from which we take the following:

"Going back to the commercial houses of the 60's and 70's and noting some of the difficulties encountered in producing, handling and marketing flowers and plants, I recall that most of the plant houses were of sash with heavy rafters, often 12 x 14 inches, spaced four feet apart, the sash glazed with 6 x 8 or 7 x 9 glass. Most of the houses were heated by flues which required eternal vigilance to prevent the escape of gas which often proved fatal to the foliage if not to the plants. In the 70's, the fixed roof, hot water and steam heat were just coming into general use. Twenty houses in the early days would require 20 fires where flues were used. They had to be stoked from the outside, no covering from the weather being given. The houses often being scattered it took some time to make the rounds, especially when water or snow had to be bailed or shoveled out before the fires could be fixed for the night.

"In spite of the rapid advance in modern methods, I doubt very much if there are many establishments that could today, satisfactorily fit out a large private conservatory from their own stock, a not uncommon occurrence in the earlier days. Most florists now cater to the wholesale end of their business. Probably, in no direction has the advance been so noticeable, as in the construction of the modern greenhouses. Many single ones are now erected that, a few years ago, would have been considered fair sized florists' establishments. Much of this advance is due to appliances perfected by horticultural builders.

"The earliest rose house I remember was one owned by James Weir, a lean-to, about 20x35 feet, with heavy rafters and sashes glazed with 6x8 glass, and planted, as I remember, with roses in a solid bed. The following varieties were grown: Lamarque, Gloire de Dijon, Malmaison, Safrano and Devoniensis. The Wigan brothers started in Secaucus, N. J., and built several large sash houses and were very successful with their tea and hybrid perpetual roses. Ernest Asmus and John Henderson were also very successful with roses in the old-style sash houses."

The Late Admiral Aaron Ward.

The sudden death, at his home in Roslyn, L. I., of Admiral Aaron Ward came as a severe shock to his friends. The admiral was a true-hearted, able man, with the vigor and clear vision of a good sea captain. Born in the city of Philadelphia, Pa., in 1851, he became in due time a trained seaman in the United States navy, and advanced step by step until he reached the top, retiring from active service as rear admiral.

At the beginning of this war, he commanded and took across the water the first Red Cross ship on its errand of noble mercy. In New York, he was at home, having for some years had oversight of certain naval affairs of the port. He had sailed the great deep of the oceans from land to land in all latitudes, but his name, however, is far wider known among the people of America for his connection with the queen of flowers—the rose. When he named the beautiful yellow rose, which grows to perfection from Long Island to Vancouver, across the continent, from ocean to ocean, it was after the one he loved best—his wife. Here lay in his character the sentiment for that which is beautiful—the strong man, for whom the great winds and rough waves had no terrors. He had the love of home and beauty in the fibre of his being. "A Rose for Every Home, a Bush for Every Garden" is a sentiment which makes the world the better. Admiral Ward, the hybrid tea, named in his honor, which was awarded a medal by the French Society of Rose Growers, is said to be one of the best dark red roses for bedding. It is described as follows: Unnamed variety x Chateau de Clos Vougeot, a strong bushy grower, with broad, bronzy-green foliage and few thorns. The bud is round, blackish red and the flower is large, double and globular. The petals are broad, sometimes fringed, of fine red crimson color, shaded fire red and velvety dark red. It blooms freely.

In the American Rose Society as far as his duties permitted, Admiral Ward was always ready to give a guiding, helping hand. At the entrance of the United States into the war, he resigned his connection with the executive committee work, with a word to the effect, "America first."

His many friends in the American Rose Society have expressed a desire that their esteem and respect for the man, Admiral Aaron Ward, of Roslyn, may be a matter of record, as he has left us for the realm where the spirit of just men is made perfect.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND,
President American Rose Society.

Ernest Hale.

Ernest Hale, a florist at East Orange, N. J., was accidentally killed on a street of that city on the afternoon of July 11. He was employed by his father, Charles Hale, who has a retail store at 523 Main street, East Orange, and had left the store on his bicycle to go home. In turning out to pass a heavy motor truck, the wheel of his bicycle caught in the car track, throwing him off and directly in front of the hind wheels of the truck, which passed over him. When an ambulance arrived he was dead. He was 33 years old and is survived by his wife, to whom he had been married less than a year, and by his parents and several brothers. Much sympathy is felt for the bereaved family, well known in the wholesale district of New York. Charles Hale, the father, was formerly in business in Washington, D. C.

William E. Evans.

William H. Evans, president of the Spikes Peck Floral Co., Colorado Springs, Colo., died in Pasadena, Calif., July 10, after a protracted illness. Owing to ill health, the deceased had spent much of his time during the past four or five years in that state. He established the above company 16 years ago, and enlarged the establishment from time to time, until at present it ranks as one of the largest ranges in the Rocky Mountain district.

ADVERTISERS may now receive only one free copy of weekly newspapers for checking purposes, by orders of the war industries' board.

THE French schedule of goods, officially classed as luxuries, and subject to tax under that law, does not include flowers or plants, according to United States Commerce Reports.

THE late James Dean, whose death this week is recorded in our obituary columns, was a sturdy pioneer in American floriculture and a conspicuous leader in every movement for the welfare of the trade. It was due to his broad influence that the late J. A. Pettigrew was appointed superintendent of the Brooklyn parks, and in many similarly laudable endeavors he was equally successful.

Bermuda Lily Bulbs.

Wm. F. Gude, Washington representative of the Society of American Florists, telegraphed as follows July 16:

"We are glad to report that the war trade board passed the following resolution in regard to the importation of lily bulbs from Bermuda:

"Resolved, That the licenses shall be issued for the importation of lily bulbs from Bermuda when shipped by the S. S. Charybdis."

ST. LOUIS CONVENTION, AUGUST 20-22.

With prospects of a splendid attendance at the convention, the trade exhibition is now an object of much interest to those who are able to take advantage of it for the display of productions of a trade character. While it is yet early to report as to the extent of the exhibition, there is every indication that it will be quite large, and a credit to the society. Many requests for plans have been received in the past week at the secretary's office, showing that growers and manufacturers are alive to the possibilities which the expected large gathering will present to exhibitors. The programme covering the proceedings, which has just been mailed, in its make-up is such as to induce every florist within traveling distance to spare no effort to be present.

Space reservations have already been made for the following: Henry A. Dreer, Inc., and S. S. Pennock Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Chicago Carton Co., Chicago; Joseph Heacock Co., Wyncote, Pa.; Burlington Willow Ware Shops, Burlington, Ia.; A. L. Randall Co., Chicago; Wertheimer Bros., New York; W. A. Manda, Inc., South Orange, N. J.; Kroeschell Bros. Co., and Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Hospital Flowers Appreciated.

The following communication from Mrs. J. Clark Curtin, chairman of the Home and Overseas Relief Division, New York, to Maurice L. Glass of the committee of the New York Florists' Club in charge of details of collecting flowers from the trade for distribution to soldiers and sailors in hospitals in that city and vicinity, bespeaks the good work being done in this worthy cause:

"I want to express to you and the other kind contributors my personal appreciation of your generous gift of flowers yesterday, and at the same time, tell you what joy they gave to the boys.

"One-half of the flowers, one of my committee took to the Flower and Park Hospitals, and of the other half I left some at the Willard Parker, where boys with contagious diseases are, and then went on to Bellevue to see some French boys whom we have been cheering, only to find that one of the nicest ones had just died. We took some of the lovely dark red roses and covered his winding sheet, a tribute to a noble French boy from America. The boy had been torpedoed in April and in the water for twenty-eight hours, and had never recovered from the cold.

"After distributing a few more roses to the boys, we went to the Naval Hospital, and on our way crossing a bridge, we saw a troop train halted to be refreshed by our canteen. We stopped to throw the boys some cigarettes we had with us, and one boy seeing the roses in my arm, begged for just one, which I gave him. This caused such a scramble among the others that I could not resist throwing them all one by one, till finally 200 boys wore a boutonniere. The pleasure the flowers gave these weary, travel-stained boys was immense, one boy taking and kissing his rose fervently. When we asked the boys where they came from, they told us California, and then we easily understood why the flowers meant so much to them. I realize that the flowers had not been given us for healthy, strapping boys such as these California boys were, but I know your committee of generous men would not feel I had misused my privilege in making these boys happy,—perhaps the last chance we would have of showing them an attention.

"I might add, that when we got to the Navy Yard, I told the boys in one word what we had done with their flowers, and tears came to one sick boy's eyes when he said, "Thank you for having given them to those boys—I come from California, and I am glad they got them. They may never have more."

Coal Order Modified.

Secretary John Young, of the Society of American Florists, telegraphed the following, July 17:

"Modification of coal order allowing 40 tons minimum has been accepted by the government."

American Carnation Society.

The above society has issued the proceedings of the twenty-seventh annual meeting which was held at Boston, Mass., January 30-31, 1918, together with the judge's report of awards at the annual exhibition, a list of new varieties registered with the society and a roll of members.

Cleveland Wholesalers Close Sundays.

The wholesale florists and supply houses of Cleveland will not be open Sundays after July 14, but will remain open Saturdays until 8 p. m. for the benefit of the trade. The notice is signed by the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., J. M. Gasser Co., Cleveland Florists' Exchange, W. Q. Potter Co. and the Cleveland Plant & Flower Co.

Florists' Hall Association.

The annual meeting of the Florists' Hall Association of America, will be held at Moolah Temple, St. Louis, Mo., at 9:00 o'clock a. m., August 21, 1918, for the purpose of electing four directors and the transaction of such other business as may come before the meeting.

JOHN G. ESLER, Sec'y.

Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The proceedings of the sixteenth annual meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, held at Cleveland, O., November 8, 1917, has been issued, included in its pages being President Vert's address, the reports of the secretary and the treasurer, list of prize winners and varieties at the annual exhibition, official scales, foreign varieties disseminated in 1917, a list of members of the society and a review of the work of the examining committees for the season.

MARKET GOOD FOR SEASON.

A good steady market with prices holding firm is about the best that we can report this week. Trade continues to hold up well in spite of the season, as a slump is generally in order at this time. Funeral work keeps the majority of the stores busy and there is a good demand for flowers of all kinds, and stock is scarce with prices holding firm. Some asters and gladioli are being received but not enough to meet requirements. There is still a good crop of roses coming in but they may not last long, although the weather, much to their advantage, has been cool and cloudy. Carnations are practically off the market. The outdoor offerings include sweet peas, calendulas, phlox, coreopsis, feverfews, baby's breath, cornflowers and pyrethrums. The new crop of green galax leaves is now being offered.

NOTES.

Mrs. E. A. Williams recently had a beautiful window which attracted much attention. The features were colored water lilies and maiden hair ferns arranged with flags of the Allies.

T. P. Langhans and family have returned from a trip to the northwest. He spent some time with his son, Oliver, who is in the government service in Oregon.

Joseph Schweiger, founder of the firm of Joseph Schweiger & Son, florists at the Allegheny market, and an old resident of this city, passed away recently.

Chrysanthemum plants in this section look very good, with indications of a large crop earlier than usual.

E. J. McCreary, B. L. Elliott and a party are making a motor tour of a number of the eastern cities.

Jack Frampton, of the Zeiger Co., is spending a two weeks vacation at his home in Clarion, Pa.

G. P. Weaklen is cutting some very fine larkspurs at his gardens at Springdale, Pa.

Mrs. B. L. Elliott is visiting her father in Oregon.

CLUB MEETING.

At the July meeting of the florists' club, held at the home of Frederick Goldring, Font Grove, President William Newport appointed a committee of four to inquire into ways and means to stimulate the use of flower boxes on the part of the local public. The committee is made up of the following: Edward P. Tracey, chairman; Frederick A. Danker, Fredrick Henkes, and John J. Haggerty. The committee was instructed to make a report at the August meeting. The action of President Newport followed a report of Frederick A. Danker on the flower boxes ordered by the club last April. Mr. Danker said that the boxes had been received and distributed among the retailers by whom many had been sold filled with plants. Mr. Danker in his report said it is possible greatly to stimulate the sale of boxes at other seasons than spring and summer. He suggested that the retailers could tell their customers that in the fall the boxes can be filled with evergreens, either on their own roots or as parts of limbs cut off from large trees. The value of the plan is that it keeps plants and flowers before the people at all seasons. The subject of whether the club is to hold a clam bake this year was brought up by James Snyder who said that the cost of such an entertainment this year would be very high and suggested a clam chowder be held instead. The idea found favor and a poll of the members present found an overwhelming majority for the plan and they also promised to attend the function and to pay the cost prorata. Walter Mott, representing Hammond's Slug Shot Works, Beacon, was present as a guest of the club and gave an account of his latest business trip. He said that the trade had enjoyed a good season, but the members were looking forward a little anxiously to the future on account of the coal situation and the questions that are arising on account of the war. He said that it is necessary to produce the goods the trade has to offer, but in order to do so, there must be some cooperative effort because of the scarcity of help, and for other reasons. Mr. Mott concluded his remarks by saying he believed that the grower or dealer in the smaller communities is better off than the man in the large city. Joseph Traudt of Canajoharie amused many of the members with a relation of his experiences the past year in burning coal. In the discussion on fuel into which the club entered after Mr. Mott's remarks, Mr. Traudt explained that last winter he had the use of a large amount of coal dust and sought advice from the local electric lighting plant experts as to the use of the fuel. They advised that he place a blower in his chimney. The blower, run by a two-horsepower motor, was installed with the result that the furnace burned the coal dust, but the blower drew all the heat out of the boiler. Mr. Traudt says he changed his plans, bought a smaller motor and placed the blowers under his three fire boxes. With one-eighth horse power, he said he was able to burn the dust in the three boilers quite satisfactorily. President Newport named Frederick A. Danker chairman of the club's exhibit committee, and added the name of George E. Nagengast, Jr., as a new member. The meeting was followed by a social hour with refreshments provided by the host. The next meeting, and clam chowder party, will be held on Saturday afternoon, August 17, at the home of Fred Henkes, Newtonville.

NOTES.

Recent visitors included John Young, secretary of the Society of American Florists; Walter Mott, and James J. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa. Mr. Young was here in the interests of the national publicity campaign and also to secure new members for the national organization. In both he was quite successful. Mr. Mott told his friends that he is living in Schenectady, and that his son, Walter C., who went to Camp Devens, Mass., last September was transferred in June to Camp Lee, Virginia, where he is in the officers' training camp as a member of the Second Company, Fifth Battalion, O. T. S. The young man is working hard and expects to earn a commission at the end of August. Mr. Mott said he has a son-in-law in the medical corp with the army in France.

Albanians are visiting Washington park these days to look at the two century plants, located on either side of the path north of the King fountain. The spike-like leaves of the two agaves are surmounted by stems perhaps 12 feet high, on which are small branches bearing the green buds that are ready to burst. The people have learned that the agaves are natives of Mexico and South America, and that the last specimen that bloomed hereabouts is believed to have been that which stood on the lawn of the Van Rensselaer manor house at Broadway and Pleasant street in 1870. The manor house was long since torn down and re-erected as a fraternity house at Williamstown, Mass.

The many friends of Louis H. Schaefer were sorry to learn that he had failed in business. Mr. Schaefer and his son, Henry, started a seed and implement business at 102 Hudson avenue about six years ago. The schedules filed with the clerk of the United States district court at Utica show liabilities, $11,918.28; assets, nominal, $3,522.45. Promissory notes and merchandise accounts compose the most of the liabilities. R. D.

DEMAND IS LIGHT.

The summer season is in full force, indicated by extremely quiet business, although trade is as good as other years, but there is room for improvement as quite a number of the homes are open this year on account of bad weather and heads of families being overseas. The market is overstocked with roses; nine and twelve inch stock is being sold as low as $10 a thousand and carnations $5 a thousand for good stock. Outdoor sweet peas are plentiful and hold well at $1.25 a hundred. There is an abundance of gladioli on the market including Beauty, Halley, America, Panama and Primulinus, which sell from 50 cents to $2 a dozen. Easter lilies are scarce, bringing $10 a hundred. Centaureas, sweet suitans, salpiglossis and coreopsis find a ready market.

NOTES.

At Carbone's business is quite active; a store where one finds unusual vases, pottery and baskets for the summer home, also windows well arranged with attractive baskets of flowers, shallow bowls for floating stemmed flowers, pond lilies, etc. Another star has been added to their service flag. Wm. O'Donnell, of the wholesale department is in the draft and reports at Camp Devens July 22.

At Carbone's, business is quite this week, one window is arranged as a duck farm, including a water mill with running water in a pond where 30 small ducks amuse a large gathering. The other window is arranged with large baskets and vases of Regale lilies, grown by R. & J. Farquhar & Co.

John J. Cassidy is spending a week's vacation at Atlantic City, going there as a delegate to the Elk's convention. His work at the store is carried on by his able assistant Fred Roberts. On his return, Mr. Roberts will start for a two weeks' vacation in the White Mountains with his family.

In the death of John Fee the Boston market loses one of the best and most noted bulb growers in the east. His greenhouses are to be carried on by his wife and daughter, with the assistance of Mr. Murphy, who has worked for Mr. Fee over 30 years.

The florists' and gardeners' club will hold its annual picnic at Cunningham park, East Milton, July 24. Everyone in the trade is invited. Baseball games and athletic events are on the program.

Herbert Capers, salesman at the Co-operative Market, is receiving daily shipments of Humboldtii bouvardia; also single pink and red bouvardia and carnations from John Foote.

Wm. Elliott is shipping to market a good crop of roses. Among the best are Victoria, Christy Miller, Ophelia, small pink roses and Cecile Brunner. Wm. Glidden, salesman for the Budlong Rose Co., is receiving large shipments each day of an assortment of roses which find ready buyers.

James Day, of Milford N. H., is sending to market hardy ferns, laurel boughs, pine sheet moss and sprays of hemlock.

Alonzo Hill, of Saco, Me., is shipping to this city several good varieties of pond lilies. S. K. G.

St. JOSEPH, Mo.—Frank Stuppy, of the Stuppy Floral Co., is on a fishing trip in the Wisconsin wilds.

BUSINESS CONTINUES GOOD.

Business continues to be good for July and the wholesalers nearly all report that the sales so far this month are considerably ahead of the those of the same period of last year. Stock is cleaning up nicely right along at good summer prices and no one is heard complaining of not being able to move his stock. Carnations are very scarce and command satisfactory prices considering the quality which is surprisingly good for this time of the year. Mrs. Chas. Russell roses are in brisk demand and easily hold their own. Columbia is a favorite with many of the buyers and continues to bring good prices. Double White Killarney is seen at one of the stores in quantity and finds ready buyers. Ophelia, Champ Weiland, Sunburst, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Killarney, Killarney Brilliant and White Killarney are in fair supply and the list of rose offerings also includes Milady, Montrose, Hoosier Beauty, Mrs. George Sawyer, My Maryland, Mrs. Bayard Thayer, Mrs. Moorfield Storey and the miniature varieties, Cecile Brunner, Nesbit, Elgar and Baby Doll. Gladioli and asters are more plentiful but are still commanding good prices and there is no great surplus at any time. Lilies are good property and the same holds true for orchids, lily of the valley and gardenias. American Beauty roses are to be had in limited supply, especially in the shorter stemmed grades, a few of the local growers starting to cut from their young stock. Gypsophila has made its appearance in quantity and is moving nicely. Sweet peas, calendulas, water lilies, daisies, feverfew, snapdragons, bachelor's buttons, coreopsis, galliardias, candytuft, phlox and other miscellaneous outdoor stock is to be had and figure largely in the window displays

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association was held at its wholesale establishment, 182 North Wabash Ave., Monday, July 15, at 3 p. m., when the following officers were re-elected: George Weiland, president; Charles McCauley, vice-president and treasurer, and Rudolph Ellsworth, secretary. Manager Paul Klingsporn was elected to the board of directors, consisting of the above named officers and Joseph Schoos. The stockholders were particularly well pleased with the progress made the past year ending June 30, when the total sales were the largest in the history of the firm.

D. S. Musser, of Miller & Musser, served in the Spanish-American war in what was known as the Porto-Rican campaign. He is commander of the Waldron-Murphy Camp No. 29 department of Illinois, U. S. W. V., which is keeping him pretty busy outside of his regular business hours. Chris Pederson, Frank Ayres, Julius Kline and several others in the trade were also with the colors during the Spanish-American war and are a pretty healthy looking bunch of fellows considering what they were up against in the fever zones at the time.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is more than pleased with its July business so far, which has been so surprisingly good compared to last year that there is no comparison. The roses are in splendid shape at Morton Grove and large steady cuts are promised all through the summer months. Mrs. Chas. Russell of fine quality are seen in quantity at this establishment.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. never experienced such a brisk early July business as this year, and report both the local and shipping trade are unusually brisk. This firm's efficient bookkeeper and cashier, Miss Charlotte Paradise, will leave soon to enjoy a well-earned vacation at Marquette, Mich. and surrounding country.

Zech & Mann are strong on roses in all leading varieties, especially Mrs. Chas. Russell, but there is never any left when the orders are filled for the day. Allie Zech is well pleased with business and if it keeps up the remainder of the month this July will be one of the best in the history of the firm.

Wietor Bros. have their usual fine supply of field-grown carnation plants to offer this season, which compare favorably in quality to those of last Peter Reinberg is in heavy crop with roses particularly Champ Weiland, which are reaching the store in splendid condition. This variety is making good at the Reinberg greenhouses and considerable bench space is now devoted to it.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting a good supply of American Beauty roses from new plants which are in brisk demand. Both the local and shipping trade at this house are unusually strong for July, compared to other years.

O. J. Friedman has returned from a pleasant vacation in Michigan where his family is spending the summer. Miss Nelson, of the Friedman staff, is vacationing at Atlantic City and Tom Fogarty is enjoying a two weeks' rest.

J. A. Budlong continues to cut heavily in Double White Killarney roses and has had plenty to supply all the customers with notwithstanding the general scarcity of this stock in this market.

Bob Newcomb, of the American Bulb Co., has returned after another highly satisfactory trip to the Pacific coast, reporting excellent business all through the west.

H. Van Gelder reports that the sales at the store of Percy Jones, Inc., on Monday, were unusually large, making it one of the best July days ever experienced.

FLORIST'S PLANTS. Such as Azaleas, Rhododendrons, etc., are imported into and consumed in the United States to the value of $2,000,000 per annum. The cost of production does not exceed 20% of the wholesale selling price.

JERSEY CATTLE. A pure bred high grade Jersey cow produces $120 to $180 per annum in butter fat. The highest grade cows produce $300 to $350 per annum. Cost of keeping such animals runs from $60.00 to $80.00 per annum. No high grade Jersey Calf sells for less than $100 and from that up to $500 to $600 each. Extra fine pedigreed Bulls sell at $1000 and sometimes $5000 each.

Climatic Conditions.

Nowhere in the world are climatic and soil conditions as favorable for producing bulbs, florist's plants and Jersey Cattle as the coastal region of Northern California, Oregon and Washington.

Bulbs and plants grown in this region are of much better quality than those produced in any other part of the world. The costs of production and selling are less and the quality is superior in every respect.

The cost of producing butter fat will average 20 cents per pound less than in the colder parts of the United States and the quality is unexcelled and Humboldt County butter sells for the highest market price.

A United States Embargo on all bulb and plant importations from foreign countries will secure the entire American market to American producers and is a cogent reason why a great industry in growing these articles should be built upon the Pacific Coast.

There is abundant opportunity for the profitable investment of several million of dollars of Capital in such enterprises and this should be American Capital managed by American brains and energy and these industries should be distinctively American Industries.

THE COTTAGE GARDENS NURSERIES is an American concern controlled by American capital and managed wholly by Americans.

Its new issue of stock now being placed on the market affords an opportunity for the safe investment of $200,000 of American Capital which will earn the highest rate of dividend of any American Industrial Stock and this dividend will be permanent, in fact will increase after the war is over.

On January 1st the price will be increased to $150 per share.

You can invest now at $100 per share.

Fill out the attached subscription form and mail it with 20% of the amount you wish to subscribe for and mail it to the address below.

SUMMER DULLNESS ARRIVES.

During the past week conditions assumed a typical summer aspect. General business has dropped off but funeral work continues heavy. Rose and carnation stock is of fair quality. Garden flowers are readily substituting inside stock. Outside gladioli (the earlier varieties) and sweet peas are coming into the market with a good demand.

NOTES.

Summer window displays are prevalent in the retail stores. These always are a pleasure to the eye. Among others Holm & Olson have devoted their large plant window to a miniature rustic scene with a four-foot water fall, electrically illuminated. The stream leads the eye through miniature rocky dells and canyons. Well-wooded islands abound and the lakes in miniature are well stocked with brilliant gold fish. A rocky ledge seven feet high affords the background for this picturesque setting, among which are scattered varied colored crotons, ferns, etc. Onlookers are constantly present before this window display.

The Warrendale Floral Co., under these trying times reports a 50 per cent increase in business the past year. This unusual increase is due to well grown specials which this firm has adopted. A ready market is found for such stock as fancy snapdragons, stocks, sweet peas, calendulas, etc. This should be a good demonstration to the growers who are still trying to produce an as-etc., and not confining themselves to any well grown special line.

The fuel situation is the principal topic of interest to the growers, and all are making preparations to let a portion of their range remain idle a part of the winter.

Rochester, Minn., spent Monday calling on his old friends in the trade.

The Snelling Floral Co. is busy building a large, new house to grow a fall crop of chrysanthemums, then planting to violets to force in the spring.

Ludwig Anderson recently acquired some good advertising in the Dugan case as he was the florist that sold the flowers in that affair.

Henry Puvogel reports business good considering the conditions. He has had a good season. C. R. F.

SUMMER NO DETRIMENT TO BUSINESS.

Midsummer weather has had no detrimental effect on the flower business; as this has been the best July week on record, due mainly to the big demand for funeral work. A number of moderate sized weddings added to the big demand for flowers. Stock has been scarce. Easter lilies proved to be life-savers in many cases, especially for funeral clusters. Hydrangea arborescens were used in large numbers, and although the supply of gladioli has increased substantially during the past week, there was no surplus in this line. Roses are in moderate supply, with Columbia, fast gaining in popularity.

NOTES.

The New Haven Floral Co. is cutting some fine Ophelia, Sawyer, the new rose, Columbia, and a good quantity of White Killarney. Two houses of chrysanthemums, which were planted the middle of May, are already showing buds, and they expect to be cutting Golden Glow by the latter part of August.

Frank J. Knecht reports business fine, with not half enough stock with which to meet the big demand. He is cutting excellent Russell and Shawyer roses. Walter Knecht, a son, has been called to service in the National army, and will leave for Camp Taylor, Louisville, Ky., July 25.

The Flick Floral Co. reports trade for the week very satisfactory, with gladioli and roses leading in the demand. Transplanting on a large scale is being done at the greenhouses, new benches are being built, and the houses generally renovated.

The store force worked all day at A. J. Lanternier's, Sunday, making up funeral work. Corsages met with a good demand here. Some fine gladioli and Shasta daisies are specialties.

Edgar Wenninghoff is showing fine Russell roses and hardy phlox. Funeral work has made heavy inroads upon the stock here.

The Freese Floral Co. is showing some fine Columbia roses and gladioli. They report a daily clean-up in all lines of stock.

The Doswell Floral Co. is having its share of funeral work and weddings. This firm is showing some fine outdoor asters.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey are cutting some fine roses for this season, and outdoor asters are coming in in large numbers. H. K.

Cincinnati.

ACTIVE DEMAND AT GOOD PRICES.

The demand is steady and active, but there is not enough stock to go around and everything that comes in to the market cleans up readily. Prices are good and are higher than they were. Roses are very scarce. The carnation cut has shortened greatly. Those that do arrive are proving good property and are selling readily. Gladioli are a little more plentiful than they were, but more of them could be used if they were available. The lily supply has shown a substantial increase during the past week. All that arrive meet with a good demand. Rubrums are fairly plentiful. Other offerings include snapdragons and

THE BOOK OF GLADIOLUS

THE first authoritative book on this bulb ever printed in America, or possibly the world, issued April 1, 1911. This 120-page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating, storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

SPHAGNUM MOSS

$2.50 per bale; 6 bales for $13.50. This is the time of the year you should stock up in moss for next season. THE LEO NIESSEN CO., Wholesale Florists 1201-5 Race St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Philadelphia.

STOCK SHOWING FINE CONDITION.

Conditions continue, as far as demand, much the same as last week; not quite so much doing and more stock, but nevertheless, a very good summer business. The quality of stock for the season, has never been better, some say, take it all through, never as good. Easter lilies sell at sight, there not being enough for the demand. The cool weather, which by the way, is almost record breaking, for low July temperature, brings them along slowly, giving them a splendid size and finish. Prima Donna is giving Russell a run for first place at this time, proving it to be all right for summer. Its sporty sister, September Morn, is not so good. Ophelia, Victory, Shawyer and Mrs. Ward are all seen in fair shape. There are still a few good carnations, but they are on the wane. They still bring record-breaking prices for the season. The cool weather suits the sweet peas, which are often down and out by this time. They have brought good money. The Hydrangea arborescens is about out. H. paniculata is now showing buds of good size which will be in a couple of weeks. Outdoor asters are being rushed in to help out the scarcity, but growers should hold them for another week, as most of the stock is only half open. Gladioli in good varieties are now coming in from local growers, so that in another week the scarcity of flowers will be about over. It is still possible to get lily of the valley. It is really astonishing how those old pips hold out. Cattleyas are a trifle more plentiful.

FERNS.

Growers who have a stock of ferns of the Boston type coming on, should be able to cash in handsomely the coming fall and winter, as the stock of young plants for growing is practically exhausted all over the country. Plants in large sizes that are scraggy and old, can, if carefully divided, be planted out on tables and will make pretty fair clumps by November. They should not be torn apart, but the ball divided from the bottom of the pot or pan with a good sized knife, up to within an inch of the top, when they can then be loosened and pulled apart without breaking the crowns. Gather all the old stock together and fill up that empty house. It will not require much care except the watering, and be potted up and sold before danger from frost.

CARNATIONS.

Samuel Lilley is a carnation expert. His knowledge began with their sale over the retail store counter. Later, as a wholesale dealer, he obtained another angle, and finally when he founded the Chalfonte Carnation Co. and erected two large houses he was initiated into the intricacies of their production. "That hot spell in May cooked the crop, for many growers, who did not take the precaution to whitewash their glass," he reports. "We saved ours and have had the best summer cut and received better prices than ever before. We are now commencing to replant from the field, but slowly, taking out one bench at a time, so as to get all we can out of the old plants while the flowers are in such good demand."

WITH THE WHOLESALEERS.

"A good summer business, but they do not throw it at us like they did for the past week or two," is the way Stuart Miller of the Philadelphia Wholesale Florists Exchange puts it. High grade gladioli, a good assortment of roses and sweet peas are leading stocks. "Stock in all lines is scarce. The demand is a little better than last year; because we have so much trouble to secure flowers we seem busier than we really are," is the Berger Bros. report. Snapdragons, Maryland roses and carnations are prominent here.

"We have a steady demand for all good stock. We are handling a lot of Easter lilies, but could sell many more." This is the report of the Leo Niessen Co. Gladioli, asters and roses were features of their large stock.

The Jos. Heacock Co. is selling out clean every day. That house of the new rose, Columbia, is looking very well. They will not cut from this until early fall.

NOTES.

The Jos. G. Neidinger Co. is making preparations for a good fall trade. invite business. The men who let their stock run down, will surely lose out.

Wm. Potter, federal fuel administrator for Pennsylvania, July 13, issued instructions to all county chairmen in the state authorizing them to exempt all greenhouse establishments, using not more than 40 tons of coal a year from the previous ruling which restricted each house to 50 per cent of its annual requirements.

The King construction Co. has closed its Philadelphia branch office in the Harrison building. Wm. J. Muth, who has directed this business so efficiently since the office was opened, will manage his own affairs for the present.

Robert Craig is proud of their large blocks of cvclaments, which are looking fine. Ten young women are now doing very satisfactory work in the greenhouses at Norwood, replacing men who have gone into war industries.

H. Bayersdorfer is afraid that many customers will wake up too late; the time to stock up with all staple goods is right now. In every line there is an increasing scarcity. The summer business is excellent.

John Westcott reports fishing at Barnegat is nothing to brag about, the weather being too cool for the weak fish to be running good. K.

Providence, R. I.

GOOD SUPPLY OF HIGH QUALITY.

The stock seen in this market at present is very satisfactory, very little of inferior quality being received, with the supply equal to an unusually heavy demand during the past week owing to numerous funeral orders and cut flower sales. Lilies are fine but somewhat scarce. Carnations are also limited in supply and the quality grades poor. In sweet peas, the outdoor stock was never better with long stems and large flowers. Gladioli are on the short side and prices are good. From all reports the month of June was excellent for business.

NOTES.

J. Kopelman & Co. and M. J. Leach have the best offerings in carnations seen in this vicinity, although the supply is about at an end.

T. J. Johnston & Co. have rearranged the lighting of their window, the clusters instead of one unit showing to excellent advantage.

The S. S. Kresge Co. has permanently discontinued its flower department.

BUSINESS CONTINUES QUIET.

Business has been very quiet since the Fourth of July; even funeral work, which is about all the retail stores have to depend on at this season, has been light. The supply of roses has not been heavy, but there has been more than enough to supply the demand. In special American Beauties, a few sales have been higher than the rate of $25 per 100, but as a whole they have not averaged that figure, the demand being light with considerable poor stock. Although but a limited supply of the new rose, Columbia, is on the market, it is winning golden opinions. It is known to be a fine pink and does not fade, and the special stock arriving has good stems and clean foliage. Retailers report that it is a fine keeper. At this season, Mrs. Chas. Russell is the ranking pink rose among the older varieties, but the indications now are that Columbia will greatly exceed it in productiveness. Ophelias continue to arrive in considerable quantity and are yet popular. On account, we assume, of the cold nights of June, considerable mildew is noticed in roses. Cattleyas continue scarce and C. gigas wholesale at the rate of $1 per flower. The volume of the aster crop, if there is to be any volume, has not arrived though there are scattered lots of fair stock. Another week is likely to greatly increase the supply and finish the carnations, though it must be acknowledged that the latter have been "stayers" this season. The most noteworthy increase in stock during the past week has been in gladioli. Everybody has them, and we judge that this is only the beginning, as America and Panama are yet to come. Pink Beauty has been on the market for several weeks and are good, as are other varieties, but with the light demand for all stocks, it is particularly hard to clean up on gladioli. In addition, to a good supply of sweet peas, delphiniums and minor stocks, there is on the market—strictly speaking on the curbs—a considerable supply of flowering weeds, which the inquisitorial "collectors" always manage to find at this season of the year. The boys, or young men, who in former years peddled flowers on the streets, have this year been put out of business by the draft and the state law. The retailers, who always considered them a nuisance, do not seem to have been greatly benefited by their elimination, while the wholesalers actually miss them as a help to cleaning up.

July 15.—There is some call for flowers this morning. The celebration of "Bastille day" is being continued, which helps out on red, white and blue flowers. In this connection it may be stated that over zealous people have been writing to the newspapers and condemning the use of cornflowers (Centaurea cyanus), because, they say, it is the Kaiser's flower. As the Kaiser has already claimed the earth and the fullness thereof, it is not worth while to argue over a little blue flower; but we will state that the visiting French soldiers do not consider it a German flower as they placed a bunch of them on the late Major Mitchell's coffin. There is an increased supply of outdoor stock on the market, such as marigolds, phlox, cut hydrangeas, and hardy pinks.

NOTES.

A fishing party, composed of prominent florists, left 28th street for the fishing grounds on the morning of July 16. In the party were: C. H. Totty, William Duckham, J. S. Fenrich, John Donaldson, Alexander Donaldson, John Miesem and C. W. Scott. At this writing the results of the trip cannot be stated. Friends have been somewhat uneasy for fear their craft might be blown off to the submarine infested zone, but are partly reassured by the reflection that they probably took a good supply of "depth charges" with them.

George Golsner, a well known grower of College Point, and member of the Cut Flower Exchange, was injured in an automobile accident on the morning of July 15, how seriously has not yet been determined. He was on his way to market, accompanied by his son, when, as near as we can learn, something went wrong with the steering gear of the machine, which swerved and struck a pole. Mr. Golsner was cut about the head and face and was taken to a hospital.

Phil Ditzenberger, foreman, and Miss Mabel Conkling, bookkeeper for H. E. Froment of 148 West 28th street, are both on vacation, and between filling both positions, doing his own work, and attending patriotic celebrations, he is a very busy man. Though a New Yorker by birth, he came of good French stock, and it was but natural that he should attend the great celebration of the Fall of the Bastille, held in Madison Square Garden on the night of July 14.

James Dean, of Freeport, N. Y., prominent in the profession for many years, past president of the Society of American Florists and also of the New York Florists' Club, died at his home, July 16. Further particulars will be found in the obituary column.

John Howell, who for the past eight years has been a valued and popular employee of the Noe department of the New York Cut Flower Co., was married on the evening of July 13 to Miss Katherine M. May at the home of the bride's parents, Elizabeth, N. J.

Mr. Meles, salesman for Roman J. Irwin, is back at business after a serious illness of three months' duration, but he is now all right. Roman J. says he is too busy to attend the St. Louis convention.

We are pleased to learn that James McHutchison, who is on vacation, is improved in health. C. B. Knickman, of the firm, is on the road, and F. C. Harrison is in charge of the office.

George Meyer, shipping clerk for the Kervan Co., has returned from a two weeks' vacation, spent at Atlantic City, which he thoroughly enjoyed.

Jack Gunther, of Gunther Brothers, 110 West 28th street, is spending his week ends at his cottage at Midland Beach, Staten Island.

Jno J. Foley, for a number of years a retailer at 230 the Bowery, is now with the Colonial Florist at Broadway and 15th street.

Traendly & Schenck are receiving from Robert Simpson, of Clifton, N. J., fine stock of the new rose, Columbia.

The United Cut Flower Co., 111 West 24th street, is receiving good carnations of the old variety, Victory.

Joseph A. Millang, of the Pierson department of the New York Cut Flower Co., is on his vacation.

Reidel & Meyer, 49 West 28th street, are receiving a fine quality of gladioli and asters.

Frank H. Traendly and family are summering on their farm at Rowayton, Conn.

FRAT-M'S GET BUSINESS

WHAT ARE THEY?

They are the different Fraternal Emblems fancifully and artistically embossed in gold on 4-inch heavy paper circles.

HOW ARE THEY USED?

The gummed backs are attached to chiffon, ribbon, door sprays, sprays, pillows, wreaths, casket covers or any floral piece.

WHAT ARE THE ADVANTAGES IN THEIR USE?

They save time, freight, express, space and expense of fraternal wire designs. Any Fraternal Order can give a floral piece of any price, and yet convey the fraternal spirit by the use of FRAT-M. Fraternal Orders are buying them to place on the door badges of deceased members. FRAT-M'S will get you some of the millions of dollars that fraternal orders are spending annually.

WHAT DO THEY COST?

They cost you 20c each or $2.00 per dozen, cash with order. An order of two dozen will get the exclusive use of FRAT-M'S for you for one year if you live in a town of less than 25 000 population. The put you ahead of the "Come and Get Me" competition and create no end of favorable comment.

WOMAN'S FIELD OF LABOR DEFINED.

Resolutions embodying the government's attitude toward the employment of women in industry have been adopted by the war labor policies board of the department of labor.

"The existing shortage of labor, aggravated daily by the military and naval demands of the government which require a greatly increased production of war materials, and at the same time the withdrawal from civilian occupations of about a quarter of a million additional recruits each month, necessitates widespread recourse to the labor of women in the United States," points out the board in its resolutions.

"In order that their services may be fully utilized and their working power conserved, a clearly defined policy is needed which shall determine what kinds of work women should perform, how they should best be introduced, under what conditions they should be employed, and what work should be prohibited."

War industries should be met in part by the shortage of labor in essential by further introducing women into occupations easily filled by them," continues the board, "such as clerical and cashier services, sales clerks and similar work in mercantile establishments, including, among others, department stores and florists' shops."

NOTES.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Boigiano, Washington, D. C., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-seventh annual meeting will be held June, 1919.

A NEW infection of onion sets called soft stem has appeared.

LETTUCE seed crop is reported short and the price likely to advance.

A. J. BROWN, Grand Rapids, Mich., is rejoicing in the arrival of a granddaughter July 10.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. J. Pieters, of the seed bureau, department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.

CARL CROPP, JR., of Chicago, now en-sign in the Transport and Convoy Service, is at home on furlough.

TRIMBLE McCULLOUGH, of Cincinnati, O., recently passed through Chicago, enroute to Sacramento, Calif.

KAFFIR CORN prices have advanced materially on account of drought on the Pacific coast and in the northwest.

CALIFORNIA onion seed in spite of damage by heat will likely sack above a normal crop. Flat yellows seem least plentiful.

SWEET PEAS, at Watsonville, Calif., have done well this season and will afford a good yield, but elsewhere in the state the aphid appears to have made a clean sweep of the plants.

SEPTEMBER flax selling at $4.70 in Duluth represents the effect of dry weather in the northwest, particularly in Montana, as well as restriction of imports from Argentina. On the first of the month, the highest point was $3.92.

TOLEDO, O.—December clover gained 40 cents July 15, closing at $14.15. Cash timothy was five cents higher, at the following prices: Cash, $4.35; September, $4.90; October, $4.50; December, $4.52½; March, $4.70; April, $4.55.

VISITED CALIFORNIA: Recent visitors included Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; Geo. C. Thompson, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn.; Arthur L. Deal, of W. W. Johnson & Son, Boston, Eng.; W. A. Wheeler, Bureau of Markets, Dept. of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—W. D. Fraser, for the past year sales manager of the Aggeler & Musser Seed Co., Inc., who has been identified with the trade on the Pacific coast for 10 years and is also well known in the East, is now in the United States service, stationed at Camp Kearney, Calif.

It is thought too many American grown vegetable seeds have been exported to alleged neutral countries this year. Steps should be taken with regard to the coming crop that will insure their delivery into only friendly hands. So far as known, neither Denmark nor Holland have permitted vegetable seeds to come this way, and the conclusion is inevitable that their usual surpluses have gone to enemy countries.

ONE hundred pound containers of 10-ounce burlap or jute sacking, such as are used for exporting peas or beans, are now selling at 32 cents.

Bermuda Onion Seed in Southwest.

Recommending that American seed growers should supply the home demand for Bermuda onion seed, the United States department of agriculture states that it may be profitably grown in certain regions of the southwestern United States.

In 1916, the United States imported from Teneriffe, Canary Islands, about 75,000 pounds of Bermuda onion seed. The usual retail price is from $2 to $2.50 a pound, though in years of scarcity the price has gone as high as $6 a pound. Until recently this country produced no Bermuda onion seed at all; and though good yields of the seed have been obtained at Laredo, Tex., the yield has not been wholly dependable from year to year. While in 1916 and the past year considerable California-grown Bermuda seed has been offered to the trade, the importance of producing a supply of seed from carefully selected mother bulbs was given special prominence by the results obtained through work of the department of agriculture, begun at Sacaton, Ariz., in 1913 and 1914.

A few years ago the bureau of plant industry co-operated with the office of Indian affairs in an experimental growing of Bermuda onion seed on the Pima Indian reservation at Sacaton, Ariz., and the results show that there, and in similar localities, reliable supplies of onion seed, equal to the best imported from Teneriffe, can be grown. It is further stated by the department of agriculture that seed from carefully selected stock has been uniformly superior to the run of imported Bermuda seed, since onion growers in the Coachella valley of California have achieved results similar to those at Sacaton.

The department states that it feels justified in saying that the American demand can soon be supplied with home-grown seed. Furthermore, the home seed when grown from mother bulbs of carefully selected strains promises a 25 per cent better yield than that from the imported seed. In 1917, the Bermuda onion crop of the United States, largely from Texas, was nearly 3,000,000 crates. An increase of one-fourth means, therefore, says the department, that the incentive for a home-grown seed industry goes far beyond the mere question of replacing the volume of imported seed with an equal quantity raised at home.

Corn and Vine Seed Crops.

Fremont, Neb., July 12, 1918. The acreage and condition of sweet corn, so far as reported, is fair to good; the plantings being a little short on Golden Bantam, Burpee's First of All, White Cory, Champion Early, Early Minnesota, Shaker's Early, Potter's Excelsior and ZigZag Evergreen, while it was impossible to obtain any acreage of Premo and Howling Mob. Providing the balance of the season, however, is favorable, it is hoped to be able to fill requirements for other varieties in full. As to field corn, white and yellow dent acreage is limited, owing to insufficient stocks of high test planting seed and a scarcity is looked for in choice named varieties. The acreage of white and yellow flints is limited for the same reason, and there may be a shortage of King Philip, Vick's Genesee Valley and Angel of Midnight, with possibly small surplus stocks of other varieties.

There is very little cucumber acreage, and it is estimated there will be a shortage of Chicago Pickling, Vaughan's Arlington White Spine, Klondike White Spine, Cumberland, New Davis Perfect, New Century, Fordhook Famous, Improved Long Green and Long Green Turkey. There may be a limited surplus of a few varieties. In muskmelon, it is believed there will be a shortage of Extra Early Hackensack, Emerald Gem, Surprise, Montreal Market and Garden Lemon. It was impossible to place any acreage whatever of Large Early Hackensack, Prolific Nutmeg, Extra Early Green Citron, Osage, Long Yellow Cantaloupe, Hoodoo, Burpee's Champion Market, Long Island Beauty and Paul Rose, and it is a question whether it will be possible to furnish any of these varieties. Watermelon is fairly well covered with good prospects, excepting Colorado Green Seed Citron. Pumpkin is also in good shape with the exception of Connecticut Field, one 50-acre crop of which may have been destroyed by frosts, although there have been no reports thus far to that effect. It is understood, however, this crop is in one of the districts affected by frost. June 23. Summer squash is fairly well covered, but few reports have been received to date. Winter varieties are also well placed and good reports have been received thus far. Quite a large acreage, however, remains to be heard from. Boston Marrow, Early Prolific Marrow and a fairly good acreage of Golden Hubbard are mainly in the district visited by frost on the above date. Gourds are generally short, it being impossible to obtain any acreage.

Danish Seeds.

Inasmuch as the United States government will not allow importation into Denmark of any of the most needed American grown seed, such as cannot be produced in that country, the Danish government is holding back and not granting any export permits until further arrangements are made, according to a representative of the Danish seed trade in this country. It is said, however, that the Danish government has a commission of five men in Washington at present, and it is hoped the negotiations may result favorably.

Fertilizers Should Be Bought Early.

The United States department of agriculture is urging the placing of orders for fertilizers at once, as it is necessary that manufacturers and dealers know farmers' needs as soon as possible in order that car space can be used to the best advantage by combining shipments. The use of 200-pound sacks is also being urged by the department in order to conserve burlap, bring about a more economical distribution of fertilizers and effect a saving to the farmer.

Flaxseed Prices Higher.

Minneapolis—Prices of $4.16 to $4.18 for cash flaxseed in Minneapolis resulted from persistence of dry weather in northern Montana, western North Dakota and especially the Goose Lake region of Saskatchewan, where there is a heavy Canadian acreage. The general feeling is that unless rains come soon recent estimates will have to be lowered materially.

New Early-Flowering or Winter-Blooming GIANT PANSIES

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering and its unusual hardiness, which enables them to withstand quite severe Winters and to bloom right on into the Summer. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant.

14. WINTER SUN. Golden yellow eye. 16. CELESTIAL QUEEN. Light or sky blue.
15. ICE KING. Silvery white, with eye. 17. CHARM OF MARCH. Dark velvety blue.
18. MIXED. The above four colors with other shades and variations. Each color separate or mixed.
500 seeds, 25c; 1000 seeds, 40c; $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., \$1.10; $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., \$2.00; oz., \$7.50.

Acreages Contracted for Canning.

From reports received from a number of firms by the United States department of agriculture, acreages contracted in 1918 as compared with 1917 were as follows: Tomatoes, 143,292 as against 138,093; corn, 161,320 as compared with 159,373; peas, 87,338 against 84,547; beans, 7,608 as compared with 7,111.

Canners' Credits Increase Sought.

An effort is being made through the federal reserve system to increase credits available to the canning industry, according to a recent bulletin issued by the reserve board. Food Administrator Hoover has estimated that $50,000,000 in addition to their usual capital will be needed by the canners to carry forward the large output until the realizing period next year.

Sweet Potato Seed Selection.

The United States department of agriculture advises that sweet potato seed be selected in the fall when the disease-free hills can be located while digging. Proper storage facilities should also be provided and to this end Farmers' Bulletin No. 548 has been issued by the department. Information regarding sweet potato diseases is contained in Farmers' Bulletin 714.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, July 16.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $1.10; celery, crate, 75 cents; head lettuce, per box, 25 cents; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.00; tomatoes, 4 baskets, 80 cents to $1.00.
New York, July 15.—Celery (state), per bunch, 35 to 75 cents; cucumbers, 10 to 50 cents per dozen; mushrooms, 40 cents to $2.00 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 10 to 12 cents; lettuce, per package, 25 cents to $2.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, 50 cents to $1.00.

Vegetable and Fruit Market.

Carlot movement of leading lines of produce continued at a fairly steady rate during the period July 9-15. Shipments of early potatoes were liberal at about the average of preceding weeks. Prices are irregular and about on a par with last week. Virginia Cobblers held steady at about $4.25 per barrel at Norfolk. Kentucky Cobblers ranged $2.80-$3 per 100 pounds at Louisville. Southern and southwestern Bliss Triumphs were firm at $2.75-$3 per 100 pounds sacked, appearing in but few markets. The onion movement continued moderate. Yellow held generally in the larger markets at $1.75-$2 per crate; California stock, $2.75-$3.25 per 100 pounds and Virginia stock $1.50-$1.75 per bushel hamper. Kentucky onions sold at $3.50 in New York. In consuming markets, Tennessee tomatoes, 4's, ranged steady at $1.15-$1.25. New Jersey stock brought $2-$3 in New York. Delaware and Virginia are still shipping cucumbers liberally. The cabbage movement is again increasing in northern shipping sections.

The movement of watermelons from Georgia continued heavy, Texas and South Carolina were also heavy shippers. Prices ranged lower than last week. Cantaloupe prices showed a firm tendency with a general average of 25 cents higher in consuming markets. While the Georgia peach movement is rapidly nearing its end other sections shipped in considerable volume. In northern markets prices were generally higher. The apple movement increased with Illinois and New Jersey leading.

Potato Seed Fallacy Ending.

For years it has been the aim of potato growers to plant only "northern grown" seed, the supposition being that potatoes grown in a colder climate were more hardy and more vigorous in germination than those grown where it is warmer. But "northern grown" has always been more or less meaningless, for what was northern grown for one region was home grown for another.

The reason for the superiority of northern grown seed seems to be not a matter of climate at all and under proper conditions of planting and culture a farmer can produce on his own field seed as good as any. It will also make it possible for the farmer to prepare his seed leisurely and still begin planting early, instead of having to wait until all danger of frost in transit was past before having his seed shipped.

In a recent lecture, Professor Frank J. App, of the New Jersey College of Agriculture, told of the success potato farmers in his state were having with the new idea of saving seed, the secret of the virility of northern grown seed not being due primarily to the latitude or the climate in which they are grown but in the fact that the season being short, the frost kills the vines before the tubers are fully matured. It has been found that a potato, when it becomes fully ripe, loses much of its germinating vitality and while the last few weeks of its growth greatly improves it for table use, its progeny are much more likely to be weaklings.

To get the best home seed, Jersey growers make a separate planting of the best and most hardy tubers they can find in their stock. Their potatoes for market are put into the ground as soon as it can be worked easily in the spring, and are allowed to ripen fully, not being dug until several weeks after the vines are dead, the tubers seasoned, and the skins dry and toughened. The seed plot is not planted until early July, so that frost catches the vines, kills them off, and stops growth just when the immature tubers are at the height of their vigor. The potatoes from this seed plot are specially stored and cared for, and are not only used for general seeding but for planting the seed plot the next season.

Added to Professor App's testimony regarding the success of the new method in New Jersey, came almost the same day a description of a method nearly identical, practiced by Lon D. Sweet of Colorado, recognized as one of the foremost potato growers in America, and advisor to Food Administrator Hoover on all questions regarding potato culture. Describing his method, Mr. Sweet said that he had come to know that to improve a potato, the principles of selection in vogue among live stock men must be adopted. He began by selecting from the best producing fields potatoes true to type and smooth.

These were planted whole, early in July, in beds prepared with the greatest care, in rows 30 inches apart and hills 10 inches apart. "When frost kills the vines in our seed plots, usually about the middle of September," he continued, "the potatoes in the hills are about the size of a hen's egg. When the vines have reached their growth and their strength begins to go down into the tubers at their roots, it is a very easy matter to detect diseased plants and those that are run-outs. When we find them we pull them up, vines and potatoes, and destroy them or feed them to our pigs. We select the best seed from this plot for the seed plot the following year."

Prunus Incisa.

This shrub has bloomed in the arboretum every spring for three or four years but has never been as full of flowers or as beautiful as it has been during the present week. This cherry is a native of Japan and is abundant on the eastern and southern slopes of Fuji-san and on the Hakone mountains. It is a large shrub or under favorable conditions a small tree 25 or 30 feet high; the flowers appear before the deeply cut leaves in drooping clusters; their calyx is bright red; the petals are white or occasionally tinged with rose color, and the anthers are bright yellow. The petals fall early but the calyx, which gradually grows brighter in color, remains for some time on the young fruit and is showy. Prunus incisa has been perfectly hardy here and none of the flower-buds were injured by the cold of last winter. It has the advantage, too, of flowering while still a small shrub. This cherry has remained rare in American and European gardens and appears to be still little known.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, May 9, 1918.

War Economy.

We have heard a good deal of war economies of late, but think one to hand beats the record so far. A customer wrote to a firm of nurserymen to name an apple for him. He pared and kept the apple, sending the peel for identification. We think this will take a little beating—for a true tale.—Hort. Advertiser.

The London Plane.

PLATANUS ACERIFOLIA.

There are only two planes with which this one can be confused. One of these, the American Platanus occidentalis, is distinguished by almost invariably having but one "ball" of fruits on each string; P. acerifolia has up to four or five. The "ball" of fruits is also much rougher and more burr-like in P. acerifolia than in P. occidentalis. More nearly allied to P. acerifolia is the oriental plane (P. orientalis). This has also a string of several "balls", rough and burr-like as in P. acerifolia, but it differs very much in foliage, which is deeply five-lobed, each lobe reaching half way to the midrib, and being of narrow or lanceolate shape, whereas the lobes in P. acerifolia are shallow and triangular. The trees are also different in habit: P. acerifolia forms a tall, clean trunk; P. orientalis a short, thick, rougher one.

DESCRIPTION OF P. ACERIFOLIA.—A deciduous tree frequently over 100 feet high with a tall trunk five to eight feet in thickness from which, as well as from the larger branches, the bark peels off in flakes. In old trees the extremities of the branches become pendulous. Leaves of the typical maple form, five inches to one foot in diameter, of rather hard membranous texture, covered when young with a thick layer of brown wool, which nearly all wears off by autumn. Leaf-stalk, one to four and a half inches long. Fruit-balls about one and a half inches diameter, globose, usually from two to five on a string-like, pendulous stalk.

This plane is the best of all trees for smoky cities. Even in the centre of London it thrives well, growing in paved streets. It loves the heat and succeeds much better in the south of England than in the damper, less sunny parts of the British Isles, like Scotland and Ireland. It will bear intense winter cold so long as it has sufficient summer sun to thoroughly ripen it. Probably its success in London is largely due to the baking it gets in July and August from heat reflected from pavements, etc. W. J. B.

Narcissi and Jonquils for Cut Flowers.

Will you kindly inform me as to the most desirable and profitable varieties of narcissi and jonquils for cut flowers? Also, a few words of instruction regarding the purchase of the bulbs, their culture, and when to lift them.

Indiana.

H. C. S.

Presuming that you mean, by the term jonquil, the yellow daffodil often seen labeled in our florists' windows under the term jonquil, but incorrectly so, we class these under the head of narcissi, which they really are. The true jonquil is a distinct variety of narcissus, but is not largely grown for cut flower sales.

The following daffodils or narcissi are recommended for outdoor growing or for forcing under glass:

Single large trumpet varieties—Emperor, Golden Spur, Princess, Empress, Trumpet Major, Victoria.

Small trumpet varieties—Sir Watkin, Barri Conspicuous, Cynosure, Mrs. Langtry, Duchesse of Westminster, Poeticus (common), Poeticus Ornatus.

Polyanthus or bunch-flowered varieties (for growing under glass only)—Paper White narcissus, Double Roman narcissus, Soliel d'Or narcissus.

Double daffodils or narcissi—Von Sion, Double Incomparabilis, Double Poeticus.

Jonquils (true)—Can be had in both single and double forms.

Brief cultural notes (indoors): The bulbs are usually planted during September and October in wooden flats, two or three inches apart, barely covering the bulbs. Sandy loam is to be preferred, fairly rich, with an inch or two of rotted manure in the bottom of each flat. Pots may also be used. Plunge these receptacles outside in sand or coal ashes, completely covering them, and allow them to stand for six or eight weeks, so that roots may be formed while bulbs are resting. Bring inside in batches as required and place underneath the benches in a temperature of about 45°. After six weeks or so, or when flower spikes are well advanced, they may be removed to a temperature of 55°, or even 60°. Usually, a few days before cutting they are again removed to a cool temperature, to harden off, as it were.

Outdoor culture: Thoroughly spade up the ground to a depth of 8 or 10 inches; turn under a layer of rotted manure to a depth of six inches; make up into beds four or five feet wide, and plant the bulbs four to six inches apart and cover to a depth of four or five inches. The manure should be an inch or two underneath the bulbs. Bone manure is also recommended, raked into the beds before planting, a handful to a square yard or about 500 pounds to the acre. Plant the bulbs during October and November, covering the finished beds with a litter of dry leaves, straw or strawy manure. This litter must be removed in early spring as the bulbs begin to break through.

Harvesting the bulbs: The bulbs may be lifted when the foliage has partly or entirely turned yellow. Lifting usually commences in early June, and the bulbs are placed immediately in a cool cellar or barn. They should not be exposed to excessive sun heat, as this is injurious. Spread them out on trays or shelves until they have thoroughly dried, when the roots and withered tops may be removed and the old skin taken off. The bulbs are then replaced on the shelves or in shallow trays, and the latter can be piled up one over the other, placing a 2-inch piece of wood at either end so as to allow an air space between. The bulbs may then be replanted in October or can be offered for sale during the fall months. Replanting can be done as late as the middle of November, but for early flowers late September or early October is recommended.

Purchasing bulbs: The bulbs are usually imported into this country from Europe each year, arriving from the middle of August to the end of October, according to the variety. Of late years these bulbs have been successfully grown for sale in many parts of the United States, but the imported bulbs are preferable. As a rule, growers place their orders with reliable seed houses and bulb importers now, and the bulbs are delivered as they arrive in the fall.

Columbus

SUPPLY VERY LIMITED.

Florist shop displays present a very skimpy appearance. Almost everything is scarce and of inferior quality. This is due largely to labor shortage which prevents usual care in cultivation. One large firm of growers states that its labor is more than 50 per cent below requirements. It sees in such condition, together with the fuel outlook, the temporary abandonment of some of its greenhouses as the probable remedy. The cool, dry weather has also been a handicap. Roses and carnations are both lacking in volume. Shasta daisies, larkspur, hardy asters and stockies are some of the present mainstays. Easter lilies are plentiful. Gladioli, which should now be coming in freely, are confined to a small quantity grown indoors. Unless there is speedy relief from the present dry spell, outdoor growers of gladioli and asters are threatened with loss of crop. Trade is good for the time of year, and the chief concern of dealers is to get enough stock to take care of their orders.

NOTES.

Two more young men in the local florist trade are claimed by the war. E. W. Hedres, manager of the Fifth Avenue Floral Company store, goes to Camp Sherman, Chillicothe, O., July 27. As he has had some experience in mechanical engineering, he expects to be transferred soon to the University of Cincinnati, for instruction in that branch of the service. W. W. Walker, former manager of the Livingston Seed Company's cut flower department, but lately with the Munk Floral Company, has been assigned to marine service, and will go into training at Newport News, Va. He leaves July 19.

An official census just completed shows that Columbus has 5,938 vacant lot gardens, and 23,119 backyard gardens.

NOTES.

The greenhouses and grounds of the F. Walker Co. are surrounded on three sides by Camp Taylor. Employees have been warned on several occasions to stay away from certain parts of the 27 acres for fear of being hurt by sharp-nail being fired from the trenches.

J. D. Bettman & Son, of Jeffersonville, have been working overtime getting their stock planted in the benches. They believe that by using the better grades of coal they will get through the winter without difficulty.

Anders Rasmussen, laid in a large supply of coal, but it caught fire from spontaneous combustion. It was necessary to flood it with water for several days before the fire was put out.

Ed Hitz has finished planting chrysanthemums on the benches and their carnations are nearly all in. His strong forte is good management.

The Wm. Walker Co. is a hard firm to get ahead of for attractive window displays. Several prizes were awarded them last season.

George Schulz and Jacob Schulz are both reported as having taken war savings stamps to the amount of $1,000 each.

Leo Zoeller is still bringing in good carnations, but he has replanted over half of his establishment.

The Nanz & Neuner Co. is cutting fine roses, especially, Victoria, Russell, Radiance and Ward.

H. G. Walker has about recovered from his recent accident and is at the store again.

The Jacob Schulz Co. is doing considerable advertising in the local papers.

Fred C. Haupt reports good business for the time of the year.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Alternantheras.

The propagating bed will not be full at this season, and it is one of the best times to procure a stock of that splendid carpet bedding plant, the Alternanthera paronychioides major. This plant simply refuses to grow during the winter, and it is almost impossible to procure cuttings until late, with the result that the plants are necessarily small. Any amount of cuttings can be procured now and they can be easily rooted either in flats of soil or in the propagating bed. When the cuttings are inserted give them a good watering and keep them shady for two or three weeks, and they will all root. They can then be placed in flats about one inch apart and placed in a frame outside or in the greenhouse. They can be wintered in a warm, dry house on a shelf near the glass, and potted in April, and will make fine plants. The other varieties are much more vigorous and will thrive in a lower temperature. A few old plants can be lifted and propagated in the spring in the usual manner.

Mignonette.

The plants of mignonette from seed sown in July will have to be placed in their winter quarters in the bench in September. If extra large and long spikes, that are always so much admired, are wanted, the soil will have to be very rich. To ordinary compost (that is, two-thirds loam and one-third manure) add about as much manure again, making the soil about half and half. The plants should be set about 12 inches apart. Water only around the plant until the roots begin to spread in the soil. Keep the soil free from weeds, well scratched over and loose, that it may not become sour. The tops should be pinched off until six or eight branches have been formed. The cabbage worm will soon make its appearance unless this has been guarded against, and if a leaf is found eaten hunt for them at once. When they first make their appearance they are only about a quarter of an inch long. They are green, just the color of the foliage, but have a velvety appearance, and are generally found on the midrib of the leaf or on the stem. Hand picking is the only remedy, and it takes sharp eyes to find them, but they must be gotten rid of or they will soon ruin the plants.

Heaths.

During the hot weather the ericas will demand considerable attention. The plants should be plunged in the coolest location possible, yet where they will get the full sunlight. The pots are full of the very fine roots and if these once get dry the tender roots will burn. There is no plant the florist grows that demands closer watching and more careful watering than the heaths. They are so hard wooded that they do not show neglect as quickly as the softer wooded plants, but if they get once fully dried it means absolute disaster, with no flowers the succeeding year. The grower well posted in the culture of these plants can tell at a glance when they should be watered and never neglects them. If the plants are growing unshapely they should be pinched back, so that the form will be kept. The plants that are in small pots will need repotting in September; a fine loam with but little fibre and with no manure is to be preferred for these plants, for their fine roots do not like a coarse soil, and manure of all kinds should be omitted from the soil in which they are grown.

Geranium Propagating.

It is none too early to begin the propagation of geraniums, especially if it is doubtful about there being stock enough. Any plants that have become established and made a growth that will furnish a cutting will not be injured by the taking of the growing end; in fact, they will be benefited, for they will break more shoots for the September propagation. Many growers in making the fall propagation, after trimming the cuttings, insert them in 2½-inch pots in soil, placing the pots on shelves near the glass. This is a very economical way of handling the cuttings after cool weather has set in, but for summer propagation the bench of sand is to be preferred. In making the cuttings trim off all the foliage except the small leaves at the tip. Be sure that the sand is pounded down hard, so that it will retain all the water possible. In inserting the cutting use a small round stick as a dibble, making a hole just large enough in which to place the cutting. This will disturb the bed of sand much less than drawing a knife or other tool through it. After the cutting is placed in the sand, press the sand firmly and then water heavily, so that the sand will settle firmly around the cutting. The cuttings should then be shaded from the sun either by papers or by stretching cheese cloth over them. This will prevent wilting and evaporation. No further watering will be necessary until the plants begin to root. One of the greatest mistakes made by growers in the summer and fall propagation of geraniums is the continual watering which will invariably cause damping off and rot. Never mind if the surface of the sand becomes dry, if it has been properly packed there will be moisture enough below to cause them to root. If the cuttings will a slight syringing or placing wet papers over them will revive them. A good strike can invariably be made by following this method.

Violets.

It will soon be September and time to house the plants of the double varieties of violets that are grown in the field, the more successful growers being of the opinion that the plants should be under glass before the season of heavy dews. In preparing the beds have plenty of old leaves; it is not necessary that they be rotted; in fact, leaves gathered last fall are to be preferred, for they will generate a little heat in the soil and the violet plants seem to grow and push their roots into half-rotted leaves better than in leaf mold that is finely decomposed. A layer of three inches of leaves in the bottom of the bed will prove of great advantage in violet culture. Whatever manure is used should be thoroughly rotted. The violet will not root into fresh manure at all. An old gardener, who was very successful in violet culture, once told us how he prepared his frames. They were made in a similar manner to hotbeds, only instead of manure a foot of leaves was placed at the bottom and eight or ten inches of soil placed on them. The leaves will furnish a mild heat nearly all winter, and greatly assist in keeping the frames warm. We tried that method the following fall and, thinking that the leaves would not furnish nutriment enough, we incorporated a good quantity of half-rotted manure in the soil, the manure still being more or less lumpy. The violets grew finely and produced an excellent crop of large flowers. In the spring when we lifted the plants we found the roots had all gone into the leaves, there being no feeding roots in the soil, and in making their way through the loam had avoided all the manure, this still being in the lumps as when placed in the soil. In lifting the plants avoid allowing the roots to become dry; lift with a good clump of soil and do not keep the plants too long in the air, only lifting what can be handled expeditiously. Plant firmly, but avoid walking on the beds; water as soon as planted and water well, so that the soil will be firmed around the plants. Shade for a few days until growth starts, and then give all the air and light possible.

Genistas.

The genistas should be potted by September 1 in the pots in which they are to bloom, and a few days before potting should be trimmed into shape. It is a good plan with all soft wooded plants when growing rapidly not to cut at the top the same time the roots are disturbed, so it is better to do the pinching back before the shifting is done, and then not again until the plants are beginning to grow in the new soil, plainly showing that root action has again begun after being disturbed. The plants that are being grown in prescribed shapes should be kept tied to the form, and as soon as established in the new soil pinched back. They will stand considerable hard cutting back for some time yet, for the blooming shoots do not set until well into the winter. Keep the plants in as cool quarters as possible until the first of the year, when if a few plants are wanted early they can be brought into warmer locations, but these plants are cool-growing subjects and do not like any great amount of heat.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Klft, Phila., Pa.

In the Store.

All new or important stocks should always be featured. A few display tables, on which a new line can be artistically arranged, with the aid of velvetine and plush coverings, make attractive centers in the store. A table of jardinières, another of flower vases and holders, one of the newest things in baskets, should be featured. If any one is in doubt as to their utility, let them visit some of the best department stores, and note the manner in which the goods are displayed. Each store has a corps of trained men whose business from one end of the year to another is to present their goods in the most inviting manner. A well written or printed card points out the merit and in most cases gives the price.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

Just now is a good time to plan for the coming season so as to be prepared for the business opportunities as they come along. Take a look over last year's order and cash books, noting particularly the number of sales and where they increased and if due to special efforts made to secure new trade. If a daily or weekly record of the course of the business has been kept, it will be found a splendid reference at this time. In this will at once be called to mind incidents that made strong impressions at the time, but were since forgotten. A cheap or special rose sale was found to have been productive of good business in early October, selling well by the dozen and also in small vase or tumbler baskets. The recent inventory showed a stock of these small baskets on hand, which can be brightened up and set aside for repetition of this sale.

Write up several forms of invitation to this fall opening and special rose sale, then select the best. See your printer and choose a mailing card of a size that will show this notice and later similar invitations off to good advantage. Each event notice can be a different color at the same cost. Order a sufficient quantity for the whole season, which are to be sent home without printing. These can now be addressed in sets of six from the store mailing list one for each month of the busy season. They are carefully boxed, kept clean, and sent to the printer with matter for each notice as the months roll by. Although Uncle Sam will deliver these cards for a penny stamp, they do not have a cheap look, and if the matter is bright and snappy, and not too long, will be read from first to last. When addressed at this time of comparative leisure, it is not the task as when done in busy seasons late at night, and is work well out of the way.

Gladioli are now coming in quantity and good variety. They make very effective window displays when arranged in the English glass flower blocks in shallow bowls. Water lilies combine well with them. Asters are improving in quality, but are hardly up to their best as yet. They should be handled carefully and if well displayed are a splendid summer staple.

Prepare a handsome extra-sized wreath of magnolia leaves, on which place a spray of purple asters, tied with a purple ribbon. This will make a conspicuous window piece. The same wreath can be decked the next day with white asters or with gladioli. An occasional sprinkling will keep the flowers in good shape for a day. A crescent wreath of these leaves, feathered in the center or full part with short and medium length cypas, and the finished piece, partially or fully gilded, will make a very decorative effect, first for the window and later as a wall or case ornament in the store.

Baseball of Flowers.

The Sporting Writers' Club, of Philadelphia, Pa., has honored the memory of Harry Wright, the "father" of baseball, since his decease, by placing a baseball of flowers on his grave at each recurring anniversary of his death. The accompanying illustration is made from a photo of the emblem, which shows how well the design has been carried out. The ball is made on a frame 22 inches in diameter, the "flowers" are paper capes and the stitches are outlined with purple immortelle florets. Slender chenille is now used. The finished design stands four and a half feet in height. The artist is E. W. Gaehring, Philadelphia, Pa.

Industrial Designs.

There is a persistent demand for funeral designs of an industrial character, which are ordered for the most part by fellow employes of the deceased. Something symbolic of their occupation or trade is thought necessary. The accompanying illustration of an anvil and hammer was the emblem selected to voice the sympathy of the associates of a deceased worker of the blacksmith force at Cramp's shipyard, Philadelphia, Pa.

The design is well carried out, the anvil of white carnations being of good proportions and having a handsome setting in the foundation of Easter lilies and callas, which, with the large arch and star at top, make quite an elaborate emblem. The hammer is of wrapped purple chenille. For such a large piece, the ribbon, which contains the lettering, is rather narrow, but take it all in all, it is well carried out and much admired by all who saw it. This is a specimen of the handiwork of E. W. Gaehring, Philadelphia, Pa.

German Potash Not Needed.

Statements that agriculture in New York state is bound to suffer for lack of German potash can only be considered as another form of German propaganda. This is the belief of the authorities on soils and agricultural chemistry at the State College of Agriculture at Cornell University. Those who spread these stories are not worried about agriculture, but about keeping up a demand for German potash. The soils of western and central New York are not deficient in this element and need only some attention to make available the latent chemical which is already present. Recently analysis of eight samples of typical western New York soils showed that they contained from 32,000 to 45,000 pounds of potash per acre to the depth of eight inches. Decaying humus, stable manure or stable sweepings, with lime and phosphoric acid, form the elements most needed.

Fuel Conservation.

Paper by R. E. Moore, Vice-president of the Carstock Engineering Co., Chicago, read at the meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club, July 18, 1918.

The conservation of coal is at this time almost as important as the manufacture of munitions. In the campaign against fuel waste, now countrywide, every feasible agency should be utilized. Advisory fuel engineers have been appointed to assist each state fuel administrator in such a campaign, and it is gratifying to see the cooperation between the various state fuel administrations and local engineering authorities, power-plants operating staffs and owners, which is beginning to make itself felt, but the task ahead is a big one and cannot be completed in a few weeks or even a few months.

Constant vigilance is essential to the maintenance of high power plant efficiency, especially in the face of the present coal supply conditions. From the coal passer to the federal administrator himself, there can be no relaxation in effort if this country is to go through the coming winter without serious disaster to its industries. This means, of course, that all possible ways must be taken to save coal, and advantage should be taken wherever expert knowledge of combustion processes exists. To burn a bit of coal needlessly, to waste or destroy anything that it requires the burning of coal to make, is a crime. We are at war and coal is scarce. It is time that the owners and operators of power plants were taking drastic steps to conserve fuel.

My message is to owners and operators of power plants who are looking for a method of reducing fuel consumption. The cost of coal is the largest single item of expense in the production of power, and it is to the unwarranted waste, and to the way in which fuel is burned, that I am calling your attention. Few managers realize that large reductions can be made in the cost of producing steam. Not one manager in a hundred knows whether or not he is getting the full value of the money that he spends for coal. The reasons for this condition are obvious. The opportunity in the average plant for comparing costs of steam production with those of plants having efficient furnace equipment is rarely possible. The facilities for investigating conditions in their own plants are not often at hand. It is their duty to have an investigation made of their furnace conditions to determine how they compare with economical plants and to take steps to remedy the faults.

Until recently little importance has been attached to furnace designs. The plant owner purchases a boiler from a boiler manufacturer, sets it up with no particular thought as to the design of setting, grates or draft. As long as he gets sufficient steam, he is satisfied. When approached, he says, "Well, my plant is doing good enough," and follows the policy of "Let well enough alone."

A combustion engineer should be consulted, or some person who is familiar with proper furnace design, proper design of grates or stoker, to fit your special conditions. However, the more important problem at this time is to raise the efficiency of plants now existing without involving great expense and labor. Much coal can be saved at only a slight, and in some cases, at practically no expense. The plant owner, as previously stated, should first determine the efficiency of his boiler plant. If he does not have the knowledge nor the time, he should have a first class combustion engineer spend a few days at his plant.

The owner or operator should determine whether his boilers are kept clean inside from scale and mud, and outside from soot and whether the feed water is properly heated. The grates should be in good repair and of the proper design. The setting should be tight, so that there is a minimum of air infiltration. If possible, the coal should be weighed for each shift and the firemen checked one against the other. The most important factor in the burning of coal is the control of the air supply. This above all other things should not be left to the fireman entirely. Automatic regulation of air supply is an essential to the highest furnace results, and this is especially true where the class of labor employed in the boiler room is of a low standard.

The air supply should be automatically controlled, and where mechanical stokers are employed, the feeding of the coal should also be automatically controlled. The method of controlling draft ordinarily employed by the fireman, is to kick the ash pit doors shut when the steam is high. The more careless one permits the boilers to blow off. One method is about as wasteful as the other. When the ash pit doors are closed, a vacuum is created over the fire, and air leaks in through every opening in the front as well as through the brick work. Very few firemen will bother to close the uptake or breeching damper.

The owner should take this most important duty in his own hands by installing an automatic control. A high class control will pay for itself in fuel economy several times over in one year.

National Publicity for Flowers.

The secretary reports a good reception by the trade in Butte, Mont. Practically all of the florists there are now within the membership fold of the society and generous subscriptions to the publicity fund have been made.

In Spokane, Wash., he was also cordially received and a banquet given in honor of his visit. The florists there have organized for mutual benefit and the spirit of co-operation is very apparent. As a result of this visit interest in our society has been greatly stimulated and new members secured. The secretary expresses a great indebtedness to State Vice-President J. W. Duncan, who is superintendent of parks, for many courtesies extended, and also to John F. Austen and C. T. Kipp for help and assistance cheerfully rendered.

Our promotion bureau in the past few days has been dealing with two problems which are of interest to all florists. One is an attempt made through the public press to "Germanize" our useful cornflower, and have it eliminated from the list of florists' flowers; the other is a movement to ban the presentation of flowers to hospital patients, because "nurses are scarce, and the time required for caring for flowers daily cannot be spared." This last problem might become serious, were it not for the fact that our bureau is sufficiently well organized to check the movement at the outset.

And yet there are hundreds of florists throughout the country who do not see the value of our publicity campaign and therefore fail to support it. Let one of these florists, who may be located in communities where there are hospitals, just figure how many sales

HOUSE OF BOSTON FERNS AT THE GEORGE WITTBOLD CO.'S RANGE, CHICAGO.

The poorly paid fireman cannot be expected to control or regulate a furnace properly, unless the owner shows him that he is in earnest by assisting himself in every way possible through the installation of a few simple fool-proof devices.

In conclusion, I want to state that if the managers of power plants will take a little trouble to see that their boilers are kept clean, that they have their boiler settings in good shape, and that the air is supplied in the proper amount and properly controlled, they will not only be ahead financially, but will show the proper spirit consistent with these times.

he makes in a year where the flowers are known to be for hospital presentation, and he will be sure to admit that something should be done to prevent the prohibition of flowers in hospitals. He will realize the little he could do individually to stem the tide of adverse opinion, and, consequently, the need of organized effort, such as is presented by our publicity campaign. This is only an instance of the work taken up, but should alone be sufficient to break down that barrier of doubt which seems to exist in regard to the far-reaching benefit accruing to the entire trade through our campaign work.

Can the trade afford to have the campaign minimized, or, perhaps, abandoned, for the want of just a little more support than has, so far, been given? The publicity committees are only asking for $50,000 per year. Nearly four-fifths of this has been subscribed for the current year. The remainder is coming slowly—very slowly.

Now, to be plain, Mr. Nonsubscriber, the fall season is approaching and the committees want to close now for the magazine publicity covering the season ending at Christmas. If you are going to the public the use of flowers, and the more you talk about them the more you make them think and use them.

Then will flowers dominate, and then will we come, too, a bigger and better business so that the publicity committee, when funds are needed to do nationally, together with what you are expected to do locally, will have no difficulty in accomplishing their task.

to help at all, your assistance is worth more at this time than, perhaps, it ever will be. Will you not send along that little subscription which your conscience prompts you to contribute, so that the publicity committee may report at our August convention that our goal has been reached, and we can continue to spread the propaganda of the flowers which means so much for you and for everyone in the business?

JOHN YOUNG, Secretary.

Let Flowers Dominate.

When will the grower realize higher prices for his product? This seems to be the prevalent query to the ruine welfare of the producer to enable him to carry on in spite of the government restriction of coal supply, so necessary to help win the war, and with which the trade want to co-operate by assisting in every way possible.

Let us assume that we were not connected with the flower business at all, and we had to send a gift to somebody for certain anniversaries, weddings, birthdays, motherhood, and many other occasions where remembrances were in order, how often would you think of flowers? Well, perhaps you might think of flowers. Why not make the gift of flowers dominate in the mind of everyone when there is a doubt as to what to send? If we succeed in partly doing this, the demand for flowers ought to automatically increase in price, and if it does, may not the grower expect his proportion also?

If it were possible to make everyone in your city or town see your floral display, that would be one way, but as this is almost impossible, the next method should be by publicity, newspapers preferably, thereby calling attention to the flowers. By this manner and means you have the most effective and quickest method to bring Coal In Canada.

Brampton, Ont.—The Dale Estate is dismantling some of its glass and taking out pipes to guard against loss this winter when the 30 per cent reduction in coal consumption is enforced. Although Pennsylvania anthracite is used by Canadian greenhouse operators, the allotment is 70 per cent of the average supply instead of 50 per cent as in the United States.

Edmonton, Alta.—No limit has been placed as yet on the local supply of greenhouse coal which comes from within 30 miles of this city, and it is believed the average amount will be available. Trade has been good, with geraniums bringing 25 cents as against a former price of 15 cents.

TORONTO, ONT.—Miss Cotterill and George Hatcher have closed their establishment for the summer months.

Chicago to St. Louis.

The Chicago & Eastern Illinois railroad has been chosen for the trip of the Chicago Florists' Club members and friends to the annual convention of the Society of American Florists at St. Louis, Mo., August 20-22, leaving Dearborn Station, Monday, August 19, at 11:30 P. M., due St. Louis the following morning at 7:37 o'clock. The rates of fare one way, including tax, are: In coach, $9.41; in sleeping car or parlor car, $10.97. There is no party rate and no reduction for round trip. Pullman fares, tax included, are as follows: Lower berth, $2.20; upper berth, $1.70; drawing room, $7.70; parlor car seat, $1.10.

Regarding sleeping car accommodations, and all further particulars, address Sam M. Childs, General Agent Passenger Department, 108 West Adams street, Chicago. Telephone Harrison 5100.

Parties from other points passing through the city are invited to join the Chicago delegation on this train.

MICHAEL BARKER,

Chairman Transportation Committee.

New York to St. Louis.

The transportation committee of the New York Florists' Club has made the following arrangements for the trip of its members and friends to the annual convention of the Society of American Florists at St. Louis, Mo., August 20-22:

The party will proceed over the Pennsylvania Railroad, Sunday, August 18. Arrangements have been made for accommodations on the Keystone express No. 21, leaving the Pennsylvania Terminal Station, 33rd street and Seventh avenue, at 2:04 p. m., due in St. Louis 5:25 p. m. the following day (Monday).

Under existing traffic conditions it has been impossible to secure any rebate in the regular rates, which for the train selected are as follows: Fare, one way, $31.68; war tax, $2.53; additional fare for Pullman train, $5.28; war tax, 42 cents; lower berth, $6; war tax, 60 cents; upper berth, $4.80; war tax, 48 cents, or, inclusive, the fare one way will be: Upper Pullman berth, $45.19; lower berth, $46.51.

In view of the limited passenger service available, all who wish to join the club party should make early reservations to A. L. Miller, chairman transportation committee, Sutphin road and Rockaway boulevard, Jamaica, N. Y., stating the persons for whom transportation is desired and the number of upper and lower berths.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Preliminary Programme of the Thirty-Fourth Annual Meeting and Exhibition to Be Held in Moolah Temple, St. Louis, Mo., August 20-22, 1918.

PROGRAMME DAY BY DAY.

This recapitulation of the programme proper is intended to make prominent the hours of meetings.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 20.

FIRST DAY.

- 10:00 A. M.—Meeting Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association.
10:30 A. M.—Office of the Ladies' Society of American Florists opened for registration in Convention hall.
2:00 P. M.—S. A. F. Opening session.
8:30 P. M.—President's Reception. Voting on amendments to by-laws; and convention city for 1920.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 21.

SECOND DAY.

- 9:00 A. M.—Meeting of the Florists' Hail Association of America.
10:00 A. M.—Annual meeting of the Ladies' Society of American Florists.
10:00 A. M.—Morning session S. A. F.
2:00 P. M.—Afternoon session S. A. F.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 22.

THIRD DAY.

- 10:00 A. M.—S. A. F. session, Election of officers.
2:00 P. M.—Afternoon session S. A. F.

FIRST DAY—OPENING SESSION—2:00 P. M.

Opening exercises in Convention hall.
Convention called to order by August H. Hummert, vice-president St. Louis Florists' club.
Address of welcome by L. Jules Bourdet, vice-president S. A. F.
Address of welcome by Hon. Henry Kiel, Mayor of St. Louis.
Response, J. Fred Annmann.
President C. H. Totty's address.
Reading minutes of executive board.
Report of the secretary.
Report of the treasurer.
Report of the Washington representative.
Reports of state vice-presidents.
Reports of standing committees.
Reports of special committees.
Discussion of amendments to be voted on at evening session.
Miscellaneous business.
Judging of trade exhibits.
Consideration of place of meeting for 1920.

FIRST DAY—EVENING SESSION—8:30 P. M.

President's Reception—The reception will be held in the Jefferson hotel. President Totty wishes it to be distinctly understood that the reception will be informal and that the most comfortable clothing will be the most appropriate for wear.
Amendments to constitution and by-laws to be voted upon.
To amend the portion of Article II, Section 2 (b), Elections and Appointments, reading:

"Clubs, societies or kindred organizations of professional florists, gardeners and horticulturists, having paid-up membership of 100 or more members in the S. A. F. and O. H. shall be entitled to one representative on the board of directors. Such representative shall be the president of such organization and must be a member of this society. Any elective officer or appointed director shall not be eligible as a representative of such organization. When the president of any such organization is already a director, the vice-president shall be eligible for the office."

By inserting in the sentence "Such representative shall be the president of such organization and must be a member of this society," the following sentence:

"Should the president of such organization be or become unable to serve as its representative, through sickness, or for any other reason which is acceptable to the president of the society, then the vice-president shall act in his place and stand during the period of such inability."

and at the end of paragraph (b) of the same section, adding: "The chairman of the Publicity Committee, the Publicity Finance Committee, and the National Flower Show Committee, respectively, shall act and serve as directors for and during their terms of office as the same appear upon the records of the society; but if any such chairman shall be already a director, then the committee of which he is a chairman shall have no further or separate representation upon the board."

To amend Article VI, Plant Registration:

"A registration book shall be kept by the secretary, in which shall be inscribed names and descriptions of new plants, as furnished by the owners thereof, under the rules of the society. Names so inscribed shall be recognized, officially, as the proper and permanent titles, respectively, of the varieties as registered and this society shall do all in its power to prevent the subsequent application of any name thus registered to any other plant in the same special class, or the distribution of plants so recorded, under any title other than the one thus given it."

"On receipt of application for registration it shall be the duty of the secretary to give public notice thereof, and if, after the lapse of three weeks from date of said application, no protest shall have been filed with the secretary, due announcement of registration shall then be made; but where there exists a permanent committee or affiliating society especially devoted to the interest of any distinct class of plants or flowers, the secretary shall, on receipt of application for registration of a plant belonging in such class, refer such application to the duly constituted authorities of such committee or society, in lieu of public notice, and, upon the return of said application regularly approved by such authorities, shall make public announcement accordingly. Failure to return such application to the secretary within a period of three weeks shall be construed as approval and announcement made accordingly.

"Any protest under the above provisions shall be referred to a committee of three especially appointed by the president of the S. A. F. for this purpose. The committee shall act promptly, and their decision shall be accepted as final."

By striking out the first two paragraphs and substituting: "Any member organizing or acquiring a plant which is believed to be new to commerce, or which embodies a varietal difference sufficient to make it distinctive and separate from any existing variety, may register the same with the society both as to description and name, provided such plant is not covered by any society or organization devoted to the interest of its species, in which case any application for registration, will be referred to such society or organization. The secretary shall, on receipt of an application for registration, and a description of the plant, with the name proposed for it, give public notice of such application in the trade papers; and if, after the lapse of three weeks from the date of such application, no protest shall have been filed with the secretary, he shall issue a preliminary certificate of registration, confirmation of which, by final certificate, can only follow after such plant, or flowers from the same, has been exhibited at a meeting or exhibition held by any organized florist club or horticultural body, when the exhibit shall be judged by a special committee appointed by the president of the society; 10 days' notice of such exhibition having previously been given to the secretary. Any plant for which registration is sought must show an improvement over existing varieties; a mere varietal difference is not to be considered sufficient to entitle the exhibitor to a final certificate."

The following recommendation of the board of directors is to be voted upon:

"That an appropriation of $250 be made to the use of the committee on school gardens."

Balloting for meeting place for 1920.

Polls open from 8:30 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 21.

SECOND DAY—MORNING SESSION—10:30 A. M.

Nominations of officers for 1919.
Report of committee on president's address.
Report of committee on national credits and collections bureau. By R. C. Kerr, chairman.
Discussion.
Address, "National Credits and Collections." By F. S. Webb, Chicago.
Discussion.

AFTERNOON SESSION—2:00 P. M.

Report of committee on publicity. By Henry Penn, chairman.
Discussion.
Address, "Publicity." By Major P. F. O'Keefe, Boston, Mass.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 22.

THIRD DAY—MORNING SESSION—10:00 A. M.

Election of officers for 1919.
Polls open from 10:00 a. m. to 11:00 a. m. or until all in line have voted.

Voting will be done under the new system. There will be four voting places, "A" to "D" inclusive—"E" to "K" inclusive—"L" to "R" inclusive—"S" to "Z" inclusive. Please vote promptly.

Report of judges of trade exhibition.
Discussion. "Present-day Cost of Production." The discussion will be opened by President Totty.

Question Box.

Deferred business.

THIRD DAY—AFTERNOON SESSION—2:00 P. M.

Address, "The Coal Conservation Order as it Applies to Florists." by a United States fuel administration representative.
4:00 p. m. Report of committee on convention garden, by Theodore Wirth, chairman.
Report of National Flower Show Committee, by George Asmus, chairman.
Discussion.

FLORISTS' HAIL ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 21—SECOND DAY—9:00 A. M.

Annual meeting, Florists Hail Association of America.

LADIES' SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 20—FIRST DAY.

The headquarters of Secretary Mrs. Albert M. Herr, will be located near S. A. F. Secretary Young's office in Moolah Temple, and will be open from 10:30 a. m. until 4:00 p. m. for the purpose of registration and payment of dues.

SECOND DAY.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 21—10:00 A. M.

Annual meeting of the society.
The American Carnation Society and the American Rose Society will not hold special meetings during the period of the convention.

SPECIAL MEETINGS.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 20—FIRST DAY.

10:00 a. m. Meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association in convention hall, Moolah Temple.

The Late John Berry.

John Berry, one of the most prominent figures in floricultural and horticultural circles in the middle west and Rocky Mountain states, and for several years superintendent of parks at Colorado Springs, Colo., and later in a like position at Denver, passed to his last rest, May 29.

Mr. Berry was born in Ireland more than 70 years ago, where after receiving a fair school education, he began his apprenticeship in floriculture and landscape work and finished his training at Kew Gardens in England, well qualified to fill responsible positions in that country. His ambition, however, prompted him to leave the narrow confines of the British Isles, and in 1871 he came to America, traveling extensively in his early years and gathered much valuable data on the native flora in practically every state in the Union.

He finally made the Rocky Mountains his experimental ground with his permanent home in Denver, Colo., where he held numerous positions of importance, both municipal and private. He was instrumental in planning and planting the beautiful Wolcott estate in the early '80's, and there are few public parks or private estates in that section that have not been improved by his introductions of valuable mountain shrubs and perennials.

INFORMATION.

The Secretary's Office will be in Convention hall to the left of the main entrance. Members should register upon arrival at the hall.
 A Bureau of Information continuously maintained, will be found adjoining the Secretary's office in Moolah Temple.

NEW MEMBERS.

Those desirous of becoming members should apply at the secretary's office. The fee is $5.00, which covers the dues for 1918.

PAYING DUES.

Dues may be paid and membership cards obtained at the secretary's office. The better way would be to remit now!
 Only those in good standing or clear on the books will be permitted to vote.

German Fears Trade War.

Philip Heineken, director of North German Lloyd Steamship Co. in "Deutsche Stimmen," says he fears trade war at termination of hostilities. He says it is a fallacy to imagine that middle Europe will make up for lost markets abroad. He prefers resumption of economic relations with all nations.

John Berry will be missed as a progressive spirit in many organizations. He was a life member of the Society of American Florists, served several terms as president of the Colorado State Florists' Society, and since the foundation of the state horticultural society in the 80's was one of the most ardent workers in that organization and acted as its head on several occasions. He was an active member of the American Association of Park Superintendents, being honored with the office of vice-president at the annual meeting in 1917.

A man of high character and genial unassuming manner, his passing is mourned by a host of friends and his years of useful endeavor have left a deep and lasting imprint on American horticulture.

TIN sells for $1 per pound, which accounts for the present high price of tinfoil.

"PEOPLE who live in glass houses should—grow flowers. That is what we do," is the slogan of H. V. Lawrence, Falmouth, Mass.

MANETTI STOCKS (English), formerly 25 shillings per thousand, are now quoted at 60 shillings, with risk of loss in delayed transportation greatly increased.

SHIPPERS of plants, bulbs, etc., should be on the lookout now for empty soap, shoe and other boxes, also barrels. These are likely to be scarce and high in price the coming season.

Society of American Florists.

ST. LOUIS CONVENTION, AUGUST 20-22.

The official program covering the convention proceedings was mailed last week to every member of the society. If any member should fail to receive his copy, a request made of the secretary will bring him another. At few conventions of the society have matters of greater importance to the trade been announced for discussion, consequently the attendance at every session in Moolah Temple should be large.

THE TRADE EXHIBITION.

This prominent feature of the convention promises to be quite as interesting as usual. A few choice locations are yet available, and intending exhibitors should lose no time in communicating with the secretary. The facilities afforded by Moolah Temple for a well-staged exhibition are splendid, allowing of plenty of light, liberal aisle room and wall space for those who need it. Floor plans may be had on application to the secretary's office.

JOHN YOUNG, Secretary.

Coal Screenings May be Used.

The modification of the fuel order telegraphed last week by Secretary John Young of the Society of American Florists, printed in our issue of July 20, page 8, was incomplete. The order includes the conditional use of screenings to full capacity in some sections. The full text of the order is as follows:

United States Fuel Administration.

July 8, 1918.

To State Fuel Administrators:

The bureau of conservation advises that greenhouses using not more than 40 tons of coal annually, may operate to their full capacity, and that any greenhouse west of the Mississippi and any in Illinois or Indiana, may, with the approval of the federal fuel administrator for its state, operate to its full capacity by the use of screenings, the approval to be withheld where the giving of it would impair the fuel supply to manufacturing plants on the war industries board's preference list.

BUREAU OF STATE ORGANIZATIONS.

By Evans Woollen, Acting Director.

COAL FOR NEW PLANTS.

Washington, D. C., July 10, 1918.

John E. Williams,

Federal Fuel Administrator for Illinois,

120 West Adams Street, Chicago.

Dear Sir:

Your letter of the 1st is before us, inquiring:

What shall be done with a man who is just beginning business, who has no record of consumption and no guide to supply?

We have given serious consideration as to how to apply the ruling on curtailed industries, to plants just coming into operation, and we find that the fairest arrangement for competitors and all concerned, is that a plant which was not in existence at the time our curtailment order went into effect, cannot be allowed fuel to operate, but plants completed on or before the date of the order, shall be allowed such fuel as would be used by normal plants of similar size.

UNITED STATES FUEL ADMINISTRATION.

By P. B. Noyes, Director of Conservation.

WOOD AND PEAT.

Washington, D. C., June 17, 1918.

Florists are also permitted the use of wood and peat when not transported by railroad. All such users, however, must at once notify the state fuel administrators of their respective states in writing of the exact time when they began the use of such wood and peat for fuel.

American Gladiolus Society.

The ninth annual meeting and exhibition of the American Gladiolus Society will be held in Elmwood Music Hall, Buffalo, N. Y., August 14-17, 1918. The business meeting will be held at 3 p. m. on the first day. A good array of prizes is offered in both the commercial and non-commercial classes. Every effort has been made to so distribute the prizes that every amateur or small commercial grower can successfully compete. It is hoped that the attractive prizes, as well as the central location of Buffalo, may bring out a large number of exhibitors. Growers east and west can easily reach Buffalo, and a large attendance of gladiolus lovers is desired.

Flowers convey messages of cheer to hearts heavily laden with the anxieties of the war, but strange as it may seem there are persons who would snatch even this boon of comfort from us. Let us cultivate and exhibit beautiful flowers for their peaceful influence. Every owner of a garden should do his part, and we hope there will be no flower slackers within reach of Buffalo.

The final premium list has been mailed, and if you have not received a copy write without delay to the secretary, A. C. Beal, 212 Kelvin place, Ithaca, N. Y.

Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association.

The above association will have a very interesting meeting at St. Louis, Mo., at 10 o'clock on the morning of August 20. President Gude says that this means 60 minutes past nine and not 65 minutes past that hour. Those who come late must take the consequences. The meeting will start on time, and will be made just as interesting as the annual meeting, which will be held at Cleveland, O., in October.

ALBERT POCHELON, Sec'y.

Holland Steamships.

A report from Amsterdam says that the United States is considering the return to Holland of some of the requisitioned Dutch shipping before the end of the war, according to the newspaper, Telegraaf. From an Atlantic port comes the report of the sinking of the S. S. Oosterdijk, recently seized from Holland after a collision with the American steamer, San Jacinto.

Express Delays Overcome.

Representatives of the Blind Floral Co. and F. C. Hinkel & Bro. of Pittsburgh, Pa., recently desired to secure some plant stock from Toledo and Cleveland but, unwilling to risk the uncertainties of express shipment, they journeyed to the Ohio cities and returned with the plants by auto.

PRICES HIGH CONSIDERING SEASON.

Another week of quiet summer trade. Everywhere you go, you hear the same story—"Business very dull." The market is stocked with an abundance of flowers and prices hold up at an unheard of figure for this time of year. Carnations are selling at from $1.50 to $3 a hundred, Easter lilies, $10 a hundred, sweet peas, $1 to $1.25 a hundred. Roses are very cheap and sell for almost any offer. Gladioli are flooding the market and selling at 50 cents to $2 a dozen for extra fancy America.

NOTES.

Matthew Ruane, formerly salesman for Pierce Brothers, but of late years in the retail business for himself in Waltham, has been called in the selective draft. On July 13 he gave a farewell dinner at the Waltham lodge of Elks, of which he is the present ruler. A number of the Elks in the trade motored out and spent a very enjoyable evening. The florists sent their best wishes through Wm. Hastings, who represented the market.

Daniel Lamey, salesman at the Co-operative Market, is receiving large shipments daily of centaureas, sweet sultans and sweet peas. After market time, he reports for duty as deputy sheriff of Suffolk county at the Charles street jail, where he has a creditable flower garden.

Fred Pettit, of Carbone's, has entered the service, after trying several branches and losing out on account of weight. He has passed an examination as secretary for the Y. M. C. A. overseas duty. He leaves for four weeks' training at Springfield August 4.

Wm. Nicholson is still cutting good Carnations Benora, White Wonder, and Roper. This is extremely late for the above, but the cool, dark weather has kept them in good condition.

Perry Green, formerly a grower in Quincy, has opened a large hotel at West Dennis, on the tip of Cape Cod, where he caters to automobile and week-end parties.

Considering conditions and the season, business has been very good at B. A. Snyder & Co.'s. They are planning to remodel their store before the rush starts.

The bankruptcy sale of Mann Bros.' estate was held July 18 at Randolph. Everything that went under the hammer brought good prices.

P. Donohue, salesman for the Boston Rose Co., is kept quite busy with large daily shipments of Hadley, Russell and Ophella.

M. Liebman is receiving good asters which sell at $3 a hundred; also sweet peas from H. Calder, of Norwood.

Jelle Roos, of Milton, is shipping to Harry Ward, salesman at the market, 1,000 assorted gladioli daily.

Welch Bros. have had a very good summer trade and are well pleased.

BUSINESS HITS LOW LEVEL.

The past week was the dulliest experienced this season. There is practically no business, and all offerings look very poor. As regards outdoor stock, there is not enough available to meet the demand, due to the long dry period we have gone through. The cool days kept the roses and carnations in good shape, but the high temperature during last week is having its effect. With asters arriving, the demand for carnations will wane. A good supply of gladioli is being received and prices will soon take a drop. Thus far, they have been bringing from $4 to $6 per 100. Lilies are plentiful at low figures. Some new American Beauties are being offered, but there is light demand. Greens are very plentiful and the call is limited.

FUNERAL WORK BULK OF BUSINESS.

Business is fairly good, but practically all of the demand is for funeral work. Receipts are only moderately strong, and at this writing, clean up well each day. Roses are on the short side, but few long stems being seen. Asters are now arriving in larger quantities and are taking the place of carnations which have just gone out. Gladioli are also in fairly heavy supply and find a good market. Easter lilies have shortened up somewhat but rubrums are in good supply. A few of the late hardy hydrangeas are making their appearance. Other miscellaneous offerings include snapdragons, feverfews, Shasta daisies and a few cosmos at irregular intervals.

NOTES.

L. H. Kyrk is now receiving roses from Frank & Sons, Portland, Ind., by parcel post. The stock arrives in fine condition.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange has been getting in some excellent rubrums that are proving good property.

John Olinger, of Chicago, is visiting his brother, P. J. Olinger, at the latter's home in Bellevue.

Bordeaux Mixture.

As a result of the present high cost of copper sulphate, the principal ingredient active in Bordeaux mixture, many farmers are asking the United States department of agriculture what can be used as a substitute. According to specialists of the department there is no substitute, Bordeaux mixture being the only reliable preventative for such diseases as late-blight of potato, black-rot of grape and bitter-rot and blotch of apple. Methods of calculating the value of commercial Bordeaux mixture have, therefore, been published in Farmers' Bulletin 994.

Every package of commercial Bordeaux mixture carries a label on which is given its content of copper, usually in percentage, and by multiplying this percentage by 3.93 the result gives the amount of crystallized copper-sulphate. If the percentage is given in terms of copper oxid, multiply by 3.14; if in copper hydroxide, multiply by 2.58. In order to calculate the copper sulphate when diluted ready for application multiply the number of pounds of the concentrated Bordeaux mixture to be added to 50 gallons of water by the percentage of copper sulphate. Physical properties, such as adhesiveness, texture, spreading quality, and rate of settling, also are important factors in determining the efficiency of Bordeaux mixtures. A preparation containing a large amount of copper, but coarse and granular in texture, with poor spreading and sticking qualities, can not be expected to give good results in cases where a good fungicide is required.

Greenhouse Builders Work for Navy.

We are pleased to note that the greenhouse builders are lending a hand to help win the war. Hitchings & Co., of Elizabeth, N. J., are manufacturing quite a long list of accessories for both steel and wooden ships. This includes skylight lifting gears, iron scuttles, wood and iron ladders, chocks, cleats, bits and other necessities for sea-going craft. We believe that some of the industries that have been arbitrarily classed as "non-essential," will, before this war is over, be found to be quite essential. It is good to be able to do more than one thing well.

HOT WEATHER AFFECTS BUSINESS.

The weather has been extremely hot the past week with the temperature reaching as high as 98° July 21, consequently business was not as brisk as it might have been. Stock is plentiful at this writing but some of it is showing the effects of the weather and while there is more than enough to go around a change for the better may be expected at any time. American Beauty roses are in fair supply and clean up well right along. Mrs. Chas. Russell are quite plentiful and in brisk demand. Columbia is holding its own and the same holds true for Double White Killarney. Champ Weiland is reaching the market in large supply and so are Killarney, White Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, Ophelia, Sunburst and Mrs. Aaron Ward. Hoosier Beauty, Milady Richmond, My Maryland, Mrs. George Sawyer, Hearst, Montrose, Mrs. Bayard Thayer and Mrs. Moorfield Storey are included in the list of rose offerings, together with a limited supply of the miniature varieties, Cecile Brunner, Elgar, Baby Doll and Nesbit. Orchids are scarce and the same holds true for lily of the valley and gardenias. Lilies are in fair supply but are in brisk demand with hardly ever any surplus to speak of. A few carnations are seen but are not recognized as much of a factor in the market at present. Asters are a trifle more plentiful and clean up early each day at satisfactory prices. Gladioli are seen in much larger quantities and have dropped considerably in price the past week. Calendulas are in good supply and a few sweet peas are still to be had. Water lilies are selling quite well and are seen featured in many of the leading window displays. A few Golden Glow chrysanthemums made their appearance and have sold well over ing to their splendid quality. Fewer, daisies, gypsophila, cornflowers, poppies, larkspurs and a long list of other outdoor flowers give the buyer a large variety to select from. Business for July has been good so far with the sales showing a great increase over that of the same period of 1917. The S. A. F. convention to be held in St. Louis, Mo. August 20-22, is the main topic of conversation in the market and from present indications it appears as if this city will be largely represented. Many of the local people have signified their intention of making the trip to St. Louis by auto.

NOTES.

Anton Then has disposed of his place on Winnemac avenue to P. J. Wustenhoff. The property consists of 32 lots, on which stand 15 greenhouses and a service building. The sale includes the miscellaneous stock and fixtures, also some 16,000 seedling carnations in 20 varieties. Mr. Then leaves for Red Bluff, Calif., this week, accompanied by his son, John, and Fritz Bahr.

The following letter was mailed unsigned to many of the local retail florists, July 16, which leads one to believe that an effort is again being made to organize them:

We are about to bring up the subject again that has been like a pill in our ribs for years. We have made several attempts to get together and organize for the best interests of the retail trade of Chicago and all efforts so far have failed, but that is no reason why we should not try again to combine our common causes and make a success of this organization. Other branches of business have gone through the same experience as we have, organized and busted, organized again, and busted and then, organized again, until they finally accomplished what they started out to do. The crisis in our business will be here this fall. In these war-times the wholesalers are thoroughly organized and there is no reason why we should not be. We have made many mistakes heretofore in admitting everyone who called himself a florist, but I think we have struck the right method now, when we will ask only the legitimate florists to become members of this proposed organization, which we intend to organize if possible, among the leading retail florists of Chicago. The time has come when we can do more as a body, than as individuals, which has been proven in the past, even if the organizations have failed. Let us get together and see if we cannot get a perfect, harmonious retail organization to working in this city in our line as they have in all other lines all over this country. Let us not stand back and let them say that the Chicago florists are a lot of dubs. Think this over.

Ed Eisner, with Grimm & Gorly, St. Louis, Mo., returned home this week after spending a most pleasant vacation here and in Michigan. He is an old "I Will" boy and had the time of his life while in the city which favors he hopes to be able to return, when the Windy City crowd comes to the "Show-me" state next month for the convention. A number of his friends arranged a farewell party for him on Saturday, July 20, for the sake of old times and right after the eats were all placed at a nice quiet spot near the river one of his best friends accidentally tipped over the table and spoiled the whole affair. Eddie took the accident good naturedly but the rest of the crowd were so disappointed that they will never forgive the guilty one.

Mention the American Florist when writing.

Joe Erringer, of the Zech & Mann force, is back on the job after enjoying a two-weeks vacation. Fred Ottenbacher, who has charge of the roses at this establishment, left July 22 to enjoy a vacation to be spent at River-view Park, White City and the Municipal pier. Fred is some traveler, and has seen a good part of the country. Last year he spent his vacation in California (avenue).

C. L. Washburn says that the new rose, Columbia, will eventually replace Mrs. George Shawyer at the Bassett & Washburn greenhouses. Lieutenant E. B. Washburn, who is at present stationed at Vancouver Barracks, where he has charge of 160 recruits, writes that he is in the best of health, and that he and his men are cutting spruce for airplanes.

J. A. Budlong is cutting a good supply of particularly fine Golden Glow chrysanthemums, which are about one month earlier than last year, when the first of the season were also offered by this firm. Extra fancy gladioli and Columbia roses are included in the offerings at this house.

Paul Richmond is back on the job at Chas. A. Samuelson's store after enjoying a well-earned vacation of which he received no mention. Some of his friends say that he was in Florida and others in California but they did not specify whether they meant "street" or "avenue."

Joseph Ziska, Jr., and family are back from a pleasant vacation spent in touring the surrounding country by auto. Raymond Ziska, who expects to join the colors in the near future, is spending a well earned vacation with relatives in Iowa.

Jim Kidwell, who enlisted in the aviation branch of the United States army some time ago, has received a commission as second lieutenant. He visited his many friends here July 20, and is the picture of health.

Walter Juerjens, eldest son of Bruno Jeurjens, Peoria, who has been spending part of his vacation here, looking into the operation of various trade establishments, returned home July 23.

E. C. Pruner is in again with a bundle of new orders for Foehlmann Bros. Co. He will attend the St. Louis convention in August, making the trip by auto with Allie Zech and wife.

Mrs. Paul M. Paley, wife of the well-known florist of Little Rock, Ark., returned home this week after spending a delightful vacation with friends and relatives in this city.

A. Henderson, H. N. Bruns, A. C. Kohlbrand and Geo. Wienhoeber, who spent a few days fishing at Eagle Springs, Wis., last week, report an enjoyable outing.

John Bruckner has joined the home guards and surprised his friends in the market when he appeared with his uniform on one day last week.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner are handling a good supply of fancy asters in addition to quite a collection of other outdoor seasonable stock.

A. Lange and wife are at Mt. Clemens, Mich., for a brief vacation. Homer Lange returned from Saugatuck last week.

A meeting of the Wm. H. Kidwell creditors will be held at 53 Jackson boulevard, July 29, at 10:00 a. m.

George Mohn, representing Vaughan's Seed Store, is back from a successful out-of-town business trip.

Albert Koehler, of the American Bulb Co., and wife are enjoying a boat trip on the great lakes.

Tom Wolfe, of Waco, Tex., stopped off here a couple of days this week returning from the east.

H. J. W. Richmond and family of Sullivan, Ind., are spending their vacation in this city.

E. C. Amling and son Harold left this week for California on a brief visit.

The following editorial, which is good advertising for the trade, appeared in the Herald and Examiner, July 23, under the heading of "Do it now": There's an old man—a nice, tender, loving and beloved old man—out at Alexian Brothers', who has been at the point of death for many weeks. Several times it has seemed that this beloved old man would pass on. If he had died we would have read with much interest his life story; we would have turned aside from the busy, war-day life to look for the last time at the pictures of him in the newspapers; we would have soliloquized something like, "It's too bad; the city needed him; he was a fine man"; our city officials and our leading citizens would have put on their long coats and high hats and the papers would have recorded, truthfully, that it was "one of the largest funerals Chicago ever witnessed." We would have spent hundreds of dollars for imposing floral pieces, and noted men left behind would have added their eloquent tributes to the story. This loving old man is fighting a game fight for his life. Why not pay him some of those tributes now? Mr. City Official and Mr. Noted Citizen, why not drop by the hospital in your car some afternoon and let those sleepless, vigilant relatives—and possibly even the tender loving and beloved old man can be told that you called—know that you are interested in learning how Herman F. Schuetzler, your chief of police, is progressing in his long, formidable battle. Why not send some of the pretty flowers out to the hospital now—today, while he's still alive? Such a tribute might sway the scales away from Death and toward that for which Chief Schuetzler is fighting so valiantly—Life! Let "the Big Fellow" know now that his city appreciates his life work, appreciates the fact that in his long, honorable life in the hazardous career he chose, he often faced death to do his duty by those whose hired servant he was.

Allie Zech's many friends here and throughout the country will be more than pleased to read that he is now a half owner of the wholesale firm of Zech & Mann, of which he has been manager since the death of his father, the late John Zech, several years ago. Mr. Zech has worked hard to place his house in the front row and everyone in the trade joins in wishing him and the firm continued prosperity. Keeping everlastingly at it brings success, and if anyone was ever entitled to the fruits of his labor Allie surely is.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. never cut such a fine supply of summer roses, particularly Mrs. Chas. Russell, as it is cutting right now and which are cleaning up nicely right along, considering general conditions. Business has been good all through July so far in the cut flower department, and in the supply department the sales are also away ahead of the same period of 1917.

Wietor Bros are booking a large number of orders for field-grown carnation plants, which are in exceptionally brisk demand and reputed to be scarce in this vicinity. Roses are in good supply at this store and include a fine grade of Mrs. Chas. Russell.

Percy Jones, Inc. is handling fancy asters and gladioli in quantity in addition to his usual line. The shipping trade is keeping up remarkably well at this house with the total sales so far this month comparing most favorably with those of last year.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are handling gypsophila in quantity again this year of the same fine quality as that offered last season. Mr. Vaughan and family are thinking seriously of attending the St. Louis convention.

Peter Reinberg reports that the early demand for field-grown carnation plants was so brisk that he is already sold out in all varieties.

E. H. Goldenstein, formerly manager of the bulb department at Vaughan's Seed Store is now a mess sergeant at Camp Grant.

Paul Amling, of Maywood, who is with the colors, is a member of Co. C, 35th infantry, now stationed at Nogales, Arizona.

Herman F. Schuettler, through his attorney, filed suit in the superior court, July 23, to recover $31,000 on notes issued in February, 1914, by Aaron T. F. Pyfer Eva G. Pyfer Peter A. Olsem and Emily L. Olsem. The notes originally totaled $43,000. Henry E. Philpott indorsed all of them. Three of $4,000 each have been paid.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is supplying its customers with a choice grade of Mrs. Chas. Russell roses, which they are featuring in large quantities each day. Manager Paul Klingsporn has signified his intention of attending the St. Louis convention.

The annual summer show of the North Shore Horticultural Society is in progress at Lake Forest as we go to press, July 24. It is understood the exhibits will be sold at auction for the benefit of the Red Cross at the close of the show.

Mrs. Horton, of the Bassett & Washburn office force, acknowledges a pleasant visit from her son, Roland, who is with the 333rd Heavy Field Artillery, now stationed at Sparta, Wis.

There is now available for use on the wind shields of the automobiles of this city, a poster offering transportation hospitality in these words: "Soldiers and sailors ride with me free."

Frank Jarel of the Zech & Mann force will join the colors in the near future, having successfully passed the physical examination before his draft board. Mrs. Charles A. Samuelson left recently for Wendell, Ida., to join Mr. Samuelson who has an extensive ranch in that vicinity and always spends the summer there.

Mrs. Geo. A. Kuhl was still at the Presbyterian hospital, July 24, getting along nicely.

Visitors: Wm. Hembreker and wife, Springfield; J. W. Shrader, Mattson, returning home from Boston, Mass.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The regular date falling on July 4, good gathering at Karthausers' grove, President Lautenschlager in the chair. Louis R. Finnermann, 30 E. Randolph street, was proposed for membership.

The transportation committee submitted a list of trains to St. Louis, the S. A. F. convention city, with the result that the Chicago & Eastern Illinois railroad was chosen for the trip of members and friends, leaving Dearborn station Monday, August 19, at 11:30 p. m., due St. Louis the following morning at 7:37 o'clock. The rates of fare one way, including tax, are: In coach, $9.41; in sleeping car or parlor car, $10.97. There is no party rate and no reduction for round trip. Pullman fares, tax included, are as follows: Lower berth, $2.20; upper berth, $1.76; drawing room, $7.70; parlor car seat, $1.10. Regarding sleeping car accommodations and all further particulars, address Sam M. Childs, general agent, passenger department, 108 West Adams street, Chicago. Telephone Harrison 5100. Parties from other points passing through the city are invited to join Chicago delegation on this train. President Lautenschlager has appointed the following committee to receive visitors calling here enroute to the convention: Paul R. Klingsporn, John Michaelson, W. J. Keimel, Otto H. Ameling and T. E. Waters. It is understood this committee will name a convention booster party at its first meeting, to be held this week.

Letters of the New York Florists' Club and its protest to the federal horticultural board against the proposed embargo on imports of florists' plants, such as palms, azaleas, bay trees, rhododendrons, box, roses, etc., were read. Leonard H. Vaughn, R. J. Windler and the monthly meeting was postponed to the 18th inst., when there was a others discussed the matter, but the club thought it best not to take any action which might be construed as interfering with the government in the winning of the war.

At the close of the business meeting, Chairman Waters of the good-of-the-club committee had a liberal lunch served and a general discussion of present conditions in the trade followed, Mr. Waters officiating as chairman.

Emil Buehrer thought the enforced lower greenhouse temperatures would render growth of stock slower, with fewer flowers of better quality, which should bring higher prices.

August Poehlmann said that coal is $1.50 to $2 per ton higher than last year, and that this, with the constantly increasing shortage of labor, rendered present prices of stock too low.

N. J. Wietor protested against the exploitation of chrysanthemums and other California flowers on this market. John Michaelson maintained there was nothing to fear from California competition.

R. E. Moore presented a paper on fuel conservation, which will be found elsewhere in this issue.

Peter Pearson exhibited some good samples of his home-grown tulip bulbs. Eddie Hunt, formerly florist, now in the navy, rendered several solos which brought down the house.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—Miles S. Hencle, florist, has filed a petition in bankruptcy. A hearing of creditors has been set for September 3, at 10 a. m., before the District Court for the Northern District of New York at Norwich.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.—The Nassau County Horticultural Society has announced that its dahlia exhibition will be held October 2 and the chrysanthemum show October 31-November 1. Harry Goodband, Glen Cove, N. Y., is the secretary.

LOCAL TRADE WELL ORGANIZED.

With the war forcing all lines to tighter business methods, the florists of this city are not found behind in the procession, the increasing cost of coal, labor and material having brought them to a realization that to survive they must catch up the loose ends and do business on a basis that will permit of no slipshod methods and the accumulation of a lot of bad accounts. To this end, the florists have one after another joined the Associated Retailers of Omaha, a large organization composed of merchants in various lines of trade, which maintains, in connection with other service, a complete credit reporting system of the people of the city, the card index covering 167,000 individuals, customers of the various retail establishments. In this organization the florist, after becoming a member, has ready access to this valuable information, which can be secured immediately over the telephone when credit is requested, from the girl at the credit bureau, with the card index of practically every person of importance in the city at her elbow. Many of the large retail establishments have direct wires to the office of the association for this purpose.

SEVERE DROUGHT FINALLY BREAKS.

This section has been visited by a severe drought of several weeks' duration which has resulted almost disastrously to vegetation of all kinds. Corn, potatoes and tomatoes—in fact, all garden crops narrowly escaped being burnt up, but at the critical moment there came a copious shower, which did much to avert dire calamity. The florists did not suffer as much as might be expected,

:- GRAB 'EM QUICK! :-

ed, for all were supplied with abundant water. The supply of flowers is somewhat better than it has been, although much stock is being shipped in from more favored sections. Carnations are entirely a thing of the past. Roses are coming in a little better. Lilies have practically stopped blooming. There are a few rubrums on the market, however, and asters are not in great supply. In the main, business has been good, unusually so, in fact. Quite a few weddings help out the situation, more than is generally the case at this season.

NOTES.

Many of the growers' payrolls have grown to unusual figures due to the advance of about 40 per cent in wages during the last year, and is a matter for serious consideration. Much of the winter's coal supply is on hand, and wood is also coming into the line of thought, if cost and price of storage do not make it prohibitive.

The Joy Floral Co. reports a very good midsummer business with a fair supply of flowers. Funeral work has been especially brisk. This firm is now offering quantities of gladioli in all colors, many good roses and rubrums.

Geny Bros. are enjoying a fine trade, principally in funeral work. Roses, gladioli and asters are plentiful stocks here. They still have a few lilies. The drought was seriously felt at their establishment.

RETAIL DEMAND ACTIVE.

Market conditions underwent a complete change during the latter half of July. There had been a great shortage of stock, but at this time there are more flowers of all varieties than the market can absorb. This condition was brought about by the action of some of the local growers in so timing their stocks as to have plenty of cut flowers to meet the unusual demand of this year. Under normal conditions, this city is a winter resort; this year no one is going away, and the activity in the stores continues at an unusual gait. Retail business keeps good. Roses, equal to winter-time production, are bringing up to $12 per hundred. Red and Pink Radiance are coming in with fine foliage and long stems. Aaron Ward is to be had in quantities at $4 to $6. Ophelia is another of the popular varieties and Sunburst is also a good seller. These bring anywhere from $3 to $10 per hundred, according to quantity. Orchids clean up daily. There are just about enough to go around at 60 to 75 cents each. Easter lilies are extra fine and move at $12 and $15 per hundred. Water lilies are quite popular, and larger quantities have been sold this year than ever before. Carnations are fair for this time of the year and continue to bring up to $20 per thousand. They are, however, being replaced to no little extent by Rose of Sharon in funeral and other work. A few callas are still to be had, but this flower is going off the market fast.

NOTES.

Considerable attention was attracted to the century plant at the Botanic Garden when it bloomed last week. Superintendent George W. Hess invited members of Congress and local florists to visit the gardens while the plant, Agave americana, was in blossom.

George A. Leissler, Jr., who is employed in the business of his father, was last week married to Miss Marie Katherine Cowan, of this city. The Leissler store is located at 2100 Pennsylvania avenue, N. W., and the greenhouses are at Halls Hill, Va.

Louis J. Hohman, of the Gude Bros. store, is away on a two weeks' vacation. B. F. L.

FAIR BUSINESS WELL DISTRIBUTED.

Considering the season, trade maintains a fairly good tone, especially as regards funeral work, with orders quite evenly distributed. Stock continues to arrive in good shape and it is comparatively easy to fill orders for window and store decorations. There is an ample supply of larkspurs, gaillardias, coreopsis, achilleas and gypsophilas, while gladioli and asters are expected in quantity soon.

NOTES.

Vacations are the order of the day and most of the local establishments are running short handed. J. H. Dunlop has been at Windsor with the Grand Lodge of the A. F. & A. M.; George Geraghty has left with a party for his summer home at Sans Souci; J. A. Neal and wife are at their farm at Lorne Park; Mrs. Moore is visiting in Buffalo and S. A. Frost is enjoying an auto tour.

The convention of the Canadian Horticultural Society at Ottawa next month is being looked forward to by a number from this city who are planning to make the trip by auto. This should prove an enjoyable outing, two days and one night being required for the journey.

The annual outing of the retail florists proved a gala event. Weather conditions were ideal and there was a large attendance. In the field sports there were 15 well contested events, and dancing followed the refreshments.

There is very little building being done in this locality. Growers can get no promises from the fuel controllers, and with glass at $20 per box, few care to take any chances.

GOOD SALES FOR BETTER GRADES.

About the same demand as last week, but a heavier supply, expresses the situation during the past six days. Stocks that have become more plentiful are, first, roses which in all colors are considerably in excess of the demand. The quality is better than ever for the season. Gladioli are beginning to accumulate, particularly the ordinary and mixed colors. There is still a call for all the choice sorts at good prices. Assters are now a factor, some choice stock being offered. Outdoor flowers are for the most part cut too green; they should be allowed to open and come very nearly to their best before being cut. Stocks of carnations still hold out wonderfully well, but in these hot days will hardly last a great while longer. Lilies should be a good crop for the growers who have them, as prices have been record high for the season; $12.50 to $15 per hundred, prices now prevailing, have a very "creamy" tinge at any season. Snapdragons, achilleas, larkspurs, cornflowers, feverfews and sweet peas were never better than this season, and owing to the short supply, sell up close at top prices. Some superb cattleyas are seen, and a little lily of the valley. Asparagus appears to sell as well now as in the winter, at the regulation price of 50 cents per bunch.

IS IT CHEAPER TO GROW OR BUY?

Leo Niessen, who has occasional heart-to-heart talks with many of his customers, finds that a condition, which on the face of it looks ideal, does not always, or in fact in most cases, work out. He refers to the grower-retailer, who by producing and retailing his stock, gets two profits. In a small town, with little or no competition, the plan works fairly well, the customers taking what is offered in the rather limited stock. When, however, there is room for competition, and a wide-awake, purely retail dealer opens up, who carries or delivers whatever is seasonable in the market, then the grower, to hold his trade, has to carry additional lines, which interfere with his greenhouse stock. Frequently at various seasons he is overstocked with too much of this or that, which cannot be used to advantage, while often at times of scarcity he has to purchase at high prices. The retailer controls his supply, buying only for his daily needs, securing in the choice of the market, stock grown by specialists at current prices, which is at times below cost of production. Mr. Niessen believes that if grower-retailers would charge their store or retail department with all stock used, at wholesale prices, they would find out something that would enable them to conduct their business much more economically. Less waste and better prices would surely result from such system.

THE SHELLEN GREENHOUSES.

Uncle Sam is a very aggressive man these days. He is erecting very large storehouses in South Philadelphia, and has an eye on the four acres of ground now occupied by the greenhouses of Mrs. John A. Shellen at 27th and Magazine lane, which place has been surveyed and is expected to be taken on lease at any time. This ground ad-

WITH THE WHOLESALEERS.

Seven carloads of wooden and corrugated cut flower shipping boxes have been laid in by the Leo Niessen Co. The wooden box material is all cut, ready for making into the various sizes. Enough light and heavy paper is also in stock which with the boxes will see them through until this time next year. GROWERS' STOCK SCARCE.

Clarence W. Liggitt, wholesale dealer in florists' plant stock, finds field carnations to be very scarce. Popular varieties, such as White and Rose Pink Enchantment, Enchantress Supreme and Pink Delight, are practically out of the market, which is unusual so early in the season. Chrysanthemum plants have been in great demand, the market now being entirely cleaned up. Orders for 45,000 plants were turned down the past week. The demand from Canada for the above stocks was surprising, due, Mr. Liggitt believes, to the scarcity of labor in propagating and handling the young plants.

NOTES.

Charles E. Meehan is of the opinion that retailers had best trim their sails for much higher prices the coming season. Scarcity of labor will reduce much of the productive space in greenhouses, the crops from which will be far from normal, with only the summer atmosphere afforded from 50 per cent of the usual coal supply.

Paul Berkowitz finds summer business unusually good, there being an extra demand for all kinds of crepe and other artificial flowers. Their new brilliant baskets are making a hit.

A. Blanc has resigned his position with the H. F. Mitchell Co. and will continue his work as draughtsman and illustrator at his own account.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. VanZant, of Newport News, were recent visitors.

K.

Fredericton, N. B.

This section is experiencing a wet summer with much dull, sunless weather, bright days being the exception. June was cold and the crops look very rank and overgrown. The hay crop is reported above the average and new potatoes are in the market at $5 per barrel. Strawberries have been in limited supply at 22 cents per box. Money appears to be plentiful but help of all kinds is very scarce. We are now putting in our coal supply at $9.50 per ton; also wood, as there appears to be no hard coal in sight. What little is on hand brings $15 per ton. Funerals and hospital orders form the bulk of the demand for flowers.

AVERAGE MIDSUMMER DEMAND.

There are various opinions in the wholesale district relating to the business of the past week depending on the state of mind of the men who talk. We believe it is correct to state that it was an average or typical midsummer week, no better or worse than many others that have gone before. As a rule, though occasionally there are exceptions, there is a better demand for good than for inferior stock, which gives rise to different opinions as to the condition of business. Much warmer weather, particularly in the latter part of the week, brought an increased supply of flowers, particularly noticeable in asters and gladioli. The asters were welcomed by the buyers, but there was already enough gladioli to go around. There was also an increase in the supply of roses, and only A1 stock can be said to have brought good prices—good for summertime, be it understood. A fine quality of the rose, Francis Scott Key, is on the market and specials bring $25 per 100. The arrivals of Columbia continue to increase. Of this rose, a retailer said recently: "When most of the other roses get wide open they are done, but Columbia will open wide and remain good for a day or two." Considering it is summertime, that is a good recommendation. There was considerable funeral work during the past week, which kept lilies moving. On account of the high price and poor quality of lily of the valley, many retailers seem to have decided to and as near as possible do, get along without it. Gypsophila has been quite plentiful and has been made useful as a substitute. There has been no surplus of orchids and C. gigas wholesale at from 75 cents to $1 per flower. Of course, small and inferior stock of other varieties has been much cheaper. There is always a demand for good sweet peas, but inferior stock is slow. In the various minor stocks, such as coreopsis, gaillardias, zinnias and delphiniums, there is always some movement.

July 22.—The weather is very hot, and the supply of stock continues to increase, but the market is sluggish.

FUNERAL OF JAMES DEAN.

Solemn and impressive services were held for the late James Dean by the members of Grant Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of which he had once been commander, in their hall, 489 Washington avenue, Brooklyn, on the afternoon of July 19. The deceased was laid to rest in the uniform of the order which he had so worthily honored both as a soldier and public-spirited citizen. The casket was draped with the national colors, on which sprays of white lilies had been placed. About 25 veterans, a remnant of his former comrades in arms, marched with firm steps into the hall and stood at attention on each side of the casket at the beginning of the service. Worthy tributes were paid to the memory of Mr. Dean. President Totty and former President Robert Craig of the Society of American Florists were in attendance, and the following past presidents of the New York Florists' Club: Alex. S. Burns, Walter F. Sheridan, W. H. Siebrecht, Sr.; W. A. Manda, Joseph A. Matana, H. Duckham and A. L. Miller. President Totty is also a past president of the club. Other members of the S. A. F. present were: John Westcott, Philadelphia, Pa.; Paul and Henry Dailledouze, Brooklyn, N. Y.; A. T. De La Mare, New York, and A. F. Faulkner of THE AMERICAN FLORIST. There was also a large attendance of the relatives of Grand Army men. Interment was in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn. Services had also been held at the family home in Freeport, N. Y., on the previous evening. Many fine floral tributes were noticed, among them being a

H. Bayersdorfer & Co., 1129-31 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Lancaster County Florists' Association.

With bright skies overhead, a touch of real summer weather, and about 125 people out for a good time, the picnic at Ayonvale, the farm of ex-President E. F. Barr, could not well be anything but a success, and a great success it was. As out-of-town guests we had with us T. J. Nolan, of New York, Philadelphia, North Tonawanda, Scranton and Lancaster; D. J. Keohane, of the Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; C. U. Liggitt, of Philadelphia; Ralph Eaby, from the Pennsylvania Seed Farm, Paradise, Pa., and E. C. Marshall, of Kennett Square, with his wife, daughter, sister and mother. W. F. Therkildson, of the W. Atlee Eupree Co., and S. S. Pennock, who expected to be with us, wired their regrets.

The formal garden was the first attraction, and this is improving every year with the hardy end of it, and both a delight and an education to florists. The beds of petunia, verbena and Heliotrope Bruantii were just in their prime. The only spot not in its full beauty was the roses. The second attraction was the acres upon acres of evergreens in every stage of growth, from the rooted cutting or seedling, to the finished product waiting for a buyer. To name them would be to issue a catalogue. Sufficient to say that they are in good shape, and that the deciduous trees are equally good. The peony acreage has been increased, and a start made with perennial phlox that will no doubt eventually be planted by the acre. Several very good seedlings have been developed among the phlox, two of which will no doubt be heard from later on.

The farm contains some 13 acres of tobacco, immense tracts of corn, some of which is just coming up, and Mr. Barr was asked if it was intended for next year's crop. The stables contain a fine herd of Holstein cattle, and altogether it is a model in a community of model farms.

Coming back to the house and lawn, the sports were conducted under the direction of Mesdames B. F. Barr, Albert M. Herr, Elmer Weaver and Lemon Landis, with the following results: Little girls' running race, won by Ruth Baer; little boys' running race, won by John Landis; larger boys' running race, won by Robert Snodgrass; young men's running race, won by Paul Weaver; hopping race, girls, won by Francis Fine; hopping race, boys, won by Harry Rohrer; wheelbarrow contest, girls, won by Esther Kreider; wheelbarrow contest, boys, won by D. Irwin Herr; throwing ball, won by Elizabeth Hershey. Suitable prizes were awarded for these contests, and the older people enjoyed themselves with bowling on the green, croquet, quoits and card playing, with a few sitting on the grass discussing the fuel situation and kindred subjects.

About 4 p. m. we heard the whistles blowing and the bells pealing in Lancaster, and a rush was made for the telephone to get the news, which turned out to be the first decisive victory for our boys on the other side. The day July 18, 1918, was especially enjoyable. At 6 o'clock the lunch was indulged in, some in family groups and some in community style, all having an abundance, and the club supplied the coffee and ice cream to complete the meal. About 9

p. m. found us bidding our host and hostess a fond farewell, and hoping that the next picnic would be an equal success. This was meeting night, but there was no business. It was all deferred until we meet at the home of President Elmer Weaver, August 15.

NORMAL TRADE AFTER GOOD SEASON.

From all reports, the volume of business during the past season far surpassed all expectations, taking into consideration the unsettled conditions. At the present time trade is about normal; with outdoor plants now blooming, there is very little activity in cut flowers, outside of funeral work and an occasional decoration. Gladioli are being offered in large quantities by the farmers on the local market, which will tend to make a glut on them until their supply is exhausted. About the only blooms being offered by the local retailers at this time are roses, carnations, sweet peas, snapdragons and gladioli.

NOTES.

The main topic for discussion among florists in this locality is the fuel conservation regulation. While this regulation may seem to be very severe at this time, we think that in due time it will prove to be one of the most beneficial things that could have happened to awaken the florists to the fact that they must devise ways and means by which they can economize on their consumption of fuel, and at the same time figure how to keep the cost of production at the very lowest possible mark. It is very evident that the time has come when the florist must carry on his business on a business basis or he will soon be so far in the background that it will be useless for him to make an effort to continue in the game. From all evidence, there was a time when the florist apparently was able to get by without employing any system or tact in running his business, but that day is gone. The time is here when one must apply every ingenuity at his command, or the success desired will never be achieved.

:: BIG BARGAIN ::

See Wit bold's Ad., Page 82.

Canadian Horticultural Society.

In addition to the already interesting programme announced for the twenty-first annual meeting of the Canadian Horticultural Society at the Normal school, Ottawa, Ont., August 13-16, mentioned in our issue of July 13, page 1264, a paper by E. B. Hamilton, London, Ont., entitled, "Extension of Credit," and another by H. Dilleuth, Toronto, on "Decoration Day," will be features of the evening session of the first day.

The entertainment programme arranged by the committee, consisting of R. H. Wright, Charles Craig, W. T. Macoun, Kenneth McDonald and C. Scrim promises to be most enjoyable. On Wednesday, the afternoon will be devoted to a trip to the Dominion experimental farm where the guests will be entertained at luncheon by the professors in charge. A bowling tournament has been arranged for Thursday morning and in the afternoon the visitors will be the guests on a trip to Aylmer, visiting the establishment of R. H. Wright, where sports will be held on the lawn. The annual banquet will be held in the evening at Chateau Laurier. On Friday there will be drives through the park system and a visit to Government House and other places of interest, followed by a theater party in the evening.

The officers of the association are: E. J. Hayward, Montreal, president; George Douglas, Toronto, first vice-president; E. B. Hamilton, London, second vice-president; Herbert J. Eddy, 4425 Sherbrook street, Westmount, secretary-treasurer. B. Everest, Bank street, Ottawa, is superintendent of the trade exhibit.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-seventh annual meeting will be held June, 1919.

ONION SETS.—The harvesting of the main crop in the Chicago district has begun with prospects for a fair yield.

FRENCH BULBS, against which there was an embargo in England last year, may be imported into that country this season.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade July 24 were as follows: Timothy, $7.00 to $8.00 per 100 pounds.

EDWIN B. NORTHRUP, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn., was at Chicago July 24 on his way home from Detroit with a new Cadillac.

VISITED CHICAGO: Howard M. Earl, of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., en route to the Pacific Coast; Ralph M. Ward, New York; S. Arai, Yokohama, Japan.

NORTHRUP, KING & Co., of Minneapolis, Minn., have opened an office at 1610 Walker Bank Building, Salt Lake City, Utah, together with a warehouse and cleaning plant.

CLEVELAND, O.—The Templin-Crockett-Bradley Co. has announced that, effective July 20, all purchases and payments will be made under that name instead of the Children's Flower Mission as in the past.

TOLEDO, O.—Clover gained 27½ cents, July 22, over the price on July 20, closing at $14.50. Cash timothy was also 10 cents higher at $4.30. September closed at $4.80, October $4.45, December $4.50, March $4.72½ and April $4.70.

DUTCH BULB SHIPMENTS.—The Holland-America Line write from New York, July 18: "We have not yet received an answer to our communication to our offices in Rotterdam with relation to the prospective shipments of Holland bulbs from abroad."

The department of agriculture estimates the bean crop at 19,791,000 bushels, an increase of 5,000,000 bushels; the beet sugar crop at 6,247,000 tons, an increase of 267,000 tons; and the peanut crop of 70,704,000 bushels, an increase of 19,500,000 bushels, all record crops.

A WRITER in the Melbourne Australasian expresses the opinion that the best white winter flowering sweet pea in that country is Icicle, this variety having been awarded the silver medal of the Sweet Pea Society of South Australia, the exhibit being made by F. H. Brunning, Melbourne.

Lily-Bulb Prospects In Bermuda.

Consul General Ethelbert Watts reports that the Bermudian director of agriculture estimates that this season's production of lily bulbs will total 1,200 crates, as against a little over 1,000 crates produced last year.

The growers are asking an advance of 50 per cent over last year's prices.

Tax Multiplication Grave Danger.

A grave danger in the present policy of the treasury is that taxes will be so needlessly multiplied as to become more vexatious than productive. By the income and war-profit levy, if clearly drawn and equitably applied, it should be possible in one transaction to collect practically the whole of the extraordinary war revenue. To anything short of confiscation, business can soon adjust itself. But business must suffer if, in addition to such charges, it is compelled to carry burdens especially devised as hindrances. While this war is in progress no tax should be levied to destroy anything at home or abroad except the power of the Prussian autocracy.—New York World.

Expediting Seed Imports.

To inform seedsmen of the best methods of importing seeds, the seeds stocks committee of the United States department of agriculture has taken up with the war trade board and the United States shipping board the steps necessary to obtain government assistance promptly. An import license is required for the importation of seeds. Application blanks for import licenses may be obtained from the bureau of imports, war trade board, Washington, D. C., or at branch offices of the war trade board in various cities. The seed stocks committee is to advise with the war trade board as to the importance of seeds proposed to be imported in cases of embargoes by foreign countries.

Washington Rulings and Regulations.

The war trade board has by a new ruling extended the back-haul privilege under the general policy of restricted imports, hitherto applying only to convenient ports in Europe, to apply under the same conditions to convenient Mediterranean ports in Africa. As to which ports are to be considered as convenient within the meaning of this regulation will be determined by the shipping control committee. Ports of Spain and Portugal may be construed to include adjacent islands in the Mediterranean sea and the Atlantic ocean north of the Grand Canaries belonging to those countries. West Italian and Sicilian ports include ports in Sardinia and other Italian islands lying to the westward of the west coast of Italy.

The director general of railroads has ordered that carriers subject to federal control shall sell at public auction to the highest bidder, without advertisement, carload and less than carload lots of non-perishable freight that has been refused or is unclaimed by the consignee, and has been on hand for a period of 60 days. The consignee, as described in the waybill, shall be given due notice by mail of the proposed sale. The place of the sale is to be determined by the carrier. The net proceeds, if any, after deducting freight and other legitimate expenses, will be paid to the owner on proof of ownership.

B. F. L.

New York Seed Trade.

A. R. Kennedy, formerly at 156 West 34th street, is now finely located at 216 West 34th street, nearer to the Pennsylvania Terminal. He reports a good season's business. Joseph M. Brown, who has been his store manager for the past six years, has enlisted in the navy and expects to go to the training school at Pelham Bay. He is a clever young man and we wish him success.

Patrick O'Mara, of Peter Henderson & Co., is on an extended vacation in the Adirondacks.

Corn and Vine Seed Crops.

Waterloo, Neb., July 17, 1918. This vicinity has been visited by one of the most beneficial summer rains ever known. Corn was getting in bad shape, especially south of the Platte river, much of it curling seriously, and as this crop is now at its critical stage, that is, just shooting ears, the moisture which we have received was a very important factor and growers are feeling well over the prospect. The acreage of sweet corn is not as large as might be desired, although there is some independent acreage. General crops of Dent corn are in splendid shape.

Acreages on squash and pumpkin are light but the prospects on what has been planted are quite favorable.

At Rocky Ford, Colo., the prospects on cucumber, cantaloupe and beans are fully up to the average, and taking it all in all, there should be fair crops, although there is no excess acreage in sight.

New Early-Flowering or Winter-Blooming GIANT PANSIES

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering and its unusual hardiness, which enables them to withstand quite severe Winters and to bloom right on into the Summer. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant.

14. WINTER SUN. Golden yellow, eye. 16. CELESTIAL QUEEN. Light or sky blue.

15. ICE KING. Silvery white, with eye. 17. CHARM OF MARCH. Dark velvety blue.

18. MIXED. The above four colors with other shades and variations. Each color separate or mixed.

500 seeds, 25c; 1000 seeds, 40c; 1/4 oz., $1.10; 1/2 oz., $2.00; oz., $7.50.

MIGNONETTE

NEW YORK MARKET. This is an extra choice strain of Mignonette for greenhouse culture. Our seed is greenhouse-grown, raised by a most careful grower. Trade pkt., 1000 seeds, 50c; ½ oz., $1.00; oz., $7.

PANSIES.

VAUGHAN'S INTERNATIONAL MIXTURE. This is one of the Specialties that has established the reputation of Vaughan's Flower Seeds and one which we maintain most carefully. Trade pkt., 50c; ½ oz., $1.50; ¼ oz., $5.00; oz., $10.00.

VAUGHAN'S GIANT MIXTURE. This mixture includes the richest reds, coppers and bronzes, together with the most delicate rose and pink shadings, all the distinct colors of Trimardeau and the splendid Cassier strain. Trade pkt., 25c; ½ oz., 75c; oz., $5.00; ¼ lb., $18.00.

VAUGHAN'S CUT FLOWER MIXTURE. This mixture is put up by ourselves and contains mostly light colored sorts. We have sold this mixture for several seasons to some of our Chicago cut flower growers. Trade pkt., 25c; ½ oz., 60c; oz., $4.00.

NEW EARLY-FLOWERING GIANT. The new strain produces its giant flowers about four weeks earlier than other known types. In March, when the old type pansies hardly show any buds the plants of the new strain bore from three to five of their giant flowers. Early Flowering Giant White, Yellow, Light Blue, Dark Blue and Mixed. Trade pkt. (500 seeds), 25c; ½ oz., 80c.

CHICAGO PARKS BEDDING MIXTURE. This is a mixture made by ourselves from 20 different and distinct varieties of this type. While the flowers of this strain do not grow as large as those of the Giant Pansies they excel them by a much greater number of flowers to a plant. Trade pkt., 15c; ¼ oz., 35c; oz., $1.15; ¼ lb., $4.00.

VAUGHAN'S P. P. (Popular Price) MIXTURE. This mixture like all "P. P." mixtures, is made up by ourselves from separate colors and strains of the Giant and Chicago Parks Bedding types and will furnish a large variety of colors with a good proportion of giant flowers. Trade pkt., 20c; ½ oz., 35c; oz., $2.00; 4 ozs., $7.00.

H. W. Selby, Philadelphia, Pa., President;
C. W. Waid, Grand Rapids, Mich., Vice-President; S. W. Severance, Louisville, Ky., Secretary; Eugene Davis, Grand Rapids, Mich., Treasurer.

BOSTON, MASS.—A community market for the disposal of surplus products of 30,000 war gardens will be opened in Horticultural hall, July 31. Applications for space should be addressed to W. L. Terhune, 29 Mason street.

KANKAKEE, ILL.—The D. F. Harrison Co. has sold its range devoted to vegetables to W. B. Davis, of Aurora, and R. R. Davis of Morrison, Ill., who will incorporate under the name of the Davis-Kankakee Co. Raymond Baird will remain as manager.

THE Ontario department of agriculture, Toronto, under the title "Mushrooms of Ontario," has issued Bulletin 263, by R. E. Stone, Ph. D., containing much of interest concerning common edible and poisonous mushrooms, their distinguishing characteristics, growth, food value, etc.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, July 23.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, 75 cents; celery, crate 50 cents; head lettuce, 2-dozen, $1.50; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.00; tomatoes, 4 baskets, 50 to 75 cents.

New York, July 22.—Celery (state), per bunch, 25 to 60 cents; cucumbers, $1.00 to $2.75 per basket; mushrooms, 80 cents to $2.40 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 10 to 12 cents; lettuce, per package, 50 cents to $2.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, 50 cents to $1.00.

Turnips.

This promises to turn out one of the shortest crop years on record, at least in our vicinity (Ohio). We have never seen the market in its present condition—never in 30 years. Anything at all edible will sell, and at a high price, showing the enormous demand for food and also the unbalanced condition of our country—and insufficient number of producers. Combined with high priced seeds of doubtful quality, short labor supply and insufficient quantities of manure and fertilizers, we have so far had a shortage of moisture too early in the season, causing a tremendous shortage. This lack of moisture has prevented a great deal of replanting or succession cropping of vegetables and berries, and at this date there is not much left that can be done.

One of the best late crops is turnips. The old adage, "Sow your turnips in July, wet or dry," is pretty nearly right. However, on our exacting markets, much later sowings can be used. We draw the line at August 20 for Ohio. This date will mature a nice apple-size turnip about November 1, and this size will outsell the larger ones. We have known cases where parties were successful with such late sowings, clearing up more money than on their earlier crops. For several years now, turnips have ruled high—above $1 per bushel. These late crops are generally produced by broadcasting the seed upon land that has produced an earlier crop, such as peas, beans or potatoes. We should avoid radish and cabbage patches, as the same diseases and pests will attack the turnips.

The two enemies to turnips are black flea and green aphids. Where moisture is insufficient these two will generally destroy the crop. Since the installation of mechanical watering, we make it a practice to thoroughly soak the land before preparing for turnips. When in proper condition disc and harrow and sow the seed and this moisture will generally pull the crop through until cool weather comes in the fall. For this purpose we generally bring on one of our movable Skinner lines, and after the purpose is accomplished carry the line to another field. We have demonstrated that this method is a success, as a few pipe lines will go over a large area. For our market and for shipping, the Purple Top White Globe is the standard variety. Take care to sow thinly, or mix the seed with some filler, to reduce overseeding.

MARKETMAN.

War Gardens For Army.

The repeal of the old law which forbids the expenditure of money appropriated for the army for post gardens is being urged by Secretary of War Baker, the war industries board and the national war garden commission and a bill will be introduced by Chairman Dent of the house military committee to provide facilities for the cultivation of vacant areas at army camps and cantonments throughout the United States.

At Camp Dix, N. J., a 400-acre war garden has been under cultivation for some time. At its inception the national war-garden commission, conferred with the military authorities and straightway sent a train of motor trucks loaded with plows, seeds, fertilizer, harrows, hoes and all the other gardening tools needed to start off the kitchen garden for this healthy family of 48,000 soldiers in training. Plenty of farmer soldiers were in the camp, and itching for assignment to the plowing and harrowing jobs, where they could "show off" to the city soldiers how valuable farm training is to a warrior.

Nassau County Vegetable Show.

The June meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society held in Pembroke park, Glen Cove, N. Y., was featured by a fine display of vegetables. Among the exhibits which received awards at the hands of Judges S. J. Trepass, Robert Angus and F. H. Meech, were six tomatoes by J. W.

Everitt and 25 string beans, 25 pods of peas and an excellent collection of vegetables in 12 varieties by Frank Petroccia, six heads of cauliflower by Ernest Westlake and displays of lettuce by Arthur Smith, Louis Hubbard, A. J. Young and Ernest Westlake. Competition for the next meeting to be held August 14 will be for six ears of sweet corn and 25 pods of lima beans. Awards in the flower section were made to Ernest Westlake and Louis Hubbard for sweet peas and gladioli respectively.

HOUSTON, TEX.—Material for 14 new houses has been received from the Foley Greenhouse Manufacturing Co., Chicago, by the R. C. Kerr Co., and work is well under way in preparation for a lively fall trade.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex., President; J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa., Vice-President; Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass., Secretary and Counsel. Forty-four annual convention will be held at Chicago in 1919.

WINCHESTER, TENN.—E. W. Chattin, well known nurseryman, has been elected mayor of this city.

LEXINGTON, KY.—Richard R. Tacke, superintendent of parks for a number of years, has resigned.

DENISON, TEX.—The Southwestern Nurserymen's Association will hold its meeting in this city, September 17.

MICHIGAN Agricultural College, East Lansing, has issued Special Bulletin No. 88, covering experiments in spraying to control anthracnose on black raspberries.

HUNTSVILLE, ALA.—Henry B. Chase has been asked by business and professional men of the city to represent them as mayoralty candidate at the fall election.

NILES, CALIF.—George C. Roeding has taken over the total capital stock of the California Nursery Co., amounting to $400,000, in exchange for his nursery property here.

NEW YORK.—Isaac Hicks & Sons, of Westbury, L. I., have been awarded the contract for the landscape work at the 34th street Pennsylvania Central station in this city.

ALTA LOMA, TEX.—Forty acres in this vicinity will be planted with mulberry trees as an extensive experiment in silkworm culture. The trees were imported from Italy.

PORTLAND, ORE.—E. B. McFarland, president of the Portland Rose Society and an authority on roses in this section, died at Seaview, Wash., July 5, from heart disease.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—Chas. G. Adams, landscape architect, who is making a tour of the east, says general building and landscape work have been quite active on the Pacific coast this season.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—The annual meeting of the New York Federation of Horticultural Societies and Floral Clubs will be held here September 11. Particulars may be had upon application to Professor E. A. White, secretary, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.

Pacific Coast Association of Nurserymen.

The sixteenth annual convention of the Pacific Coast Association of Nurserymen was held at the Imperial Hotel, Portland, Ore., July 10-12. The meeting was well attended with good representation from the Pacific northwest and California. Elimination of waste and closer co-operation were urged as aids in terminating the war, and how the nursery business was affected by present conditions was the subject of considerable discussion. The elimination of many useless varieties was suggested as a war measure, and a list of such will be sent to members of the association. A model of a state law providing a uniform system of inspection was presented by H. A. Lewis, Portland, and approved by the members. A topic of more than usual interest was "Education of the Home Owner in Landscaping," presented by a committee led by W. C. Shawen, Seattle. Reports showed that the market for loganberries is such that the growers, especially those in Oregon, where their production has become an extensive industry, cannot keep up with the demand, and that the future for fruit juices is bright with indications that more acreage will be planted during the coming year. Lack of help and high wages caused a number of growers to curtail their plantings this season. The market for dried fruits is also better, according to M. R. Jackson, Fresno, Calif. From the present outlook, prices in general for nursery stock will be higher, as growers, instead of increasing acreage, are endeavoring to keep their product up to the highest quality.

A much enjoyed feature of the convention was the entertainment of the visitors on the afternoon of the second day at the home of Howard E. Weed at Beaverton until late in the evening.

At the closing session, officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows: C. J. Atwood, president; C. A. Tonnerson, Spokane, Wash., secretary-treasurer, re-elected; F. W. May, North Yakima, Wash.; A. Brownell, Portland, Ore.; W. R. Jackson, Fresno, Calif.; C. L. Trotter, Vancouver, B. C.; C. T. Hawkes, Caldwell, Idaho; P. A. Dix, Roy, Utah, and T. W. Mills, Helena, Mont, vice-presidents. Portland was again chosen as the meeting place for 1919.

H. C. T.

Barberry Eradication.

WHO WILL PAY THE OWNERS?

The United States department of agriculture, through the office of cereal investigations, Botany Annex, Urbana, Ill., states that the campaign for the eradication of Berberis vulgaris and B. purpurea by educating people regarding the menace to the wheat crop has been a success in Illinois, although the inspection has been rather slow due to the fact that an appropriation was not passed in time to get the survey work fully organized in the spring and much of the inspection has been done by volunteers. Regarding the destruction of the shrubs, it is stated that there is no law at present to compel eradication unless they are found to be infected, but it is planned to endeavor to have the state legislature pass such a statute next winter and nurserymen will also be urged to aid in this effort. Compensation for the destruction of the shrubs is a matter that will have to come through the state since the United States does not have the power to pay this. The matter, however, is so complicated that it would be a serious handicap on the work of the campaign to try to include it in the law, but if it was found advisable to do so, such action could be taken up and attempt made to get some settlement after the law was passed.

The state department of agriculture reports that it is cooperating with the federal department and with the State Council of Defense in the work of eradication, has given the federal inspectors the status of state inspectors, and where plants were found infected and owners unwilling to remove them otherwise, peremptory orders for their destruction were issued by the state department.

Georgia Fruit Tree Legislation.

There has just been filed in the Georgia legislature a bill (S. 214) to establish the measure of damages in those cases where fruit trees are not true to name. The purchaser may collect $3 per tree for each year between the date of purchase and the first day of November of the year in which such tree shall have borne fruit disclosing the variety thereof.

It is apparent that no Georgia nurseryman could sell any fruit trees if this bill were enacted. A thousand trees, taking seven years to bear fruit, would involve damages payable by the nurseryman of $21,000. Such measure of damages is absurd, and does not, in any event, represent the actual damages, as a review of cases decided by the courts will show.

This bill, if enacted, would render the more or less usual disclaimer of warranty clause employed by American nurserymen of no avail.

FLORIST'S PLANTS. Such as Azaleas, Rhododendrons, etc., are imported into and consumed in the United States to the value of $2,000,000 per annum. The cost of production does not exceed 20% of the wholesale selling price.

JERSEY CATTLE. A pure bred high grade Jersey cow produces $120 to $180 per annum in butter fat. The highest grade cows produce $300 to $350 per annum. Cost of keeping such animals runs from $60.00 to $80.00 per annum. No high grade Jersey Calf sells for less than $100 and from that up to $500 to $600 each. Extra fine pedigreed Bulls sell at $1000 and sometimes $5000 each.

Climatic Conditions.

Nowhere in the world are climatic and soil conditions as favorable for producing bulbs, florists' plants and Jersey Cattle as the coastal region of Northern California, Oregon and Washington.

Bulbs and plants grown in this region are of much better quality than those produced in any other part of the world. The costs of production and selling are less and the quality is superior in every respect.

The cost of producing butter fat will average 20 cents per pound less than in the colder parts of the United States and the quality is unexcelled and Humboldt County butter sells for the highest market price.

A United States Embargo on all bulb and plant importations from foreign countries will secure the entire American market to American producers and is a cogent reason why a great industry in growing these articles should be built upon the Pacific Coast.

There is abundant opportunity for the profitable investment of several million of dollars of Capital in such enterprises and this should be American Capital managed by American brains and energy and these industries should be distinctively American Industries.

THE COTTAGE GARDENS NURSERIES is an American concern controlled by American capital and managed wholly by Americans.

Its new issue of stock now being placed on the market affords an opportunity for the safe investment of $200,000 of American Capital which will earn the highest rate of dividend of any American Industrial Stock and this dividend will be permanent, in fact will increase after the war is over.

On January 1st the price will be increased to $150 per share.

SUMMER DULLNESS NOTICEABLE.

Summer lethargy has settled over the trade and the lack of transient business is noticeable. Cut flower stock of all kinds is plentiful, especially roses, and due to the cool nights, the quality has been unusually good. Summer American Beauties are showing fine form. Cornflowers, Gaillardias, monardias, Schizanthus, Shasta daisies, mignonette, gypsophilas, etc., are also good. Early gladioli have begun to arrive in limited numbers. Carnations are becoming very small, but are still the bread and butter of the trade. Blooming plants are entirely gone.

NOTES.

John Murrell has returned from an auto trip to Gettysburg, Pa. He is now making improvements at his range and planting carnations.

Geo. T. Boucher has returned from a fishing trip at Manitou. He is now showing fine early asters, gladioli and summer roses.

George Kramer is now with the Syrmington Forge Co., engaged in the manufacture of shells.

E. P. and Winfred Wilson, with their families, are taking motor trips to nearby points of interest.

Herbert Salmon and wife are rejoicing over the arrival of a son.

Salter Bros. are making a good display of Japanese iris.

Chas. W. Curtis is growing some excellent gladioli.

Hubert Stringer has returned from a Canadian trip.

Visitors: Henry Bigart, New York; Charles Ighton, Buffalo, N. Y.

CHESTER.

LORAIN, O.—Employees and guests of the Heacock Floral Co. to the number of 36, enjoyed the firm's annual outing at Linwood park, July 10.

JULY BUSINESS VERY SATISFACTORY.

Trade during the past week has been quite good, with stock plentiful and cut flowers still enjoying a good sale. Gladoli are coming better than they have for some time and asters are arriving in larger numbers. Sweet peas continue good and bring from 50 cents to $1 per 100. Roses are being received in large quantities, but a good demand cleans them up. Small outdoor flowers are being offered, but meet with little favor. Although funeral work has been rather slow, business in general has been exceedingly good.

H. A. T.

HIAWATHA, KAN.—Miss Susan Margrave, of the Hiawatha Greenhouses, reports unusually good business this season. Miss Margrave has been considering the building of additional greenhouses, but on account of fuel and other difficulties, has decided to postpone their erection.

WAR CONDITIONS IN GREENHOUSES.

What Lansdowne, Pa., Growers Are Doing to Meet Them.

Conservation Plans Well in Hand.

There are a number of important growers in Lansdowne, this pretty suburb of Philadelphia, Pa., nearly all of whom make roses a specialty. Wm. A.
Leonard, with nearly 90,000 feet of ground on which the greenhouses are built is low, flat and swampy; the on North Wycomb avenue. The former, like all others, is up against it for labor. He was fortunate in getting in his allotment of coal, but had to pay laborers $4.50 per day to unload and handle it from the railroad siding, which is on his place, to the greenhouse. He uses bituminous. He is assisting in this and other rough work about the place, and has become again a horny handed son of toil. His varieties of roses are, his red seedling, which is as good a money maker as any of them; also, a selected Double Pink Killarney, Double White Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, Russell, and Ophelia.

In order to facilitate the watering, he has a four-inch main across the ends of the houses, and from this, between each two houses, he runs a three-inch, to which is connected by an 1½ to each 1-inch spigot. With this he has a good lead of water, getting over the ground quickly. The water is stored in an underground cement-lined tank, or pool, 100 feet long, 20 feet wide and 11 feet deep. This catches all surface water, and when low, is filled from a water company by meter. A seven horsepower motor runs a centrifugal pump, which gives all the force necessary.

The houses are of wood, the sides, double boards with paper between, and the outside surface covered with Rubber-oid sheeting, a sort of building or roofing paper, which has stood for six years and still looks good. Mr. Leonard, who is a rose grower of experience, feels one might as well shut up the houses as try to grow roses for profit at reduced temperatures. They will live, but not make the growth to produce buds in such quantities as will pay, unless prices are to be much higher than last year. His intention is to run his houses, as many as possible, until or near the holidays, and then let down until the warm weather of spring brings on another crop. Insects are combated with nicofume liquid, which is evaporated about every two weeks in the houses, applied to the top pipe of the steam coil, either side of the houses with an engineer's oil can. This is done the last thing at closing, choosing still nights.

August Doemling, also an expert grower, took up the forcing of roses some years ago, without previous experience, but managed to average $1.00 a plant from Liberty the first year. He wishes he could do that now. The ground on which the greenhouses were built was low, flat and swampy; the soil is clay, brick clay. During heavy rains, the beds in the lower ranges are flooded at times six inches deep with water, yet the roses do better here than in any other part of the place. These houses have been planted from seven to 10 years, the stock changed at times, but the soil remains as it is, without additions except the manure and other fertilizers. All are ground beds with six-inch board sides. There are no drainage tiles of any kind. The pure clay soil, when moist, is very fine and friable, into which the roots penetrate with ease. He never allows it to get dry, as it then bakes and gets hard.
Asked if he were not troubled with black-spot in these low, moist beds, he said: "Not particularly, and when it does come we water freely and the plants come around all right."

To grow roses successfully, one must be always on the job. Old beds have to be treated differently from young stock; some varieties need more heat than others. Francis Scott Key, which has been one of his most profitable sorts, does best at 65°, while Hoosier Beauty likes 56° to 58°. Roses can be be kept cool and will live and remain healthy, but do not give flowers enough to pay.

Mr. Doemling likes free-flowering sorts like those of the Killarney class. Russell is a favorite. In speaking of the difficulty in rooting cuttings, he said the wood is too pithy, and leaves are apt to drop in the cutting bed, which is fatal. It is a hard rose to propagate, many dying, even after being potted. In reference to soils, drainage and watering, he is of the opinion that in many cases there is too much drainage and not enough water. All soils, of course, are not alike, and have to be treated differently; but in his low, flat, almost level clay beds the stock never suffers from too much water.

A new square brick smokestack, four feet inside diameter and 70 feet in height, with having to pay bricklayers $10 a day, cost over $1,000, but he believed it would pay for itself in the better coal consumption the coming winter. The outside of his bricked-in boilers have a plastic coating, which adds greatly to the utility.

His varieties are Killarney Brilliant, Aronburg, Francis Scott Key, Russell and White Killarney. He will run nearly all his houses on half time after the fall crops. Some will continue until Christmas, with a few up to capacity through the winter.

Secaucus Exotic Nurseries, Secaucus, N. J.

Calling recently at the Secaucus Exotic Nursery, Secaucus, N. J., of which Maurice Mutillod is proprietor, we were greatly impressed with the fine quality of the stock. There are in the range 100,000 or more square feet of glass and every house is filled with good stock. In addition, there is an acre or two of land that is planted with English ivies, vincas, pot roses and other fine stock. A feature of the outdoor exhibit is many fine pot plants that have been plunged. Noteworthy are large dracaenas, Ficus elastica, hydrangeas, standard heliotropes and other plants.

Maurice Mutillod is a landscape gardener, and his outdoor stock is not planted haphazard, but with an eye to good form and beauty.

As previously noted, every house is filled with good stock. There are several houses of fine palms and ferns, the former being one of the specialties at this range. Two houses of crotons are in fine condition. In Pandanus Veitchii there is a remarkably fine stock of large plants. Dracaenas in variety, araucarias, Ficus pandurata and many other plants are grown at this range, which is well worth a visit.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Toronto Retail Florists' Outing.

The annual outing of the Toronto Retail Florists' Club, held at Centre Island, July 17, proved to be a most delightful event, the day being thoroughly enjoyed, as is evidenced in the smiling faces shown in the accompanying illustration. There was a well balanced programme of sports including a baseball game between the growers and retailers, a tug of war between the same teams, and other interesting and amusing contests for both grown-ups and kiddies. Dancing followed an excellent supper.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

This is the lean season, when the store business, with the exception of the ever welcome orders for funerals, is at its lowest ebb. There should be no let-up, however, in the efforts to keep the shop neat, clean and tidy, with a fair showing of the season's flowers well displayed. There should be always a few salable ferns and palms, a croton or two, Dracaena fragrans or Massangeana. These standing in ornamental jars on pedestals or in pot covers on stands lend a decorative air and are at the same time salable.

Liberty songs are now popular everywhere. Emphasize these in a window display; get a dozen of the most popular of the recent successes and arrange them amongst vases of flowers with Old Glory and your service flag, if you have one. Quite an attractive window can be made in working up this idea.

The way, in a measure, to overcome the labor problem of the coming season is to keep busy now with making up all kinds of dried work—magnolia wreaths, red chenille wreaths and crosses, bells and balls. Wreaths of magnolias can also be decorated with cones, red ruscus, artificial holly and

The miniature red chenille auto wreaths, decorated with minerva, silvered ruscus, small cones and artificial holly, can be wrapped now and will be much better made than in the hurried holiday time.

Only buy good cut flower stock for the case. In neither the case nor window, nor in fact in any part of the shop, should anything passe or faded be allowed to stand. When flowers or plants become unsalable they should be at once thrown out; as long as they are visible their influence in connection with the fresh stock is distinctly bad.

For funerals push sago leaves and gladioli; these are quickly gotten together and will, with a ribbon or generous chiffon and perhaps a few asters, or knot of small roses at the bow, make a very acceptable piece.

Stir up the old accounts again. Nearly every drive will yield something, and ever so little just now will help.

Retail Stocks and Sales.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Will you kindly inform me as to the average stock carried by retail florists, the number of times stock is turned over in a year and the average profits? Also, the average number of employees in the stores and average individual sales?

F. J. A.

One could write a book and still not give satisfactory and complete answers to all the above questions. The retail cut flower business has grown from a small beginning to immense proportions in the past 25 years, forced to great expansion by the ever increasing minerva. A touch of gilt or silver on some of the cones and leaves makes rich-looking pieces. These can be put away in boxes, and when brought out for the holiday trade will require but little if any touching up, except the ribbon.

A narrow wreath of red chenille, or red alternated with green, 12 inches in diameter by one inch in width, is a good seller at Christmas. When drawn over or tied against well berried short branches of holly with a red bow, it makes a capital window piece in place of the wreath for the dwelling.

supply of flowers, rather than by its own initiative. Retailers are divided into several classes. First, those who raise and sell most of their product directly to the consumer. These are for the most part found in the suburbs of the large cities and in the smaller cities and towns, with greenhouses and stores combined. Possibly 20 per cent of the production is handled by these grower-retailers. The other 80 per cent is handled by strictly retail florists, who buy in the open market, relying entirely on the growers or their wholesale agents for their daily supply.

TORONTO RETAIL FLORISTS' CLUB OUTING AT CENTER ISLAND, JULY 17, 1918

These are divided into two or three classes, those doing a business of from $5,000 to $15,000, another with values of $20,000 to $50,000, and the premier class, with amounts running from $50,000 to $100,000 and over.

The smaller retail stores of the first class, in which the proprietor, who as the mainspring and moving spirit, does the buying, waits on customers, puts up the orders and design work, possibly with the help of one assistant, has in addition a delivery car, run by himself or assistant, or with a young man chauffeur, also useful in the store, and an errand boy. This force carries a ten to twelve or even fifteen thousand dollar a year business along in all ordinary seasons, except at holidays, when extra hands are necessary during these rush periods.

With a business doing $10,000 a year, the various items should figure out about as follows: Merchandise, $3,900; salaries, $2,100; delivery, $900; general expenses, $900; rent, $500; advertising, $400; profit and loss, $300—Net gain, $1,000.

Many of these small stores are family affairs in which the proprietor, with the assistance of his wife and children, fill the various positions, for which the salaries, if they go into the general fund, should be charged up and set aside as an expense to the business, the same as if paid to outsiders. It is hard to estimate the total volume of business done by these stores in the first class, but 50 per cent of the entire trade of the country would not be far wrong. The percentage and ratio of stock and expense to volume of business will, with few exceptions, hold good as the proportions increase. Except with very good management, however, a large business can not be handled as economically as a small one. At the beginning, everything is under the eye of the proprietor; he has to pay the bills, is most careful in buying and in seeing that everything is used up. As additional help is found necessary, the new employees, however capable, do not have that self interest, and if executive ability is lacking in the management, the ratio of profit will not keep pace with the increasing business.

TURNOVER OF STOCK.

The quick turnover of stock depends very much on the character of the business. The city retail stores in the busy shopping centers, either down town, or in the residence districts, have a larger percentage of buyers, and cater to their trade with special sales, in which they turn their stock frequently. One dealer, in a busy residence shopping center, found it a good card, when roses could be bought at $7.50 per thousand, to give free, a small glass vase which cost three cents with every dozen roses at 25 cents per dozen. At another special, he gave a small basket that cost $10.00 per hundred with every dollar's worth of roses. During the sales, he always kept a full line of seasonable flowers, offered at regular prices, which were generally cleaned up with the rest. He has always found these sales profitable and productive of new business.

AVERAGE STOCK CARRIED.

The great majority of the smaller stores specialize on flowers for funerals, and many of these carry very little stock except for work of this character. In such shops, the value would scarcely at any time, except holidays, inventory over $100. At Christmas, they carry greens and wreaths, and at Easter and the bedding season, stock up with plants.

When the business amounts to from $10,000 to $15,000 a year quite a stock of baskets, vases, jardinières, frames, in assortment, ribbons, chiffons, and other material will be found necessary. As the business grows, the shrewd buyer takes advantage of all quantity and cash discounts on staple stocks. Ribbons, chiffons, letters, certain lines of baskets, wire, stemming sticks, and tooth picks, string, moss, foil, magnolia and palm leaves are all bought as required, in lots that will secure the best discount. The man with a large stock of the above goods on hand at this time, purchased from six months to a year ago, will have, in addition, a handsome profit, in the greatly enhanced prices now prevailing.

While possibly from $500 to $1,000 worth of stock will be sufficient for a shop doing $10,000 to $15,000 worth of business, and which is near a base of supplies, yet twice the amount carried will be more economical for the reasons given.

PLANTS AND CUT FLOWERS.

The plants and cut flowers, which are renewed daily, are the most important item of the florists' stock. Plants have a fairly long period of sale, but cut flowers must be sold the day they arrive or the next. After that they may be used in design work. Many shops carry a very meagre stock of cut flowers, buying for their needs as work comes in. The progressive florist, however, always anticipates his business and creates a demand by his inventory display.

The daily stock of cut flowers should not exceed in value one-third of the amount of business expected for their period of sale; $50 worth could be carried where the average sales for cut flowers or work in which they were used, amounted to $75 a day or $150 for two days. Dull days retard and busy days speed up the purchase, but it is the opinion of the successful men in the business that this ratio of profit must be maintained, to secure a reasonable and safe gain in the business for the year.

Address Tags and Card Envelopes.

When one prides himself on his service he should be certain he has the latest and best tags and card envelopes there are in the market. So much attention has been given to these requisites of late years that they can be furnished at once in stock designs, or made to order in a very short time. The old light manilla tag, printed in black ink is now a thing of the past, and is not good enough for anybody in the business who takes any interest in up-to-date delivery. White tag stock now has the call, printed in a distinctive color, generally a special design, or several of them are furnished by the tag makers. While the old shape still appears the most popular, there are many unique forms, such as a painter's palette, a round card, another square or diamond shaped with the hole for the cord at one corner. One with the ends cut diagonally, a heart shaped tag for Valentine's day and a rose pattern that is pretty, a standard tag, but, with the printing across, instead of lengthways of the card. One to do double service has a perforated detachable end, this is signed by the person receiving the goods, which receipt is then detached and filed to show delivery.

Two sizes of tags are desirable, a medium size for store delivery and a larger and heavier one for shipping purposes. The card envelope is important. Across one corner is the firm name or trade mark, then the inscription, "This envelope contains card to go with spray of roses and lilies of the valley for the funeral of Mrs. Blank," or for whatever occasion the flowers are used.

THE ROSE.

Care of Young Stock.

The young stock should now be going ahead nicely, and should be kept free of weeds from the start. There are two ways of getting rid of the weeds. One is to cultivate the beds just as soon as the weeds come through the ground. This will destroy a great many of them, but they will keep on coming here and there. But if the weeds are allowed to get several inches high or advanced enough so that they can all be pulled by hand, the whole crop can be removed at one operation, and we prefer the latter method, but the work should be kept going so that the wind-up of the job does not last long enough to have the weeds get tall enough to smother the plants or to draw too hard on the fresh soil. Of course, after the first weeding, as a rule, the soil can be leveled off and cultivated, as the plants then should be able to take considerably more water. Be sure to keep the surface of the soil perfectly level, and remember to cultivate every week. The plants should be staked just as soon as possible after planting, and at least one tie given them, and do not fail to spray with great force afterward. One of the reasons that the plants become infested with red spider is because they are not sprayed properly from the very start, for there is always some old foliage hanging around on the "mother plants," that will work along diligently unless they are doused at the start.

The carried-over plants will be inclined to burn during the hottest of days as the first foliage begins to wake, and this can be avoided in a great degree if the soil is not kept too heavily watered at the start. Keep the soil moist and spray the house frequently, if necessary, and do not carry too much air if the wind is blowing outside. A close, humid atmosphere is required until the foliage is ripe enough to withstand the strong sunshine. Do not obtain the humidity by soaking the beds, but by damping down the walks and spraying overhead.

The beds holding the carried-over plants should require a fairly good mulch after they have been pinched once and are fast beginning to break into the second growth, using good fresh cow manure, placing it in rows between the plants. About two large handfuls will reach to the middle of the four-foot beds, making four to the cross rows, counting each side, to be followed up immediately with the hose and well worked in. If the beds have not had an application of ground bone before this, it can be put on previous to the mulch and all worked in together.

If the weather should get extremely hot, the force can be profitably employed putting the boiler into good condition for the coming fall. Either fill it full or empty it altogether. We always let all the water out, open up the manholes and hand holes, and drag a long trace chain around among the flues and firebox, which by keeping a hose running, will remove all of the loose scale and rust. All leaky joints should have been marked, such as will occur at a flange, union or large valves. These should be opened up and all bolts and nuts oiled thoroughly and replaced temporarily. This will be greatly appreciated later when assembling everything, and with the boiler and the pine lines all in good condition a great amount of worry is avoided later. It is a great satisfaction to feel that the old heating plant starts the season in shipshape. Where there are steam pumps, of course, they come under the head of the heating system and should likewise receive the same careful attention. If the work is handled during the very hottest part of the worst days, it will be a relief to get out of the houses for at least a few hours. I do not suppose I have to suggest the importance of getting in all the coal required just as soon as possible. Promises will not keep the steam circulating, so keep right after the dealers—and remember the cord-wood clause.

THE CARNATION.

Summer Work.

The season for the plants now growing in the benches is drawing to a close, and wherever they are past, their usefulness or the demand for the flowers is not enough to make it worth while caring for them any longer. It is none too early to make preparations in the way of emptying the benches, attending to the repairs, as well as any other necessary work that has to be done before the plants in the field can be brought in. Old plants left in the houses beyond the time when it pays to properly care for them, only become breeding places for all the different kinds of insects that cause so much trouble later in the season. The emptying and filling the benches during the summer time is a hard job and not a very pleasant one under the best of conditions, so that every effort should be made to enable the work to be done as smoothly as possible. It is also a good plan to empty and clean out the houses and allow them a short rest period to sweeten and dry out before the filling has to be done.

The soil for filling the benches is another important matter that should not be overlooked. This is the time of the year for rapid weed growth outdoors, and unless attention is given it, the compost soil will become grown over with big weeds to ripen and scatter their seeds through it as well as to draw a great deal of its strength away. The unsettled conditions now prevailing make it necessary that we take time by the forelock and not put off until tomorrow any work that can be done today.

CARE OF PLANTS IN THE FIELD.

Close attention to the care of the plants in the field is the most important work the carnation grower has to attend to at this season of the year; any neglect of the plants at this time will tell against the crop next winter. The first important work is to see that the weeds are kept down and the land properly cultivated.

THE LEO NIESSEN EMPLOYES IN ANNUAL VISIT TO W. F. LACROIX, BUENA, N. J., JULY 14.

This can only be done by the regular use of the hoe and cultivator. It is also a great help to the growth of the plants to keep the surface continually stirred up by hoeing and cultivating. By attending to this work regularly, there will not be any danger of the plants becoming over-run with weeds at any time throughout the season, it being a great mistake to expect any plants to thrive when overgrown with weeds; also, many times during the month of July, we get an abundance of thunder showers, causing the weeds to grow very rapidly in a very few days, when it is impossible to get on the land to keep them down.

TOPPING THE PLANTS.

This is another very important work in connection with the care of the field plants. Every effort should be made to encourage the plants to make as many growth shoots as possible during their growing season from the time they are planted outside and until they are brought in, and again after they become established in the benches and up to the time they are allowed to come into bloom. Plants set outdoors late in April or early in May, then lifted and planted in the houses late in July or early August, will not have time to become overgrown or extra large during the time they are outside, even under the most favorable conditions, and they need the closest attention as regards topping. Every shoot as it becomes large enough to properly handle should be topped, not too severely so as to retard the future growth, but allowing enough of the branch to remain to produce more shoots for future topping. By using a little common sense, judgment and attending to the work before the growths lengthen out too far, the man doing the work soon becomes accustomed to it and can tell just where every shoot should be pinched for the plant's best growth.

INDOOR GROWN PLANTS.

Plants being grown inside throughout the entire season, should now be planted into their permanent quarters in the benches. This method of culture to be successful requires a close application to the smallest detail in the care of the plants. The growth of the plants under this method is more rapid and longer jointed than the field culture, requiring a closer watch to prevent the shoots stretching up too far, drawing the strength away from the plants. They do not make as much grass, allowing therefore for the plants to be planted closer—eight by 10 is ample room for indoor growing. Prepare a fresh live soil, but do not use green cattle manure; more failures in trying out the indoor method of carnation culture can be safely laid to the use of fresh manure than to any other cause—one-fourth well rotted manure to three-fourths fresh loam soil, made fine and well firmed down, is as good a soil as can be had for the plants to start out in. Other nourishment can then be given as soon as the plants show the need of it later in the season.

Care must be taken not to get the soil over wet. The soil at the roots needs to be moist, but it must not be allowed to become either the extreme of wet or dry. Syringe freely on bright days and ventilate well all the time.

Burpee's Fordhook Farms Inspection.

On July 20 the department managers, farm managers and division foremen of the W. Atlee Burpee Company, Philadelphia, Pa., made a trip of inspection to Fordhook Farms, leaving the city at 1:02 p. m. via the Reading railroad and arriving at the farms at 2:30 p. m. After a careful inspection of the trials, they were taken in cars to the various farms, comprising some 800 acres in extent, and the brilliantly colored fields of poppies, phlox, salvias, calendulas, petunias and other flowering plants were certainly gorgeous and at their best. This was followed by an inspection of the collection gardens. In these gardens, all of the collections catalogued by the House of Burpee were planted in measured plots, so that one may visualize the exact area that should be devoted to the various collections, and at the same time see the returns that may be secured from a properly cultivated area as represented by the space devoted to these collections.

The suburban garden collection, or $5 box, was one of the most attractive, because it is very nearly the average garden size, namely, 50 by 80 feet. There was everything from radishes down through lettuce, squash, tomatoes, peppers, egg plants, muskmelons, watermelons, carrots, bush beans, both green and wax; pole beans, pole lima beans, beets, etc., in sufficient quantity for the average family. They were all at their best and certainly demonstrated the possibilities of a small area. The country garden, or $10 box collection, demonstrated the possibilities of an area 100 by 100 feet. The popular $1 box was certainly the best looking small garden that one could possibly imagine. Even the children's garden—twenty-five cent collection of vegetables and flowers on an area 10 by 10—indicated that considerable could be grown.

The visitors discovered that very large watermelons were sometimes found on very small plants, having been carefully placed in among the vines by those in attendance. A little further on, a new plant, "Nicotiana cabbagenis," was discovered. This plant was carefully constructed from a cedar pole, with cabbage side leaves, and blossomed very good cigars in paper covers. It was really a very good imitation of a tobacco plant in bloom.

The value of the small tractor was also clearly demonstrated here, the Beeman garden tractor doing all sorts of stunts for the edification of the visitors.

The spring house, on the farm devoted to these garden trials, gave up some delightfully cool watermelons, some of which were horribly carved, but were thoroughly enjoyed by those who were lucky enough to be among those present. The party, thoroughly refreshed and in good spirits, again took to the automobiles on a trip to the Zetty farms. Fox farms, and Castle Valley farms were the last on the programme. On the Zetty farms a crop of wheat was just being harvested. Some of the boys saw for the first time what a delightful job threshing could really be made to be, for with automatic feeders and a baler bailing the straw, the job was devoid of much of the dust and unpleasantness that was formerly a part of the work of those who had to work behind a blower. Memories of the days when the writer used to have to feed, or, at least, do his part in the feeding of the hungry threshing machine, seemed almost an impossibility when you watched this automatic machinery doing the entire job from feeding to bailing at one time. Here, also, the boys saw that late planted potatoes can be grown very successfully on Bucks county soil; also, the driver of one of the cars proved that a Ford could run on three tires and one rim. Here again the trouble attendant to the use of tractors was demonstrated, for we found broken gears on both a Moline tractor and a Cleveland. However, the farm manager assured us that had it not been for the various tractors and mechanical cultivators that were in use on the Fordhook group that it would have been impossible to have prepared and cultivated the great area that we found in such excellent condition.

Leaving the thrasher, the party returned by way of Fox farms, and then to Castle Valley farms, where F. F. Rockwell's pigs and peaches received no little attention, and a great deal of enthusiastic comment.

"Doc" Coville is some "chiffonier" when it comes to driving a car, and he is said to be the best dust sprayer in all Bucks county, as was greatly evidenced by those in the car immediately following Friend Coville. However, this was soon forgotten on the return to Fordhook, because, after washing up, they partook of a lunch on the porch under the two great lindens and as the guests of David Burpee. The much enjoyed repast, which the menu card referred to as "Burpee's Offering—Seeds, bulbs, roots and other specialties for interior decoration," left nothing wanting to fulfill its avowed purpose.

Splendid speeches were made by F. F. Rockwell and James A. Crossett, and after a unanimous vote of thanks to the host, the automobiles were again pressed into service, and the 5:43 at Farm School was held up and boarded. Everything would have been fine on the return trip, except that we had to change trains at Lansdale, and here we found that through a wreck farther up the line, we would have to wait one hour and a quarter. Of course, there was the electric limited to 69th and Market streets, had there been anyone in the party with sufficient intelligence to have known it, but it was quite apparent that all preferred a ride on the Reading, as two trains pulled out directly under our eyes without anyone getting aboard. Nevertheless it was voted a perfect afternoon by all present, leaving pleasant memories of the trip, the afternoon's entertainment, and particularly of the "Hungry Man's Collection."

CONVENTION PROGRAMME AMENDED.

The programme for the Wednesday afternoon session, August 21, has been amended to read as follows:

2:00 p. m. Report of committee on publicity, by Henry Penn, chairman. Report of publicity finance committee, by George Asmus, chairman. Report of the promotion bureau, by Secretary John Young. Discussion. Address—"Publicity," by Major P. F. O'Keefe, Boston, Mass.

Under this arrangement, all matters concerning the publicity campaign will be taken up at one session, the whole afternoon being devoted to this very important subject.

THE TRADE EXHIBITION.

That the trade exhibition will again be an important feature of the annual convention, is now practically assured. While exhibitors located at a distance have been forced to consider seriously present conditions of freight transportation, the situation in this respect is sufficiently improved to remove doubt as to the possibility of arrivals on time for the convention dates. The attention of exhibitors wishing to have novelties or improved devices passed upon by the judges is directed to Rule X, which is as follows:

Awards: Exhibitors showing novelties or other improved devices, which they wish to have examined by the judges for such special notice or award as they are deemed worthy of, shall make an itemized voucher thereof with the secretary in advance. Firms or corporations desiring their exhibits considered for award, must state the name of a member of the firm or company, who is a member of the society. In case any article or device has received an award at a previous S. A. F. exhibition, award shall cover subsequent improvements only. No award will be made covering the quality of seeds, fertilizers, plants and other articles of such a nature on which an intelligent opinion cannot be had without a practical test. None but flower pots conforming to the society's standards will be considered for award by the judges. No award will be made to exhibitors who are not members of the S. A. F.

The following additions to the list of exhibitors have been made: Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Schloss Bros., Ribbons, Inc., New York; Ickes-Braun Mill Co., Chicago; Cottage Gardens Nurseries, Inc., Eureka, Calif.

The exhibit of the Cottage Gardens Nurseries Co., which will comprise a collection of home grown bulbs, is directed by Charles W. Ward, president of the company, to be sold at auction for the benefit of the S. A. F. Red Cross donation. JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

National Publicity for Flowers.

The secretary arrived in Portland, Ore., escorted from Tacoma, Wash., by J. B. Pilkington, a prominent member of the Portland Floral Society. Although his hour of arrival was near to midnight, James Forbes, representing the Portland craft, was at the station to meet him and conducted him to his hotel. Next day, he was, under good guardianship, introduced to the florist trade of Portland and vicinity, among whom he secured a number of new members for the society, and some substantial subscriptions to the publicity fund. Several who had already subscribed doubled their subscriptions. He feels deeply indebted to the Portland florists for many courtesies extended, particularly to Mr. Forbes—who without encroachment upon travel time, was especially interested in seeing that the visitor had the opportunity to view the great Columbia Highway, the park system, shipyards and other local places of interest; E. J. Steele, president of the Portland Floral Society; A. J. Clarke, and J. B. Pilkington. The Portland Floral Society is a very much-alive organization, and held a special meeting to welcome the secretary, at which about 50 were present, who evinced keen interest in the campaign, and in the work of the society. A most enjoyable banquet was served in a manner typical of the hosts, whose open-hearted welcome the secretary will long remember. From Portland he journeyed to San Francisco, again under the care of Mr. Pilkington—who probably was expected to see his charge safely out of Oregon.

In San Francisco, the secretary received many courtesies at the hands of Angelo Rossi, director of the society, who was anxious that the visitor should meet with as much success as possible in our old convention city. To Hans Plath, Daniel MacRorie and Eric James, he desires to express hearty thanks for assistance given him, particularly in journeying to surrounding towns.

The time is drawing near when a general report covering the publicity campaign and the campaign fund must be made. A whole afternoon has been set apart in the St. Louis convention programme for a discussion of publicity work, and the attendance promises to be large. At this time the subscription records will be presented, and all who have "done their bit," will share in the honor of having their assistance eulogized by an assembly, which will be composed of men prominent in all branches of the trade. Mr. Nonsubscriber, can you, should you, allow your name to be absent from this roll of honor? Just think of our meeting the week to come. There is yet time for you to help swing this campaign fund over the point set for it before the date of meeting, and with your assistance the good work already accomplished may be continued over a period which, without the benefit assuredly to result, it might be hard for our industry to bridge. Never was publicity for flowers more needed—never could your support be more timely than now.

FUNERAL WORK MAIN ITEM OF DEMAND.

The past week has been a very quiet, uninteresting one as far as business is concerned. A flurry of funeral work is the only item of interest. The market is shortening up on stock and the growers find it extremely hard to dispose of what they have. Roses are a glut and any kind of an offer is accepted. Gladioli are quite plentiful and good. Panama, America, and Niagara sell at $1.00 a dozen, Halley and Francis King at 50 and 75 cents a dozen, small assorted varieties at $2 a hundred. Cosmos, centaureas, coreopsis and salpiglossis find ready buyers.

NOTES.

H. B. Ruppert, road salesman for P. L. Carbone, has opened quarters at Hotel Imperial, New York, where he will meet the trade with an extensive line of baskets, pottery and glassware suitable for flowers and table decorations.

B. Hammond Tracy, of Wenham, (the gladioli king) has started shipping to market Primulinus and Halley in large numbers. In two weeks time he will have some of his new varieties ready.

Edward Bingham, of Dedham, is having one of his best years with sweet peas. He is cutting 5,000 daily and cleans them up at 75 cents a hundred.

Charles E. Evans has finished cutting hardy double gypsophila, and is now devoting his time to a large field of asters.

Wm. McAlpine head of the New England Rose Co., is spending a two weeks vacation at his farm at Exeter, N. H. I. Mirsky is receiving daily shipments of long stemmed asters; also Russell and Ophelia roses.

Arnold & Fisher have started to pick a good strain of sweet peas. S. K. G.

Milwaukee, Wis.

DEMAND ONLY FAIR.

Due no doubt to the real hot summer weather which prevailed all last week, business, taking it locally and out-of-town, was only fair. Up to that time it was very satisfactory indeed. The supply of roses is fully equal to the demand, while the carnations, are getting scarcer and poorer from day to day. The cut of gladioli and asters is increasing nicely, but the steady demand in funeral work keeps these cleaned up. Easter lilies are commanding a good price, which speaks for itself. Out-of-door cut flowers, such as snapdragons, Shasta daisies, cornflowers, etc., are enjoying their usual popularity.

NOTES.

Funeral orders last week calling for elaborate sprays and designs for Charles Allis, son of the late E. P. Allis, founder of the Allis-Chalmers Mfg. Co., one of the largest steel product manufacturing concerns in the country, helped to clean up the market in good shape. Numerous large artistic wreaths both from local as well as out-of-town stores, were in evidence.

Frank Bojar and two of the office force of the C. C. Pollworth Co. are enjoying their vacation this week. This firm is busy getting their carnations housed, but according to W. A. Kennedy, the help problem is getting serious. He has our sympathy for well we know what it means to get and keep any kind of laborers.

The state fair committee of the florists' club completed its task of planting the flower beds, porch boxes and numerous large tubs at the grounds, July 16. They ought to make a fine showing by September, different than in the past few years, when this work was done a day or two before the opening day.

We are pleased to report that Mrs. Otto Sylvester, Sr., of Oconomowoc, Wis., who was operated on at the Waldheim sanatorium about two weeks ago, is getting along nicely. Her son, Otto, Jr., has enlisted and expects to leave for Washington, D. C., in the near future.

James Currie, superintendent of the Forest Home cemetery, has been re-appointed as a member of the park board. We are pleased to report this, for being an expert landscape gardener, he is the right man in the right place.

After a month's recuperating after a most successful season, Miss Rose Semmler, of the Edlesfen-Leidiger Co., is expected to again get busy after the first of August. This firm reports a little something doing all the time.

It is surprising what constant cultivating will accomplish, for with no rain to speak of during the month of July carnation plants in spite of the drought are looking good. A genuine "soaker" is badly needed.

Fred H. Holton, of the Holton & Hunkel Co., motored his family to Beaver Lake, July 28, for a prolonged stay. This firm reports business for July very satisfactory until the recent extreme hot spell set in.

As far as the writer knows, there will be no locally forced lily of the valley until the fall season begins. One firm which grew large quantities in the past and whose supply is exhausted say, "No more for us."

Carl Desebrook, who conducted a retail store at 2823 North avenue, with his daughter, Miss Carla, as manager, has closed the shop. Miss Desebrook, we are informed, will take up nursing as a profession.

The regular meeting of the florists' club will be held August 1, and as several items of importance are on the programme, a large attendance ought to be on deck.

Gust Rusch, of Gust Rusch & Co., is spending most of his time during the so-called dull season with his family at their summer home on Little Cedar lake.

Philip Fietsch, of Fietsch Bros., retail florists on National avenue, is the only one left. His brothers, Albert and Joe, have been called to the colors.

J. M. Fox & Son, whose flower department has not been any too busy of late, had all hands rushed for the funeral of Charles Allis.

Henry Kusik, of Kansas City, who is spending his vacation motoring through the country, paid his local friends a visit last week. E. O.

Cincinnati.

OVERSUPPLY BRINGS LOW PRICES.

The market is becoming glutted with stock and the supply is greatly in excess of actual needs. Prices have dropped to a low point. Roses have become very plentiful, but are finding a poor market. Some stock of a high quality is going to waste. Asters are in a heavy supply, that is greater than the market can take up at this time. Some excellent gladioli can be had. They, too, are in a supply that is greater than is actually needed at this time. Easter lilies are now plentiful and rubrums continue in a good supply.

NOTES.

Eck Brothers have closed their store until the war is over when they plan to reopen it. Walter Eck is already in the service while Ray Eck is due to leave any day.

The Rosebank Co. has been sending some excellent Boston ferns to C. E. Critchell. They have met with a ready sale.

Roy Rudolph and wife are the proud parents of a baby boy weighing 8½ pounds that was born last week.

Visitors: Charles Frank, wife and family, Portland, Ind., and J. C. Anderson, Lebanon, Tenn. H.

St. Louis.

BUSINESS IN GENERAL VERY QUIET.

The market the past few weeks has been dull, with no oversupply of any kind of stock. Gladioli are coming in a little heavy now, but far from a glut. Business as a whole is very poor, but the occasional big funeral helps to clean up the surplus stock, such as it is. Roses are in fairly good supply, but as a whole the quality is not the best. Columbia and Russell are the best stocks seen. Asters are plentiful, but the quality is inferior. Tuberoses are beginning to arrive. Rubrums and lilies are of extra good quality, but the demand is not heavy. In greens the market is well supplied with the exception of smilax, which is scarce.

NOTES.

Preparations for the coming S. A. F. convention are well under way and everything points to a good attendance, especially from this section and south and west. Extra efforts are being made by the local publicity committee to advertise the event in these various sections, as it is well known that the eastern contingent will be somewhat light on account of the hardships in traveling in the east. The local florists want it understood that they are prepared to take care of a large gathering, and invite the delegates to especially bring their wives, as they are going to be well taken care of during the time of the convention. Special entertainments are being prepared by the local entertainment and ladies' committees to entertain the visiting ladies. The fourth day is also going to be a day of entertainment for all the visitors, both ladies and gentlemen, and it will be well worth while for visitors to arrange to spend the entire four days in St. Louis.

The writer has just returned to the city after being ordered by his doctor to take a rest in the country, but he took the opportunity to go to the annual florist club picnic which was held at Ramona Park a little over a week ago. We cannot help but comment on the very good time everyone seemed to have and the friendly rivalry that sprung up for the time being between the wholesalers and retailers in their ball game. Unfortunately, or fortunate (?) the wholesalers had their team well packed with professionals, and did finally win by the score of 21 to 19, but it was worth the price of a dozen admissions to hear some of the oldtimers rooting for their favorites. Besides the ball game, a number of interesting games were on the programme, which proved very interesting for all. The younger element stayed until a late hour enjoying Art Beyer's jazz band, which just won't let your feet beave.

W. J. Pilcher, state vice-president of the S. A. F., advises that the membership of the St. Louis Florist Club in the S. A. F. is now well over the hundred mark, which assures the club a representation on the board of directors. This is as it should be. In fact, no one engaged in the florist trade should be out of the S. A. F. They have done yeoman work in the matter of fuel supply for growers, and this fact alone should make everyone connected with the floral trade a booster for the national society.

The florists' club has nominated the following officers for the ensuing year: A. H. Hummert, president; W. J. Pilcher, vice-president; J. J. Windler, secretary; W. C. Smith, treasurer; Alex. Lurie, trustee for three years.

Local F. T. D. florists will be glad to renew acquaintances at the coming meeting of the S. A. F. when the special meeting of the F. T. D. will be held.

MILWAUKEE, it is said, wants the S. A. F. convention in 1920.

The fuel administration states that since the order that only clean coal will be allowed to be hauled from mines only 15 carloads have had to be penalized at destinations.

Gypsophila Elegans Grandiflora Alba.

This is a fine annual for florists' use, either outdoors or under glass. Seeds may be sown in succession the year around, flower sprays being ready to cut in 10 to 12 weeks.

Christmas Gifts Discouraged.

The council of national defense is going to discourage the making of Christmas gifts. It claims that its policy has been determined upon as a necessary measure of economy, adopted for the sake of saving the labor and materials which usually go into the Christmas gifts, the labor required to handle the Christmas rush in retail stores, and the transportation facilities. B. F. L.

MORE and more the lesson is driven home that statistics are the basis of sound business. The concern which knows the cost price of each article it sells has an advantage over competitors who know only their total cost for everything.

Reed and Rattan Imports Restricted.

The war trade board has just promulgated a new ruling under the provisions of which rattans and reeds have been placed on the list of restricted imports. It is understood that several of the large florists' supply houses have shipments of merchandise of this nature held up in foreign ports. All outstanding licenses have been revoked by the war trade board as to ocean shipments made after August 5, 1918. Hereafter no licenses for the importation of rattans and reeds will be issued, except for shipments from Canada or Mexico by other than ocean transportation, and except also for shipments coming as return cargo from convenient European ports or from convenient Mediterranean North African ports, and then only when coming from a convenient port where loading can be done without delay. B. F. L.

Ship Movements.

The post office department has called attention to the following statement of the secretary of the navy, and that the publication of such shipping news will be considered as giving aid and comfort to the enemy and such matter will be unobtainable under the Espionage Act:

"The appearance of submarines on the Atlantic coast makes it imperative that no mention should be made in any newspapers, either in the advertising or news columns, of the sailing or departure, or location, or supposed location, of any ship in American waters.

"This information conveyed by advertising is as dangerous as in the news columns, and I am making this request to all the newspapers in the country in the assurance that they will co-operate with the government in its effort to prevent any further information about ships reaching submarines which may be off the American coast."

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Public notice is hereby given that the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., submits for registration the following new roses:

Rose Premier—Seedling of Ophelia x Mrs. Chas. Russell; color deep pure rose; very large in bloom, splendid forcing qualities; a "big rose" in every way; exceptionally free bloomer.

Rose Victor—Seedling of Ophelia x Killarney Brilliant; type of Killarney Brilliant; very free; large in growth and bloom.

Rose Golden Rule—Seedling of Ophelia x Sunburst; a yellow rose, much like Ophelia in growth; good color; excellent forcing qualities; very free in growth and bloom.

Rose Mme. Butterfly—A highly colored sport of Ophelia.

Any person objecting to these registrations, or to the use of the proposed names is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objections to the registrations, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

St. Louis Convention Entertainment.

Our convention this year, it is true, should and will have more and longer business sessions than any convention we have ever had, and it is the foremost idea in the mind of every member of the S. A. F. in this locality to help in every way possible to impress on everyone that the meetings should be well attended. However, we felt that a convention is not complete unless there is just a bit of entertainment in some form, but on account of the time being so well taken up the three convention days, it behooves us to ask all of our visitors to stay over the fourth day, Friday, August 23, and have one day of entertainment, not an elaborate programme, but a pleasant day, fitting and in keeping with the present conditions.

We aim to adhere to the warnings of the officers of our society, and ask every member to attend each meeting session. This will have a tendency to stimulate attendance for future conventions, and will show that we are deeply interested and appreciate the work accomplished by our officers and directors in the past year. It is of importance to every florist to know and acquaint himself with the great work being performed by the S. A. F.

All of the ladies are invited to attend; even though the three convention days are busy and occupied days for the men, the ladies will be looked after by our local folks, and we might add that St. Louis offers a great variety of sight-seeing, many points of interest for any sort of an inclination or temperament.

We further add that on the evening of the third convention day, Thursday, August 22, the Missouri Botanical Garden will entertain all members and ladies of the S. A. F. in the former's gardens.

We once more ask all visitors to stay over the fourth day and take advantage of the opportunity to see everybody, to have that long-wished-for talk with somebody; in short, enjoy one day after three days of strenuous business meetings. This will put you into that "Gee, but the boss must have had a great time at the convention" spirit when you return home. It's really the after effects of anything we do that count. We want you to carry away from St. Louis an impression that will be a pleasant memory to you and a credit to our city.

We welcome you.

ENTERTAINMENT COMMITTEE.
Frank A. Windler, Chairman.

What Makes it Stop?

Sparksville, June 8, 1918.

Gents: The gas engine you sent me stops when theres nothing the matter with it thats the trouble, it wouldnt bee so bad if it stopped for some reason and anybody knows theres reasons enough for it to stop.

I received the book which you sent me which is named What Makes the Gasoline Engine Go. I ain't read it yet because whats the use reading it when I dont care what makes the gasoline engine go as long as it goes which mine dont only acasionally. what I want to know is What Makes the Gasoline Engine Stop. If you got a book called that send me one. I want to know what makes my gasoline engine stop when everything is o k and nothing is the matter except that it must be a rotten engine. TRADE SHOWING SIGNS OF IMPROVEMENT.

Business is a trifle better at this writing, and is gradually showing signs of improvement. The sales last week were not any too encouraging, owing to the extreme warm weather, but at that, compared favorably with those of the same seven days of 1917. Asters and gladioli were about the only items that brought anywhere near satisfactory prices. Roses reached the market in poor condition, with the possible exception of one or two varieties, and were jobbed off at exceedingly low prices in large lots or dumped to save the cost of paper and twine. Stock is plentiful at this writing, especially gladioli and asters, which are reaching the market in larger quantities and have dropped considerably in price. Roses are very plentiful with Mrs. Chas. Russell and Columbia having a good call, considering the general market conditions. A few good Mrs. George Shawyer, Champ Weiland, My Maryland, Ophelia and Sunburst are obtainable. Hoosier Beauty, American Beauty, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Double White Killarney, Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, White Killarney and all the other varieties grown for this market comprise the list of rose offerings and it is gratifying to note that the quality is somewhat better than that of last week. Carnations are in short supply and but very little good stock is available. Orchids, lily of the valley and gardenias are scarce. Lilies are in fair supply and clean up nicely right along. Water lilies have sold splendidly during the hot weather and are seen featured in almost all the leading loop window displays. Candytuft, snapdragon, calendulas, daisies, poppies and other miscellaneous stock is obtainable, together with a splendid grade of gyp-

NOTES.

Mrs. Anna Risch (nee Trausch), beloved wife of Peter Risch, of Weiland & Risch, and fond mother of John P. Risch and Mrs. Catherine Weiland, died suddenly July 27 at the age of 73 years. The funeral was held from the late residence, 302 Monroe street, Evanston, the following Tuesday at 9 a. m., to St. Nicholas' church, where high mass was celebrated at 9:30, with interment at St. Henry's cemetery. The Risch family is well and favorably known to the trade, and has the sympathy of all in the loss of a loving wife and mother.

The Zech & Mann force, headed by Allie Zech, gave Frank Jarel a farewell dinner and party, Friday evening, July 26, and it is needless to add that it was a brilliant success and everyone present had a most delightful time. Frank left the following day for the Great Lakes naval training station, so his firm has added another star in its service flag.

Poehlmann Bros. Co., is supplying its trade with a fine grade of Mrs. Chas. Russell and American Beauty roses. Business at this house is good and shows a great improvement over last week. The total sales in the cut flower department for July were the greatest that this firm ever experienced for the same month for many years.

W. J. Nissen is again on duty at the Chicago Flower Growers' Association store after enjoying a pleasant two weeks' vacation. John Walsh and C. F. Sherer have had their two weeks off, so Manager Klingsporn is planning on taking a few days for himself which will be spent at the S. A. F. convention in St. Louis, Mo., August 20-22.

Julius Kline is again attending to his duties at Peter Reinberg's store after a two weeks' vacation, the greater part of which was spent at Milwaukee, Wis. Peter Baumann who is in charge of the floor is now spending his vacation with relatives at Niles Center.

A. E. Kunderd, Goshen, Ind., president of the American Gladioli Society, was a visitor this week. He calls attention to the annual meeting and exhibition of that society to be held at Buffalo, N. Y., August 14-17.

J. A. Budlong is moving all the Golden Glow chrysanthemums that his firm is cutting at good prices considering general market conditions. The quality is unusually good compared to that of other years.

August Barnett, of Erne & Co., is enjoying a two weeks' vacation somewhere over here. Chas. Erne is doing double duty while he is away, which is going some, considering he is always as busy as a bee.

Wietor Bros. are filling new orders every day for field-grown carnation plants which are selling like hot-cakes and will soon be exhausted if the demand keeps up the way it has been the past few weeks.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are having a heavy run on gypsophila, which they are handling in large quantities. Asters and gladioli are seen in large numbers at this establishment.

Percy Jones, Inc., reports a wonderful improvement in trade over last week especially in regard to the out-of-town demand which is exceptionally good.

L. Loeser is back on the job at Kyle & Foerster's store after enjoying a two weeks' vacation. Leonard Koehler of this firm is now away on his.

Going Some Prices

See Wittbold's Ad., Page 122.

Ralph and Edith Bather, of Clinton, Ia., visited their sister, Agnes, here this week, who is receiving treatment at the Augustana hospital.

Lieutenant Jim Kidwell, who was home on a leave of absence, left July 29 for Rantoul to resume his duties in the aviation department.

Dave Ahrens, manager of the shipping department at Kennicott Bros. Co.'s store, is enjoying his vacation at Sister Lakes, Mich.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. are handling a good supply of asters and gladioli, in addition to a complete line of all other seasonable stock.

Krowka Bros. have bought all of George Reinberg's calla bulbs which they will grow for the John Kruchten Co. next season.

O. Johnson, of the Batavia Greenhouse Co., reports a brisk demand for asters which his firm is cutting in quantity.

Miller & Musser are featuring a good supply of outdoor flowers particularly milkweed which is selling unusually well.

The Florists' Club will meet at Kart-haus's grove next Thursday, August 8, at 8 p. m.

Otto Amling and family, of Maywood, are away on a fishing trip.

Paul R. Klingsporn, John Michaelson, W. J. Keimel, Otto H. Amling and T. E. Waters, the committee that was appointed at the last meeting of the Florists' Club to receive visitors calling here en route to the convention, met Tuesday, July 30, when they appointed the following to help entertain the visiting florists and act as a booster convention committee: C. L. Washburn, Philip Schupp, F. M. Johnson, H. B. Kennicott, Allie Zech, N. J. Wietor, Fred Hoerber, H. Van Gelder, Peter Reinberg, A. T. Pyfer, A. L. Vaughan, George Ball, Walter Amling, R. J. Enders, F. W. Martin, William Wienhoeber, George Asmus, H. N. Bruns, C. Fraunfelder, Louis Wittbold, W. J. Smyth and Victor Bergmann. It is the intention of the club to provide a banquet and entertainment for the visitors Monday, August 19, previous to their departure for St. Louis, Mo., over the Chicago & Eastern Illinois railroad at 11:30 p. m.

E. A. Bending, chief engineer of the Palmer Forced Draft Slack Burner Co. with headquarters at Fort Scott, Kansas, has installed the Palmer burner system at the George Wittbold Co.'s greenhouses at Edgebrook where it is attracting the attention of many of the growers in this vicinity. Mr. Bending says that if after an inspection of a greenhouse plant he is satisfied that his firm can make at least 10 per cent saving it will install its equipment at its own expense and take its pay out of the monthly saving made for a limited period. His firm takes all the risk and if a saving is not made it takes out the equipment and restores the plant to its original condition. Mr. Bending will be at the Brevoort hotel for another week.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of the local trade, July 27, says: "Midsummer trade, with a little more than normal languor, has been the rule this week. With due allowance for these conditions, retail business is fully up to the average of recent years. Wholesale orders continue to run considerably ahead of last year."

F. H. Riegelmeier, of Pittsburgh, Pa., was a welcome visitor this week. He was in the employ of the George Wittbold Co. before he entered the retail business in the east, so he is no stranger in this vicinity.

George Madson and wife of Elgin have the sympathy of the trade in the loss of their nine-year old son by drowning last week. Mr. Madson and wife were here this week on a business trip.

Mr. and Mrs. August Poehlmann and daughter, Virginia, are quarantined at their home in Morton Grove with diphtheria.

Vincent Gorly, of Grimm & Gorly, St. Louis, Mo., passed through here this week, on his way home from a delightful vacation in Michigan.

E. J. Barnes and Henry Kusik, of Kansas City, Mo., reached this city July 27, by auto, and proceeded to Milwaukee.

Lieut. Chas. T. Johnson, son of C. W. Johnson, Mt. Greenwood, is now located at Camp Taylor, near Louisville, Ky.

Ernie Olaf Anderson, of the Bassett & Washburn store force, is spending his vacation in Austin.

A. Lange now has 10 stars in his service flag.

GROWERS PREPARED WITH AMPLE SUPPLIES

There seems to be some misunderstanding concerning the ability of Washington to furnish out-of-town points with their needs in flowers. Never in the history of this city were the growers better able to fill orders than now. This is due to the fact that one of the largest local firms is running very heavily this year, with the idea of letting the plants rest next winter because of the shortage of coal. Under the plan adopted by this firm, it can well afford to let the plants rest, because the yield and prices during June and July have been without equal—both being as good as in the winter. Figuring on the wholesale, retail and shipping trade as a whole, July business was exceptionally good. At this time roses continue to bring up to $12 per hundred. Ophelia, Pink and Red Radiance, and Mock are the leaders. Carnations are still coming in and are fine; they find ready sale at $2 per hundred. Harrisii lilies have had a wonderful sale, although the price fluctuates rapidly at from $8 to $15 per hundred. Callas are just about on the outward go; only a few are available. Asters are more plentiful, and they are in good condition, selling fairly well at from $2 to $4. Gladioli are extra fine and sell at from $4 to $8. Althea, formerly used only with short stems for funeral work, now is to be had in sprays two and three feet long, and this works up well in decorations. Dahlias are beginning now to come in nicely, and they sell fairly well at from $2 to $4 per hundred. The crop looks very promising. There are still plenty of gardenias to be had, but their sale is very limited at $3 per dozen. Orchids fluctuate very much in price, ranging from $4 to $9 per dozen, according to variety.

HOT WEATHER DEPRESSES BUSINESS.

There is nothing very encouraging to report of last week's market. The weather has been the hottest of the season, and besides having a very depressing effect on business has about finished the carnations and reduced the stock of salable roses to the minimum. The market is full of roses, but they grade very low. Growers would be money in pocket to see that nothing but the best of their stock, and that in salable condition, is sent to such a weak market. Francis Scott Key, Mrs. Russell and Mock are the best large roses; there is no question as to their being premier summer sorts. All the others are badly affected by the extreme heat. Gladioli are now a factor, being handled in quantity at much lower prices than two weeks ago. America and Mrs. Francis King, together with a few of the white varieties and a line of mixed that hardly pays the freight are seen in all the houses. They are good stock for the retailer, making quite a show in window and store decoration for little money. Rudbeckia Golden Glow is another showy decorative flower that costs little and is used with good effect. Asters are increasing, but the dry weather is very hard on them. The growers who were farsighted enough to put in the Skinner system for their outside cut flowers are now reaping big benefits. The best asters sell well, but the poor stock returns little to the grower. Sweet peas are down and out, almost unsalable. Easter lilies are in good demand, while the roseums also find a place in many funeral designs. A few dahlias are seen, the forerunners of the fall crops, which promise to be very good, except that the growers of these are, in common with others, having trouble with labor which will greatly handicap them in production and shipping. Asparagus appears to find a ready market at the standard price of 50 cents per bunch. Orchids are scarce. The quality of the varieties now in is fine.

HANDLING THE ROSES.

The trade is fast coming to the wrapping of 25 buds of a grade to a bundle; these, when protected with a paper on which the grower's name and grade number is stamped, make a convenient and quickly handled package. The flowers are not subject to draft, or of being bruised by handling, as they are all sold in the original bundles as received from the grower. They can be placed, a number together, in large jars of water, and one or two removed without disturbing the others. They will also remain piled together on a shelf in a refrigerator or cool room for quite a while without damage. Quite a few growers grade and bundle their stock in this way, but without the paper wrapper. The paper is a great protection, as without it the outside layer of foliage becomes soft and the buds rubbed and pricked with the thorns of the other bundles.

QUALITY.

Growers and in fact, nearly all of those who handle flowers are not alive to the importance of quality or the fine finish that makes their product at once noticeable wherever displayed. Fairly good stock will sell when there is a demand, but no one will buy unless they have use for it. The stock, however, with a superlative finish has an advertising value all its own; it creates a demand for itself. The dealer who has no use for the ordinary is at once attracted by the high-grade stock, and gives it the best place in his shop or window, where the delighted customers are loud in their praises of the superb stock. Something of the same, but inferior in size and color, scarcely gets a second glance, and certainly creates no desire to buy. "Raise the Standard" should be the slogan everywhere. Double the quality and halve the quantity would surely mean better sales at higher prices and establish a sellers' market, which keeps the trade in a healthy condition.

"We find the gladioli farmers to be working over time; at least, we have to do double duty to handle their stock the past week and make any kind of decent returns." This was the report of the Leo Niessen Co. Easter lilies, gladioli, Lilium roseum, and asters were features of their summer stock.

Robert Baggs, chief of the Edward Reid force, is spending a two-week vacation alternately between Frazier terrace and the shore resorts. Choice Victoria and Russell roses and asters are headliners.

The Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange is strong on a good variety of roses and quantities of gladioli. Business for the summer months is a little better than last year.

Harry Berger is getting along all right by his lonesome. Easter lilies, Maryland roses, and asters and gladioli were quantity items here.

The palm houses of the Joseph Heacock Co. at Wyncote are all in apple order, everything potted up and in the height of their summer advance. Already many orders have been booked for fall delivery.

Conditions on account of war activities are such in this city that no additional telephone or electric light connections can be made without permits from the government.

Edward Dornheim, of the Chas. E. Mehan force, is spending his vacation with his family at Niagara Falls.

NOTES.

At the annual meeting of the directors of the Joseph Heacock Co., July 15, officers were elected as follows: James W. Heacock, president; Carl A. Cortis, vice-president; Miss Esther Heacock, secretary; Miss Anna Straley, treasurer. The past year has been one of the most prosperous in the history of the company. Carl A. Cortis is city salesmanager. Theodore Shober is the palm grower and manager at Wyncote, while Robert Jamieson, their rose specialist, is manager of the large rose houses at Roelofs.

Stuart Miller entertained a lot of the "boys" from the various wholesale houses at his home in Lansdowne Heights last Sunday. This has grown to be an annual affair, with Samuel Parker chief and Martin Gannon director.

It goes without saying that the boys had a swell time. A baseball game and a pie-eating contest were features.

George Ueber has sold his land, four acres, and greenhouses at 53d street and Elmwood avenue to the Pennsylvania railroad for $40,000, and will now retire from business.

Martin Gannon, of Campbell's, has been spending a week in Washington, visiting friends. He reports giving the executive mansion a look-over.

Robert Crawford has closed the greenhouses at Secane, and will confine his energies to the store on South 11th street.

HEAT AFFECTS STOCK AND DEMAND.

The hot weather, which continued throughout the past week, was hard on business, particularly the wholesale section. It greatly increased the supply of stock, and many of the roses were open and nearly worthless when they reached the market, consequently they sold at push-cart rates or were lost. Even the best rose stock on the market was hard to move. By the middle of the week, the best American Beauties were going at $15 per 100, and only special stock of a few varieties of tea roses, such as Columbia and Mrs. Charles Russell, went above $4 and $5 per 100. The heat about finished the carnations as factors of the market, as it also brought a great flood of asters. Gladioli reached the stage of being a nuisance, as there were far more than could be disposed of. There were sales of gladioli as low as 40 and 50 cents per 100 and many were lost. Of course, America and other of the best varieties went better, but practically all were in a glut. The wholesalers do a lot of work in trying to get something out of heavy shipments of gladioli, they are picked over and trimmed and often are lost in the end. One-half the quantity that reached this market during the past week would have better served the purpose. All outdoor stock is in great need of rain, and for that reason, the quality of sweet peas has deteriorated. While everything was slow, on account of a lighter supply, there was no glut in orchids, lilies and lily of the valley. While business was quiet with the retailers, they had no particular reason to complain. At this time of year, funeral work and an occasional box or bunch, is their principal business, and they have been buying very cheap.

July 29.—Hot weather continues with great humidity. Buyers are scarce in the market this morning, and the few that are about are getting stock practically at their own prices, except in the case of orchids, lilies, lily of the valley, and a few of the best roses. The market is full of poor and worthless roses, so the few good ones have not fallen to the level of the rubbish. There is a glut of asters, and they are being offered at $4 and $5 per 1,000. In gladioli, even such varieties as America and Panama are going at sacrifice prices, while the poorer sorts are going to the dead carts. No improvement in conditions can be expected while the hot weather lasts.

NOTES.

Myer, of Madison avenue and 58th street, has just purchased a new six cylinder Studebaker car, and proposes to tour to the Pacific coast. Oram Khedishian, who has been employed by Myer for the past five years, left for Camp Upton, July 25. Just before his departure, he was presented with a handsome wrist-watch by his co-workers in the store. Wrist-watches, once considered a fad, are almost a necessity to a soldier for reasons readily understood. Henry Luhrs and Alex Emanuel, of Myer's staff, have returned from their vacations and resumed their labors. Maurice Kleinmann, the buyer, has started on a three weeks' vacation.

We occasionally refer to the honored name of Burns, which for many years has been represented in the florist business of this city. Alexander S. Burns retired some years ago, but his brother, William, is yet active as a retailer at 840 Sixth avenue, and has a fund of reminiscences of his years spent in the business. H. H. Burns, son of Alexander S., is now in the United States naval reserves, his store at 509 Madison avenue being conducted by a manager.

Two employees of Costos Sakelos, the Colonial Florist, Broadway and 157th street, left for an army camp, July 24.

This makes eight of his former employees who are now in the United States army. On the evening of the 23rd, in honor of the boys who were leaving, he gave a dinner to his entire staff, a custom he has followed when there were previous departures for camp.

Gardenias are not commonly seen in the market at this season, but the Henshaw Floral Co. is receiving some from A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., but, like all other stocks, they move slowly. This firm is also receiving exceptionally fine stock of Gladioli America.

G. E. M. Stumpp now spends most of his time at his Southampton, L. I. store. Fine water lilies are constantly in stock in the Fifth avenue store, which were grown in his Southampton ponds.

Max Schling has been kept busy with conducting two stores, one for cut flowers and another for seeds, but he intends to take time to attend the St. Louis convention of the S. A. F.

Philip F. Kessler, of the Cut Flower Exchange, has closed his stand for three weeks and says he will go away and try to forget cut flowers for that length of time.

Miss Durkin, bookkeeper for J. S. Fenrich, has returned from a week's vacation pleasantly spent at Mr. Fenrich's summer home at Bradley Beach, N. J.

During Ralph Armstrong's absence at his Newport, R. I. store, Charles F. Dailey is conducting the business at the Madison avenue store.

Louis Moncinleno, florist of Long Island City, was killed July 30, by a surface car hitting his wagon, in the early morning.

H. G. Perry, manager of the Dardis store, is with his family in the White Mountains of New Hampshire.

FLORISTS' ANNUAL OUTING.

The local florists and their families and invited guests had a delightful outing at Willoughbeach Park, July 24. The ideal weather was taken advantage of by a large and representative crowd. A hotly contested baseball game between the wholesalers and the retailers was won by the latter, but the wholesalers evened up matters by showing superiority in the tug-of-war. In the fat man's race, Al Barber led W. E. Cook across the tape. The sports programme also included numerous events which brought out a goodly number of contestants, prizes being awarded to the winners.

NOTES.

The next regular meeting of the florists' club will be held at the Hollenden hotel, August 5. Nominations for officers for the ensuing year will be made and a number of timely papers will be features of the programme.

The entire stock of the Cleveland Florists' Exchange has been sold to the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., the deal being closed July 29.

SUMMER DULLNESS VERY EVIDENT.

Mid-summer trade conditions are with us now in their fullness, and include the inevitable erratic supply of flowers and the still more uncertain call for them. Some retailers report a fairly good summer business, and others less fortunate complain of a lack of orders never before experienced, and through it all everyone is doing his best, and all are hopeful for better days when the present excessive heat and other unfavorable conditions will have passed. Some good roses are now coming in, but the supply is daily exhausted, while the stock of carnations continues large and their quality good. There is an overabundance of purple asters, while other colors and white are quite scarce, and the call for them active. Gladioli are good and the supply is about equal to the demand.

NOTES.

A. J. Stahelin, is equipping his heating plant with automatic stokers, and will use buckwheat coal next winter with this arrangement. Mr. Stahelin, with his wife and Mr. and Mrs. George Doemling and Harry Ingold, motored recently to Grand Lake, Mich., where an enjoyable time was spent.

Wm. Duger has extended the local florists an invitation to be his guests at a complimentary picnic at his Rockwood, Mich., nurseries, August 22. A large party will go and a very interesting programme of events for the day is being arranged.

J. J. Karins, of Philadelphia, Pa., is here with an exhibit of Henry A. Dreer's palms, pandanus and other foliage plants. He is accompanied by his sister, Miss Bessie Karins, who is this week the guest of Mrs. Walter Taepke.

Robert Rahaley, of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, has returned from a two-weeks fishing outing at Au Sable, Mich. He brought back some fine American brown and rainbow trout as evidence of his success.

Philip Breitmeyer has returned from a lengthy visit to his daughter at Lewiston, Mont., and will go this week to see his son, Harry, who is in the service at Newport News, Va., and will soon go overseas.

Miss Phyllis Fitzgerald is again at her desk at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, after an absence of two weeks at Pine Lake and Gognac Lake, near Battle Creek, Mich.

Mike Constantine, of the Majestic Flower Shop, is making good use of the dull season by working in the shipyards, while his brother looks after the business.

Charles Plumb is now with his family at Pointe du Chene, near Algonac, Mich., where he has a summer home and a war garden that he is justly proud of.

Thomas Browne is doing service as a juror in the federal court, and is required to remain on duty more hours than his greenhouse work would exact.

A. Pochelon and family are enjoying the breezes and fine fishing at Au Sable, Mich., and will remain there during the heated term.

John Moore, of Breitmeyer's Park Flower Shop, spent two weeks at Or-

George Hampton, of Philadelphia, Pa., is making an extended visit here, accompanied by his wife, who formerly lived in this city.

Henry Forster, of the E. A. Fettes force, has returned from a two-weeks outing at the "Flats" in Lake St. Clair, Mich.

A. Sylvestre, of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange force, spent his vacation motoring through the state last week.

Peter Pape, of the Central Floral Co., has in contemplation a motor trip to Chicago in the near future.

Visitors: Harry Heint and Frank Schramm, Toledo; J. P. McCarty, of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia.

NOTES.

H. G. Walker has taken over all the interests in the F. Walker Co., which has been established 43 years. The style of the firm name will be continued. This firm had the order for the wedding decorations and flowers at the ceremony of one of the soldiers at Camp Taylor, July 27.

August R. Baumer's genial smile indicates that all is well with him. As efficient secretary of the Kentucky Society of Florists, his absence from a meeting of the organization is rare indeed.

Anders Rasmussen, of New Albany, is planting Hoosier Beauty roses in the warm ends of his carnation houses. He tried this last year and the result was very satisfactory—fine flowers and foliage.

Mrs. Kingsley Walker has returned from a visit to her brother, Sergeant Herbert Funk, at Chillicothe, who expects to leave for France in the near future.

Callas sold well last winter, and many growers are putting them in larger numbers to guard against a possible shortage of Easter lilies this year.

The Jacob Shulz Co. has a very attractive summer window, with a running fountain and a pond in which water lilies are featured.

Fred Haupt was awarded a prize at the last meeting of the Rotarians for recognizing new members by their descriptions and business.

Wm. Mann, who spent his vacation at West Baden, has returned much improved in health and has gained five pounds in weight.

There is considerable call for blooming plants, with begonias about the only offerings, and not enough of them to make a show.

Bryant & Brady, the only wholesalers here who are not growers, report an excellent business for the season.

There are now 60,000 soldiers at Camp Taylor, and considerable money is spent with the florists.

Asters are now taking the place of carnations. Roses and gladioli sell well.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-seventh annual meeting will be held June, 1919.

RIDGEWOOD, N. J.—A. V. D. Snyder is seriously ill.

VENTURA, CALIF.—Bean prospects in this section are good and the acreage large.

ONION SETS.—It is reported bids of $2.50 have been made to Chicago growers for whites.

THE Wisconsin pea crop is looking well. The appearance of Alaskas indicates a 100 per cent yield.

SPINACH.—California grown is the only new crop seed offered in New York, price 42 cents per pound.

ALLING WOODRUFF now states that he personally owns control of the Aabing-Boyce Seed Co., Seattle, Wash.

SOME New York seedsmen find heavy inventories represent some kinds of seeds not likely to be disposed of at spring cost.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade July 21 were as follows: Timothy, $7.00 to $8.25 per 100 pounds.

AN inspection tour of the Fordhook Trial Grounds and Farms of the W. Atlee Burpee Co., Philadelphia, Pa., is described at length elsewhere in this issue.

A. H. GOODWIN, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, left July 27 to join Mrs. Goodwin in New York, whence they will repair to the White Mountains for three weeks.

TOLEDO, O.—Clover gained 25 cents, July 29, over the price on July 27, closing at $17.00. Cash timothy was unchanged at $4.30. September closed at $4.92½, October $4.57½, December $4.60, March $4.85 and April $4.85.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—The Lewis Implement & Seed Co., has filed articles of incorporation, with a capital stock of $100,000, taking over the business of Lewis & Chambers. The directors are F. N. Lewis, H. Hamilton Lewis and Chas. H. Allen.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—Lester L. Morse and family had a hair-breadth escape from serious injury recently when their Packard overturned on a slippery road, while returning to this city from San Jose. Other travelers lifted the car from the imprisoned.

VISITED NEW YORK: J. C. Vaughan, Chicago; Jean Davy, of Arpaion, Seine-et-Oise, France, with Madame Davy, returning from a six weeks' journey to the seed growing districts of California, including the Sacramento valley; George Lambert, of the American Spawn Co., St. Paul, Minn.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—The Alfred J. Brown Seed Co. has reorganized with common stock, paid in, $400,000, and is now selling $200,000 of preferred, making the total $600,000. The officers continue as heretofore, A. J. Brown, president, T. H. Brown, vice-president, and Edwin B. Seymour, secretary-treasurer.

California Seed Crops.

The season's advance shows damage to onion more apparent in the Delta section, the crops being reduced fully 60 per cent. About two-thirds of the acreage is in this section, the Santa Clara valley containing the remainder, which has been damaged 20 per cent.

Radish will not be over one-half what the acreage planted ought to produce. Some fine prospects were burned while in flower.

Spinach, carrot and beet promise good crops, one grower having contracts for 3,000,000 pounds of the last named.

Lettuce will be short about 75 per cent of the crop expected.

Northrup, King & Co.'s Modern Plant.

"Equipped for Service" is the appropriate title of an attractive, handsomely illustrated booklet of 24 pages, describing the modern equipment of Northrup, King & Co.'s extensive establishment at Minneapolis, Minn. The illustrations indicate the methods, machines and personnel responsible for the efficient conduct of this large business. Automatic equipment plays a leading part throughout—moving belts for unloading, storage tanks, gravity conveyors, elevator scales with a capacity of 3,000 bushels per hour, cleaning machinery, etc. Accuracy and time-saving are vital features in every department. The electric truck is another of the firm's factors for internal transportation. The main building of reinforced concrete is 420 feet long and 100 feet wide, partly four and partly six stories in height, and contains the offices, printing department, shipping room, garden seed department, cleaning department and storage floors. The corn warehouse is 74x302 feet, and consists of two stories and a basement, while the onion seed warehouse is 67x158 feet with a capacity of 60,000 bushels. Ground has already been broken for additional field seed storage tanks with a capacity of more than 50,000 bushels and another warehouse will be completed this summer to provide greater storage facilities.

The officers of the company are C. C. Massie, president; L. M. King, vice-president and treasurer, and E. B. Northrup, secretary, and who are ably assisted by G. C. Thomson, manager garden seed department; C. A. Burnham, sales manager; A. K. Bush, manager growing department; A. E. Bather, field representative; M. Keating, manager western branch at Salt Lake City; H. H. Williams, general superintendent; J. H. Whitney, field seed department; C. N. Hart, credit manager, G. H. Hobart, Jr., advertising manager; H. T. O'Brien, seed analyst; F. C. Hansen, traffic manager, and C. W. Brown, office manager.

Seed Tests.

Bulletin No. 446 of the New York agricultural experiment station, Geneva, in calling attention to seed tests made at the station during 1916-1917, has the following in part:

"Of the 906 official samples of agricultural seeds collected by the commissioner of agriculture during the past two years and forwarded to the station for examination, 51, or 5.6 per cent, were found, upon analysis, to be violations of the seed law. Although containing more than three per cent of foreign seed they were not so labeled. The usual amount of unlabeled goods containing seeds of dodder and other noxious weeds and excessive amounts of inert matter was found. A careful study of the results of the seed inspection since the adoption of the present seed law shows some benefits derived from the inspection and also some serious defects in the law, but fails to show an appreciable improvement in the quality of the seeds upon the New York market or in the conditions under which they are offered for sale. The number of violations of the law has decreased noticeably, while the number of labeled lots has increased. Nevertheless, the present law, which permits three per cent of weed seeds and any amount of inert matter to be sold in crop seeds without being so labeled, is too tolerant.

"The remedy suggested is to substitute for the present inadequate seed law the provisions of the uniform state seed law, drafted by the Association of Official Seed Analysts of America and approved by the American Seed Trade Association. This, if adopted and administered under the present system of inspection, would carry, in addition to its regulatory value, unlimited educational possibilities for the purchaser of seeds. The government has suggested as a war emergency measure that all lots of seed containing 10 pounds or more and sold for seeding purposes should bear uniform label information as follows: (1) Name of seedsmen; (2) kind of seed; (3) proportion of pure, live seed present, with the month and year of germination test; and, (4) country and locality of origin in the case of certain imported seeds."

OSTRICH EGG is the name of a new Honey Dew melon.—Arizonas sold in New York at $5 per crate, southern-grown at $3.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Central purchasing control in the subsistence division of the quartermaster's corps has resulted in the saving of $400,000 in the buying of potatoes and onions alone since February, 1918, the war department announced July 29.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, July 30.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, 75 cents; celery, crate 50 cents; head lettuce, 2-dozen, $1.00 to $1.25; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.00 to $1.25; tomatoes, 4 baskets, 50 to 75 cents.

New York, July 29.—Celery (state), per bunch, 15 to 50 cents; cucumbers, $1.00 to $2.50 per basket; mushrooms, 40 to 85 cents per pound; tomatoes, per pound, 14 to 15 cents; lettuce, per package, 75 cents to $1.50; radishes, per 100 bunches, 50 cents to $1.00.

Chicago's War Gardens.

A value of $3,529,380 has been placed upon the war gardens of Chicago by the garden bureau of the State Council of Defense. An average of 2,989 gardens with 238,422 gardeners is also compiled by the bureau. This includes the back yard gardens, children's school gardens, and vacant lot gardens within the city limits, and of this number, the back yard gardens and back yard gardeners are in the overwhelming majority, it being estimated that 140,000 of Chicago's citizens are tilling the soil on their own premises. The garden bureau during the spring months distributed 214,000 pieces of literature, including garden primers, signs, posters and record books.

Vegetable Markets.

From reports received by the United States department of agriculture for the period July 23-29, shipments were lighter in practically all lines of produce, and prices tended generally upward. In potatoes, Virginia barreled Cobblers furnished the bulk of the movement, and are now supplying all of the eastern markets and many middle western centers. Virginia Irish Cobblers ranged $4.00-$5.25 per barrel, while New Jersey and Long Island stock closed strong in New York at $4.00-$4.50. New Jersey yellow onion stock was in light supply and prices advanced steadily, closing in New York at $2.40-$2.50 per bushel hamper. California yellow stock held exactly level at Chicago at $3-$3.25 per 100 pounds. Shipments were light and scattered. Tennessee tomato stock has disappeared from the leading markets. Home grown stock is supplying most northern markets, and New Jersey stock is reaching most northeastern cities. New Jersey stock brought $1.25-$2 per bushel basket in New York. Twenty-quart baskets in northeastern cities closed at $1.25-$1.60. Cabbage shipments decreased. Iowa stock ranged steady at $50-$70 per ton in jobbing markets in the middle west. Shipments of miscellaneous vegetables were relatively light.

"The Food Producing Garden."

The above is the title of an interesting book of 100 pages, by Harry A. Day, F.R.H.S., author of "Spade-craft" and "Vegeticulture." Sidcup, Kent, England, recently published by Methuen & Co., Ltd., London, from whom it may be obtained upon receipt of price, 2 shillings, net. It is intended as a book of advice to those desirous of making the most of their ground, showing clearly the essential facts connected with fruit and vegetable growing, bee-keeping, poultry, rabbits, pigs and goats. It also tells how to prevent waste and to organize the garden with a view to food production without destroying its pleasurable features. Included in its contents are chapters devoted to the organization of space, soil, time and labor, utilization of waste materials, the allotment, flower, vegetable and fruit gardens, the garden under glass, the household hen, duck and other birds and useful animals unsuited to the average garden. The book is written upon the basis of the author's own personal failures and the application of right methods instead of wrong ones.

New Early-Flowering or Winter-Blooming GIANT PANSIES

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering and its unusual hardiness, which enables them to withstand quite severe Winters and to bloom right on into the Summer. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant.

14. WINTER SUN. Golden yellow, eye. 16. CELESTIAL QUEEN. Light or sky blue.
15. ICE KING. Silvery white, with eye. 17. CHARM OF MARCH. Dark velvety blue.
18. MIXED. The above four colors with other shades and variations. Each color separate or mixed.
500 seeds, 25c; 1000 seeds, 40c; 1/2 oz., $1.10; 1/4 oz., $2.00; oz., $7.50.

American Association of Nurserymen.

J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex., President; J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa., Vice-President; Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass., Secretary and Treasurer. Forty-four annual convention will be held at Chicago in 1919.

INGLEWOOD, CALIF.—The local nursery of the Morris & Snow Seed Co. has been discontinued and the stock moved to Los Angeles.

THE next annual convention of the Association of American Cemetery Superintendents will be held at Rochester, N. Y., September 11-14.

TOKIO, JAPAN.—The United States department of agriculture has presented to this city 10 young Kalmia latifolia trees, native of North America. Dr. Walter T. Swingle, of the department, was sent with the trees. Eight of them have been planted in Hibiya park and the others in the horticultural nursery at Shibuya.

Smithsonian So. Amer. Botanical Survey.

The Smithsonian Institution is planning to conduct a botanical survey of all northern South America. The results of the survey will be available both here and in the various republics to be visited. J. N. Rose, assistant curator of the division of plants, is now on his way to Ecuador to make a general botanical collection in the northern Andes. B. F. L.

Illinois Plant Inspection Act.

The department of agriculture of the state of Illinois, Springfield, calls attention to the act passed by the last legislature, known as the Plant Inspection Act, in which four quarantines, now in effect, are embodied, as follows:

Prohibiting the shipment into Illinois of all five-leaved pines, and all species and other varieties of currants and gooseberries from the New England States, New York, New Jersey, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and Minnesota, on account of the presence in these states of white pine blister rust, a very destructive disease of the plants mentioned.

Prohibiting the shipment into Illinois from all outside sources of the common (European) high-bush barberry, both the green-leaf and purple-leaf variety, due to the fact that these are hosts of the early spring stage of the black stem rust of wheat. Nurserymen of the state and the American Association of Nurserymen have agreed to destroy all of the common barberry in their nurseries and not to grow or sell this variety. The Japanese barberry is harmless and the quarantine does not apply to it.

Prohibiting shipments into the state of Christmas trees from the New England States, to prevent the introduction of the gypsy moth, which is closely related to the tussock moth, but many times more destructive, devastating both orchards and woodlands.

Prohibiting the importation into the state of chestnut nursery stock from Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia, on account of the presence in those states of the chestnut bark disease.

Apple Production Cost in Idaho.

The current cost of producing apples in the Payette valley, in western Idaho, averaged 71 cents per bushel box under the normal prices of farm labor and material which existed in 1915, when farm management specialists of the United States department of agriculture conducted a study in the district. The report of their study has been published in Bulletin 636, and is one of a series of publications covering the studies in intensive commercial apple-growing districts in the northwest.

It was found that yield was the principal factor which affects the cost per box in the Payette and other valleys where studies were made, and that the cost of maintaining an orchard remains practically the same per acre whether the yields are high or low. Other factors affecting the cost per box are the size of the orchard, the system of orchard management which is practiced, and the amount of credit derived from wood and cull apples from the orchard.

Summer-Flowering Trees.

Several interesting trees will flower in the Arboretum at different times during the next two months. Among these summer-flowering trees are the Chinese Sophora japonica, the maackia of eastern Siberia, Acanthopanax ricinifolius from northern Japan, the aboretum aralias from the southern United States and eastern Asia, the Korean and Chinese evodias, the sour wood or oxydendrum from our southern states, the Chinese koelreuteria and one of the American catalpas (C. bignonoides). It is interesting that only three of these trees, one of the aralias, the sour wood and the catalpa are American, and that the others have been brought to this country from eastern Asia.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, July 5, 1918.

Nashville, Tenn.

STOCK IN LIMITED SUPPLY.

Trade conditions remain unchanged with a scarcity of stocks and shipments from outside markets which help to take care of a good volume of funeral work. The growers in every instance are trying to conform to the government regulations and conserve in every way possible. At each establishment they have released their young men for other work and are trying to manage with fewer laborers and less fuel. The true spirit of patriotism is everywhere evident.

NEW MCINTYRE RANGE.

The McIntyre Floral Co., consisting of three brothers and one sister, conduct one of the oldest florist establishments in the state, the same having been founded by their father, D. McIntyre, who settled here in 1867, and in all the years that followed the children succeeding the father, have carried on a flourishing business. They have a tract of five acres on the Hillsboro road on which are located a number of houses, fully equipped for the successful cultivation of stock. This range, located about three miles from the center of the city, is now surrounded by the fine homes. Owing, however, to the fuel conservation order, this firm has decided to give up this establishment and will concentrate all their efforts at a newer and larger place on the Murfreesboro road. The new establishment has about 50,000 feet of glass. The old houses will not be removed at present, but the acreage will be sold and the company will improve the property and residences will be built from time to time. The old gardens are rich in nursery stock. The new location embraces 40 acres and five acres of this have already been put in nursery stock. Three hundred handsome azalea plants will be moved from the old range in the fall. As regards the labor situation, they are fortunate in their own young men, four or five in number, all of whom are being trained to become practical florists. One of the sons who attained the draft age recently has volunteered and will leave in September. There are now five stars in the service flag. The other boys are 15 years old or younger.

INCREASED SUPPLY, WITH DULL DEMAND.

There was a very radical change in the flower market the latter half of July, due to the very hot weather and intense humidity, which increased the stock of flowers produced, especially the outdoor varieties, but also lessened the volume of trade. There are excellent asters on the market, in all the best varieties, and they command a good price. Roses of good quality are very plentiful, and the short-stemmed, open stock gets no consideration whatever. Columbia, the new rose, is making quite a place for itself on this market, several of the local growers having a nice cut of them daily.

NOTES.

The New Haven Floral Co. is cutting large quantities of gladioli and roses, including the new rose, Columbia. Three of their large houses are being planted with young carnation stock, which is looking very fine.

All hands are busy at the greenhouses of A. J. Lanternier & Co., filling the carnation houses with the young stock from the field. They are cutting some fine lilies in the rubrum and aurum varieties.

The Flick Floral Co. reports a heavy run on funeral work during the past two weeks, and are showing particularly fine summer roses and asters. Carnations are being planted at the greenhouses.

A good-sized wedding helped to dispose of some good stock at the store of the Freese Floral Co. last week. Baskets of roses and gladioli were used in the decoration of both church and house.

Summer business has held up unusually well at the store of Ed Weninghoff, with flowers for the sick room and baskets for various occasions in nearly as heavy demand as funeral work.

A fine cut of Columbia roses is being sent to the store of the Doswell Floral Co. daily from their greenhouses. Their asters are of very fine quality and find a ready sale.

Ed. Lanternier, R. W. Doswell and Herman Leitz, the latter of the New Haven Floral Co., New Haven, Ind., are in Chicago for a few days on a business trip.

Business during the month of July has more than equaled the demand of the same month in previous years, according to the majority of the florists here.

The cut of summer roses and asters is very large at the Vesey greenhouses, and they are expecting a fine orchid crop the first of September.

Several local florists are planning to attend the S. A. F. convention at St. Louis, Mo., August 20-22.

H. K.

WORCESTER, MASS. — The Worcester County Horticultural Society had an excellent exhibition of flowers, vegetables and fruits in Horticultural hall, July 18. Among those who made displays were Irishmore Gardens, Miss Lucy Coulson, Mrs. H. L. White and Mrs. Percy G. Forbes.

COAL SCREENINGS DANGER.

Seriously Liable to Spontaneous Combustion.

Let Greenhousemen Beware.

A modification of the fuel order issued to state administrators by the United States fuel administration, July 8, permits the use of screenings in greenhouses west of the Mississippi river and in Illinois and Indiana, provided the approval of the federal fuel administrator is obtained, and which will be withheld where such action would impair the fuel supply to manufacturing plants on the war trade board's preference list, as announced in our issue of July 27, page 52. Greenhousemen will, however, do well to give the matter careful consideration before acting.

Administration Restrictions.

In a communication to the fuel committee of the Chicago Florists' Club, consisting of C. L. Washburn, Peter Reinberg and August Poehlmann, attention is called by the state fuel administrator, J. E. Williams, to the following: "In view of the qualification in the Washington order, we have decided that a general permission for the use of screenings for full operation shall be limited to screenings procured from central or northern Illinois mines. If screenings are desired from southern Illinois mines, such application must be made to this office, stating the name of the mine and the amount of screenings involved, and the matter will receive attention and investigation. Special permission will issue if found merited."

While the use of screenings, where permitted, offers a possible solution of the problem as to operating greenhouse establishments to greater capacity than the original fuel order which restricted consumption to 50 per cent of the usual supply, growers should also bear well in mind that this form of fuel, aside from being of low grade, carries with it the grave danger of spontaneous combustion, especially in most Illinois coals, and the further north in the state the location of the source of supply, the poorer the quality and the more subject are the screenings to such combustion.

The Storage Problem.

In a bulletin of the engineering experiment station, University of Illinois, by H. H. Stoeck, entitled "The Storage of Bituminous Coal," attention is called to the fact that the greatest difficulty in the storage of coal is the tendency of many varieties to fire spontaneously. The gradual heating of a coal pile is mainly due to slow oxidation of the carbon in the coal, and, to a less extent, to similar action of sulphur in the iron pyrites contained in the coal. If the air supply is sufficient to permit oxidation, but not sufficient to carry away the heat as rapidly as it is formed, the temperature in the pile will rise gradually, and finally the coal will fire. Any method of storage, to be successful, must be so designed that the heat generated in the pile will not exceed the heat lost by radiation. The smaller the coal, the greater is the surface area exposed to the air, the more rapid is the oxidation, and the greater the tendency to heat; hence, coal in lumps is not so likely to fire as fine coal, slack or run of mine. If possible, the slack should be removed before storing.

A Questionnaire.

In response to a questionnaire on coal data sent out by the experiment station to a large number of firms and individuals, a summary of conclusions and suggestions was prepared, among them the following:

Fine coal or slack has sometimes been safely stored where air has been excluded from the interior of the pile. This may be accomplished by a closely sealed wall, built around the pile, or by close packing. On the other hand, where coal cannot be so closely packed, the danger of spontaneous combustion may be lessened by so piling, that air may circulate through it freely and carry off the heat due to oxidation of the carbon.

It is the opinion of many, that damp coal or coal stored on a damp base, is particularly liable to spontaneous combustion and that it is safer not to dampen coal at the time of or after placing it in storage.

If space permits, low piles are preferable, as the coal is more fully exposed to the air and is better cooled, and in case of heating, can be moved quickly. If possible, the coal should be divided by alleyways to facilitate rapid loading out in case of emergency, so that the entire supply may not be endangered by fire in one section.

Ample Water Needed.

Water is effective in quenching fire in a pile, only if the quantity is ample. Unless there is plenty to put out the fire and cool the coal, it is very dangerous to add water to a coal pile.

The practicability of ventilating has been disputed, and while the consensus of opinion in the United States is against the use of pipes, it is probable that many of the opinions are based upon unfavorable results secured through improperly installed or inadequate ventilating systems. There are, however, few adequate systems on record in this country, as they are expensive and interfere to some extent with the rapid handling of the coal.

The best preventive of loss in coal storage is to regularly inspect the pile. If the temperature reaches 150 degrees F., the pile should be carefully watched. Should the temperature rise to 175 or 180 degrees, the coal should be removed as quickly as possible and thoroughly cooled before being replaced in storage.

As a final word of warning, the bulletin places special emphasis on the fact that lack of attention to details and improper handling, will, in many cases, result in dangerous fires and consequent losses. Do not undertake to store coal until you are sure you know how to do it properly and safely.

Growers' Experiences.

J. F. Ammann, of J. F. Ammann & Co., Edwardsville, Ill., located in the soft coal belt, calls attention to the fact that unless a perfectly rain-proof shed is available, screenings should be stored in the open in ricks not over six or seven feet high with ample air passages between. Storage in large quantities even in rain-proof enclosures is advised against for fear of spontaneous combustion, the ricking system being the safer way, and the amount of deterioration from now until the firing season is over, would amount to very little. The ricks should not be more than 10 to 15 feet wide at the bottom, converging to a point at the top.

T. W. Duggan, executor of the Dale estate, Brampton, Ont., reports considerable trouble with their coal supply heating last winter, which is attributed to piling it too high, over 20 feet, whereas insurance men maintain that coal should not be piled higher than eight feet. At present, ventilating pipes are placed running from the floor up at a distance of 21 feet from the wall and 14 feet apart, but he adds that if he were to do it over again, he would use 6-inch ventilating tile, 15 feet from the wall and 13 feet apart, and the stacks would not be higher than 12 or 14 feet. A special rate of insurance is asked where slack is stored.

W. N. Rudd, president of Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, Morgan Park, Chicago, says there is danger of spontaneous combustion, especially in screenings, if there is the slightest degree of dampness when piled, or if piled too high. His personal experience was to have 70 tons of screenings catch fire at one time, and he has known of cases of spontaneous combustion in cars on the track.

Anders Rasmussen, prominent grower of New Albany, Ind., had his coal supply for the coming season piled about 12 feet high in a basement five feet below the ground line. About four weeks ago it caught fire, but fortunately, being in the city limits, he called the fire department, who put it out, temporarily, after pouring water on it for 36 hours. July 29, smoke was again noticed, and it required 12 hours on this occasion for the department to extinguish it. The pile contains nearly 1,000 tons. He says he does not see how the florist living in the country, and having to pump his own water would ever be able to get enough of a supply to put out a fire, and his advice in such a case would be to pile not higher than four or five feet, so that in case of spontaneous combustion, it would be possible to dig in and put it out.

A. Washburn & Sons, well-known Bloomington, Ill., florists, used screenings exclusively several years ago and found grave danger from fire if stored in a tight place where the air could not obtain free access. If piled outdoors, in not too large quantities, it kept very well, and there was little danger of combustion as long as the air could reach it. In cases where snow or sleet formed a crust, it was found necessary to remove this, and in several instances the piles were found to be on fire under the edges of the frozen covering.

Greenhouse Management.

By L. C. Corbett, Horticulturist, Bureau of Plant Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

With a greatly reduced supply of fuel for the coming season, the greenhouse men face the necessity of making the best possible use of every unit of heat. Growers who have efficient heating plants, and well constructed houses in good repair, and who are already making the best possible use of their fuel, can do little except to substitute cool crops for such crops as tomatoes and cucumbers. Many heating plants, however, are in poor repair and do not make good use of the fuel consumed.

Contrary to the general belief, the geographical location of the plant does not make as much difference in the amount of fuel consumed in a given period of time as most growers believe. Data collected by the department of agriculture show that plants located in the Boston, Mass., area use pretty nearly the same amount of fuel in a definite period of time as those located in the southern portion of the country. The firing period, however, is shorter in the latter section, hence with a reduced supply of fuel, plants so located will be able to operate at more nearly capacity, due to the longer season in which no fuel is required.

In order to make the very best use of the supply of fuel available, it will be necessary for every greenhouse man to practice every possible economy. The grower should start at once to put his plant in condition to utilize every unit of heat to be secured from his allotted supply of fuel, whether it be coal, wood, oil, or natural gas. No matter how carefully the greenhouse is constructed, from the very nature of the structure it is difficult to heat. It is a well-known fact that heating engineers allow several times as much radiation for each square foot of glass as they do for brick, stone or even wood walls. The greenhouse must of necessity be of light construction, as heavy members cause an undue amount of shading, and unless very well braced and secured, there is bound to be a certain amount of vibration in any greenhouse, owing to wind, snows, etc. The tendency is for putty to become loosened, thus making the house more or less open, and unless prompt repairs are made, the structure soon becomes so loose that it is almost impossible to maintain a suitable temperature without the use of an excessive amount of fuel. Anyone who has had occasion to climb on the roof of a greenhouse will realize how much heat is lost around the glass owing to small leaks. There is in all cases, a veritable current of heated air arising from the roof of almost any greenhouse, unless it be a house in the very best of repair. The summer months should be utilized to go over the houses and tighten them up in every way possible. Where any doubt exists, the glass should be removed and replaced, using fresh putty.

Greenhouses are very likely to settle, due to improper foundation, causing the doors and ventilators to fit poorly. Time spent in refitting doors and adjusting ventilators, so that they will close properly, and the placing of heaters on which they rest, will be time felt between the doors and the jambs, and between the ventilators and the and money well invested.

Greenhouses having wood side walls are very likely to be wasteful of heat, and such structures should be tightened in any way possible. It is frequently feasible to line the inside of the wall with cheap building paper, this material being satisfactory for a season or two, and in view of the fact that the whole operation can be done at low cost, it will in many cases pay handsome returns on the time and money spent.

Many growers in the northern section of the country make a practice of using storm doors on the outside of the houses to protect the plants near the doors from strong drafts. This is an excellent idea and should be more generally followed in all sections of the country, as it not only protects the plants from draft, but conserves heat. A vestibule and a storm door may be constructed at small cost, and can be used from year to year.

While all greenhouse men realize that ventilation is essential to the successful growth of practically all plants, yet many growers make the mistake of opening the ventilators of their houses a great deal farther than is necessary to produce the desired results. This practice is exceedingly wasteful of heat, and during the coming winter the grower will find himself under the necessity of conserving every unit of heat in order to carry his crops through on the amount of fuel available to him.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Ribbon Demand More Active.

Though for a time buyers were not very much inclined to follow up the advancing prices for ribbons with further orders, it was said in the market recently that there has been a resumption of buying activity. This is apparently the result of a growing conviction among purchasers that it would be useless to hold off for a price reaction. It is becoming more evident every day that supplies are not to be plentiful this fall because of curtailed production at the mills. On the other hand, many kinds of ribbons are urgently needed for a variety of purposes. Styles favor ribbons in hats, dresses, and underwear, and retail business is good. Buyers are, therefore, coming to see the necessity of obtaining supplies while it is still possible to do so.

Tumbler Baskets.

With the plentiful material that is now in hand of dahlias and short stemmed roses, not to mention other flowers, of which the long sprayed fall aster with its light feathery blue flowers can also be had in quantity, there is a great opportunity to run sales and feature the tumbler basket.

These pretty receptacles for flowers are presented now in the greatest variety. Each supply house has patterns of its own, many of them with open work sides, through which is seen the colored enamel tins, for tins or fibre cups, have taken the place of tumblers, they giving more water space than the tumbler and are generally enameled a solid color of the same or contrasting color to the basket. Pink and white, blue and white, green and white in two tones and various other tints and color combinations are seen in the many patterns.

Fill a light blue basket with pink dahlias or roses and a few aster sprays, tie with a light blue narrow ribbon or small fluffy bow of chiffon, and the effect will be found very pleasing. Orange shaded baskets are very showy with Dahlias Minnie McCullough and Country Girl, any of the bronzy tinted sorts or zinnias in their season before the dahlias, are very showy. There is more variety of color in the zinnia than almost any other flower; no matter the shade, they appear to work up harmoniously together.

Single dahlias are fine for basket work, as are the pompons. A combination of a few choice flowers of larger sorts with the pompons makes a pretty and satisfactory basket. Autumn leaves work in nicely with the dahlias.

FILLED WITH ROSES.

When the short stemmed roses can be bought at from $10 to $17, a thousand, as in the early fall and the spring, 15 to 18 flowers will fill a basket nicely; in fact, one dozen pink roses, together with a few of the blue fall asters, will make a very pretty showing. Ophelia and Sunburst roses will also work up well with the aster.

To sell these in quantity, they must be well displayed. Two or three may be sold out of half a dozen made up, but if 50 are filled, and the window crowded with them, they are sure to attract attention and move off rapidly. One such sale helps another, until customers come and ask so repeatedly for them, they become a standard stock. When not sold as a special, they should bring a higher price, from 25 to 50 cents more, and there should always be something larger and higher priced for those who have more money to spend.

These baskets to be sold for $1.00, complete and ready for delivery, should not cost over from 35 to 40 cents. Of course, this is only possible when the market is over stocked, but as this is known to happen quite frequently during the season, such periods of over production should be taken advantage of in this way. Very often in the daily routine there are found odds and ends of short stock, or there is a lull and time to work up enough to fill a place at one end of the counter or a small table near the front of the store. Such stock if nicely put together with a view to color effect, sure to catch the eye and find customers. Great care should always be taken to see that none but the freshest stock is used, so as to insure a reasonable life to the flowers. Nothing should be wired—a few fern leaves in the tin, or just the stems and foliage will hold the flowers in place. Gather what are to be used together in the hand and put them in the basket together, a little straightening out and the result is often as satisfactory as when each blossom is placed separately. The accompanying illustrations of baskets are filled with flowers, all of which could be purchased in most of the wholesale markets during September for $10 per thousand and probably at the same ratio in 500 lots. Baskets fitted with tins can be bought from any of the supply houses at from $10 to $12 dollars per hundred.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The general consensus of opinion of most men in the retail shop, relative to the business of the summer is, that it is much better than was looked forward to at this time last year. Also, that the general situation is gradually getting better, with the outlook for the coming winter being decidedly more rosy than at this time last season. Those who are keeping up a good front, and making a bid for the seasonable trade of this time, are not missing many tricks. Men who think there is little doing, and that it is not worth while to try for such trifles, invariably lose opportunities that would open their eyes in astonishment could they but see them.

Give this plan a trial next week. Run a "gladioli special." Fill the window with several shallow bowls containing fancy stock, something that will be sure to attract attention. A vase or two of moderate priced stock, with the figures prominently displayed, will help to bring the admirers into the store. A good sized spray of white or pink varieties on palm leaves, with a ribbon will perhaps just fit in with the requirements of some who see it. At any rate, it is a good specimen of your handiwork, and for this reason alone is worth the few spikes required.

A magnolia or oak leaf wreath, decorated with gladioli, is another good window piece. These, if made fresh each day, are well worth the cost of the flowers in the attention they attract.

Inside the store, 100 spikes in vases holding a dozen each, in separate colors, if well placed, will make a good showing. A few sprays of Sprengeri for each will relieve the straight outlines.

A large vase basket, from which the spikes can be sold, can be made very showy and attractive. A slashing bow of appropriate colored ribbon might be added to lend its effectiveness.

In all the funeral work of this time, gladioli should play an important part. Nothing could be handsomer than well flowered spikes of the choice varieties.

Gladioli are at their best when allowed to open fairly well on the plants. When shipped a distance, they are, as a rule, cut too tight, and never open out to their full quantity of flowers and brilliant colors. They should never be squeezed or crowded into a jar or vase, as this bruises all the bottom flowers. Short tubs or buckets, with a band or hoop about a foot above the edge, to keep the spikes erect, is best for storage purposes.

Secretary John Young at Multinowah Falls on Columbia River Highway, Near Portland, Ore., in Company With James Forbes, J. B. Pilkington and Others of That City.

Where there is greenhouse room, start a dozen hanging baskets of tradescantia; if stock is not on hand, it can be had from some grower for a trifle, as it is generally found wild under the tables. Stick the common galvanized wire basket, with green mossed lining, full of sprays, which if well watered, grow rapidly at this time. Pinch several times to make thick and bushy, and then let the vines run. These will in a couple of months make fine window ornaments and sell well. Similar baskets of saxifraga are very attractive and salable, but are best done by the grower, as they take longer.

The miniature, narrow-leaved green tradescantia, if grown in six and seven inch fern pans, and given a little space, raised on a pot, so as to finish well all around, makes an ideal small table center or filling for the fernery.

The patriotic posters which are now so conspicuous are to be had for the asking, and should be prominently displayed in the window and store. Aside from the patriotic motive, they are very decorative. Good sized flags of the countries of the allies, together with Old Glory, should also have a place. From a business point of view, all this is worth while, and all the money it costs. Keep "Say it with flowers" well to the front. It is your slogan, the thing you most desire. Make the best also of the other literature of this S. A. F. publicity campaign. You believe, of course, in having your business helped in this way. Send your "ten spot" of approval to Secretary John Young, 1170 Broadway, New York. Do it right now.

War Conditions in Greenhouses.

LABOR SHORTAGE SERIOUSLY FELT.

C. & G. L. Pennock still continue a business founded by their father Abraham L. Pennock in the early 70's. This was, generally speaking, the pioneer rose growing establishment in the country, a few being grown in a small way at that time in the vicinity of Boston. The almost 150,000 square feet of glass covered ground is vast, as compared to the Safrano and Bon Silene houses of that day, but the writer questions very much if they could even now beat them in quality. Wartime handicaps at this establishment are now severe; but four out of the 12 men considered necessary are left, the others being engaged in war industries at two and three times the usual wages.

Two-thirds of the range was closed down last winter after the holidays, affecting 50,000 plants. Nothing was cut after January 1. At the end of February, they were started up with temperatures 45° to 50°, which gradually increased with the warmer weather up to 60°. The plants came away fast, made a splendid growth, and have given a wonderfully fine crop of flowers. The money value is about 30 per cent below last year, but not having to rest them, it is believed they will even up with last year by fall. The varieties are Mock, Russell, Double White Killarney, Ophelia and Ward.

In the large separate range of three ridge and furrow houses, each 35 feet wide and 375 long, the inside gutters being 10 feet above ground, forcing is continuous. The stock here looks very well, all in ground beds. Ophelia has been in three years. Russell and Double White Killarney, the latter bed in seven years, were particularly strong. These had been cut back severely last season and were almost like young plants again. Jos. E. Simpson, a nephew of Robert Simpson, well-known grower of Clifton, N. J., is the foreman. He has a number of wrinkles about rose growing which work out all right. He does not believe in changing stock on account of age; if cared for properly, beds will last a long time. He is particular regarding the summer resting period, doing this gradually while still cutting stock. The period, until fully ripened, is about six weeks, the last two of which the bed is bone dry. The starting up is the most critical time, particularly if the weather is very hot. The plants must not get much water at first; the young growth and new roots must come along together. If too much sap is pushed into the young shoots, they get away too fast, are without strength to stand the excessive heat, wilt down, and the plant dies. It is this hurry-up treatment that causes so much loss at this critical period. Careful watering and more time for development, until the growth hardens up, is the safest plan.

It is the same with freshly planted beds of young stock; they will make a much more sturdy growth, if kept a little on the dry side until they become firmly established. Thorough, forceful syringing is considered very important in keeping plants clean and free of insects. The sprayer for the end of the hose is very simple—a $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch brass cap, with a slot $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch in length by $\frac{1}{16}$ -inch width. This screwed on the hose gives a fine, strong well divided spray that can be easily played in any direction.

Plants that had been lifted from beds in one house to make room for another variety, had been cut back and planted quite close together on tables in another house, so as to get all out of this space possible during the fall, and until the house had to be closed down. CARNATIONS SURVIVE SEVERE TREATMENT.

Emil Leiker, a carnation specialist was hard hit last winter, having his entire place, 30,000 feet of glass covered ground, frozen from lack of coal. The temperature in the houses went down to 16°, and remained there for long periods. While the ground froze solid, yet the carnations in the beds survived. An entire side bench of rooted cuttings in two inches of sand, stood through all the winter, frequently being frozen solid, as there was no heat whatever, except that of the sun. Practically not one of them was killed. They started to grow in the spring weather, throwing up shoots with buds which opened out.

The houses here are now filled with tomatoes succeeding the first planting of April, which were set out when danger of frost was past. From these a good early crop was obtained. This second crop to come in during September looks very promising. After this the houses will be closed down as Mr. Leiker says he will not lay in any coal, as he cannot afford to pay $4 a day to men and run his houses at a profit.

American Rose Society.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

The following request has been received from the Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., for registration of a rose, and this has been approved by the rose registration committee. Unless objections are received within three weeks from the date of this publication, the registration will be permanently accepted:

Name—Aunt Harriet. Class, hybrid Wichuraiana; parentage, Apolline x Wichuraiana. Description: Habit of plant, vigorous climber; character of foliage, dark green, healthy; freedom of growth and hardiness, hardy to zero temperature, free grower; flower, very large for multiflora type; color, rich crimson, white eye; form, semi-double; fragrance and bud, moderate; petalage, average multiflora; freedom of bloom and lasting quality, among the best, moderate.

The rose is unlike any other, and superior for the following reasons: Intense brilliancy, hardiness, fine foliage and especially suited to those who want a fine show from a rose that will require but little care.

American Gladiolus Society.

BUFFALO CONVENTION, AUGUST 14-17.

The approaching exhibition of the American Gladiolus Society at Buffalo, N. Y., August 14-17, promises to be one of the largest ever held. The event has been already well advertised locally, and the public interest in the exhibition is most unusual at this time of year. Elmwood Music Hall proving unsuitable, the show will be held in the ball room of the Hotel Iroquois. This room was used to stage the annual exhibition of the American Carnation Society and is in every way suitable for a flower show. Intending exhibitors should keep in mind this change.

The local committee, consisting of E. W. Werick, president of the Buffalo Florists' Club; W. J. Palmer, S. A. Anderson, D. J. Scott, E. C. Brucker and Commissioner H. B. Saunders, of the Chamber of Commerce, has the local arrangements well in hand. At a meeting of this committee, August 2, your secretary went over the arrangements for the exhibition.

Exhibitors should mail their entries at once. This will be of great assistance to the local committee in providing sufficient vases, and also to the secretary. Address exhibits prepaid, to Exhibition, American Gladiolus Society, Hotel Iroquois, Buffalo, N. Y., or addressed to the above in care of the W. F. Kasting Company, 568 Washington street.

Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, Ill., offers a bronze medal as additional prizes in each of the following open to all classes: No. 37.—Six spikes of Princeps; No. 38.—Six spikes of Primulinus Sunbeam, and No. 39.—Six vases of the blue, lavender and violet shades, three spikes each.

Hotel Iroquois will be headquarters and meeting place for the society. Visitors are urged to make their reservations in advance, if possible, to insure that they will be taken care of. The rates for rooms are: One Person—Room with tub bath, $3.00 to $5.00; room with shower bath, $2.50 to $3.00; room without bath, $2.00 to $3.00. Two Persons—Room with tub bath, $5.00 to $7.00; room with shower bath, $4.50 to $5.00; room without bath, $3.00 to $4.00.

Why not take a few days' vacation, attend the exhibition and visit Niagara Falls as well as other points of interest. Good roads lead to Buffalo, and that automobile, if not the train, will get you there. The Buffalo people are expecting a great flower show. The local committee is enthusiastically working to make our stay both enjoyable and profitable. Each member should decide how he can help, and then do it. All that is required for a successful meeting and exhibition, is for the American Gladiolus Society to do its part.

Hall Losses.

In a statement issued by the American Mutual Cyclone and Hail Insurance Co., of Muncie, Ind., the claims received and approved by that company since January, 1918, number 91, the states represented, nine, and the total amount of losses, $20,852.27.

St. Louis Convention Items.

"CITY SURROUNDED BY UNITED STATES."

The Hon. Woodrow Wilson, our beloved president, has requested that all business conventions be held as usual during the duration of the world conflict, and has further suggested that these be held in the middle west, north, west and south.

The great metropolis, "Surrounded by the United States," is in the middle of the middle west. A more centrally located city could not have been chosen by the Society of American Florists to hold their annual meeting. And why go to a summer resort for your vacation? St. Louis has summer resort weather all summer. Here is what the United States weather bureau records show: For August, 1917, a monthly average of 75.3 degrees. But temperature alone is not what counts for discomfort—humidity is what "gets" you. Humidity records from United States figures show St. Louis to have the lowest average for the four summer months among eight of the largest cities in the country, viz.: 68, from which figure the averages graduate up to 82! Come to the convention and enjoy vacation weather.

In these times of high railroad fare and difficult transportation, it will be a pleasure to travel to centrally located St. Louis to attend the convention. Again, the fact that the great middle west is not always well represented at our annual conventions has been due to the extremely long trips that have been necessary to attend most of the conventions in the past years. From all reports this convention is to be an exception, and St. Louis will be honored by large delegations from this great middle section and the southwest.

Why should Mr. Florist attend this S. A. F. convention? This year's meeting is going to be the most important meeting of the society's long career, on account of the great economical, heating and transportation problems arising out of war's chaos. Where could such information be better discussed and assimilated than at such a meeting? Every florist and craftsman owes it to himself and his business to keep informed, so he can keep his ship of business afloat in the stormy seas of war and consequent economic disturbances.

From a purely sentimental reason, every member owes it to the officers and directors of the society to be present to show his appreciation of what has been done by them in the fuel question.

A year ago that great publicity campaign inaugurated by the society was formally launched, and who would miss the wonderful treat of hearing Wm. Penn, of Boston, make his annual report of what his committee has accomplished? What Mr. Penn has done in such a short year is history, but let us listen to him unfold his plans to repeat and outstrip his past performances.

Let us not forget that the Florist Telegraph Delivery has a meeting in conjunction with the S. A. F. meeting, and to the retail florist who does not know this organization, let him come to learn and weep.

All aboard for St. Louis and the S. A. F. Convention, August 20-22.

National Publicity for Flowers.

From San Francisco, Calif., the secretary proceeded to Los Angeles, in which city he was in the hands of Fred. Howard, S. A. F. state vice-president, and Frank Shearer, superintendent of parks, who made his first day's work easy of accomplishment and extended to him many courtesies, for which he is deeply grateful. A banquet was arranged for the evening, when the secretary had the opportunity to explain to many in the craft the great benefit to be derived from the publicity campaign. The results of this informal gathering are to be noticed in the list of subscriptions reported. In addition, several new members were added to the society's membership roll. On the second day, A. F. Borden, of the Redondo Floral Co., president of the local club, took the visitor in hand, devoting the entire day to his work, which included a visit to Pasadena. Mr. Borden, and in fact all with whom the secretary came in contact in Los Angeles, did their utmost to make his stay in the city both enjoyable and profitable.

At Salt Lake City, Utah, the secretary was met at the station by G. K. Uno, who escorted him to the Utah hotel, where he found R. Miller, R. Wilson, W. Sorenson, B. Gray, J. H. Maxwell, Chas. Alt, D. E. Law, M. Jorgensen, and A. Alt, representing the trade of the community. Afterwards a meeting was held at the store of Huddart Floral Co., where the secretary had the opportunity to explain the work of the publicity campaign and of the society. Several subscriptions to the fund were forthcoming, and a number of new members came into the S. A. F. fold. The secretary expresses at this time his great pleasure at the warmth of the reception given him in Salt Lake City, and his gratitude for the special courtesies extended to him by Robert Miller, G. K. Uno and A. J. Alt. It was quite evident that interest in the work of our organization was of the strongest character.

Some little time was spent in Omaha, in which city the secretary had the valued assistance of Mrs. J. J. Hess, wife of the society's treasurer, and, of course, the treasurer himself. His work here, naturally, also extended to Council Bluffs, in the neighboring state of Iowa.

In St. Joseph, Mo., he was met at the station, in company with Treasurer Hess, by Director Frank X. Stuppy, at the early hour of 7 a. m., and an entire hour was given to the official work, several subscriptions and many new memberships resulting. Samuel Murray and Arthur Newell of Kansas City came on to "St. Joe," and carried the secretary with them to their own city, where next day, and with Wm. L. Rock, treasurer of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, a long day was put in among the trade, over $300 in subscriptions and 13 new members being the result of the round-up. The gentlemen forming the escort were most enthusiastic over the "personal visit method" adopted to create interest in the publicity work, and were strongly of the opinion that this procedure would assuredly carry the fund "over the top."

The secretary ultimately reached St. Louis, where he at once took up the work of the convention. At intervals between the present time and the convention, he will visit nearby cities, in an endeavor to carry the fund over the remaining stage.

Who can say now that the publicity campaign fund of $50,000 is not possible of accomplishment? There is less than $8,000 now to collect, and if all you gentlemen who have been "waiting to see," will now do what you have been intending to do when your vision became clear, will act, the fund will be completed on time. You have noted the great interest taken in the campaign by your brother florists throughout the country, and surely are impressed sufficiently to reach for your cheque books and do your bit. Send along your contributions—or, had we not better say, your insurance premiums, for, surely, no better insurance was ever effected by florists.

San Francisco.

JULY BUSINESS IS WEAK.

While it may be said that there is not very much business going on, still it is true that there is no great overabundance of flowers. Trade since the first of the month has fallen off greatly, with very little funeral work to speak of. There cannot be said to be any over-supply of any particular variety of flowers, but the poor demand does not give any stimulus to prices, no matter how good the quality offered. Some extra long, field-grown Ulrich Brunners are coming in and are very fine; in fact, they have replaced American Beauties, which just now are poor in quality. Ophelia is still in ample supply and of very good quality. Richmond is the best we have in red. Good white roses are scarce. Cecile Brunners are in large supply and of fine quality. Carnations are in ample supply, but the quality is poor and large quantities are offered daily on the streets. Sweet peas are beginning to show the effect of the bad weather and are nearly all off color. The cut of orchids is very limited, and at times it is difficult to fill orders for any considerable number. Gardenias are in full crop and are often offered in job lots. Lily of the valley is scarce. Gladoli are plentiful and of the finest quality, but the call for this flower, which never was very popular in this market, is slow. Some grand Lillium auratum are seen; in fact, much the finest in recent years. They command very good prices. Zinnias are beginning to be a factor in the market and will continue so until fall. The dahlias offered are the finest seen in years, but owing to their keeping qualities at present, are not very popular. Scabiosa caucasica is proving to be very popular here, as well as Pyrethrum hybridum. A few Marie Louise violets were seen during the week and sold readily. There is a large supply of asparagus, and Boston ferns and kentias, in variety, are being largely featured by all the stores.

NOTES.

At the E. W. McEllan Co.'s range at Burlingame, the replanting of the rose houses is about finished. Great quantities of Russell and Ophelia will be grown here this coming season. Very few American Beauties are benched here. The branch greenhouses across the bay, purchased last spring, will be devoted almost exclusively to American Beauty roses. They are cutting very heavily just now of gardenias of the very best quality. Immense quantities of Asparagus plumosus is grown here for the shipping trade.

That chrysanthemums are going to be in the market very early this year is shown by the arrival of the first pompons of the season. Considering this early date, the quality is very good. The only color seen yet is yellow. There seems to have been no reduction in the acreage planted to chrysanthemums this season for shipping purposes. It may be safely said to be equally as large as last season. At present writing, they are all in fine condition, and a very large cut may be expected this coming season.

The Art Floral Co., of which P. V. Matraia is manager, has a splendid summer effect in its store this week. Great specimen kentias are arranged here and there, together with other tropical plants, giving the delightful cooling effect so much sought after these warm days. Mr. Matraia expects to leave shortly for a fishing trip.

Plans are rapidly being put in shape for the annual picnic of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society. P. Ferrari, who is chairman of the committee of arrangements, promises that this will be the best ever, and a very large attendance is expected from among the bay counties. It will be held at Paradise Cove.

Martin Poss, proprietor of the Floral City Greenhouses, at San Mateo, is busily engaged replanting his rose houses. He has a fine lot of Lorraine coming along for Christmas trade. Among improvements, is a large lath house which is nearing completion. He reports funeral work is keeping up steadily.

Luther Burbank is receiving the sympathy of the trade in the death of his brother, David Ball Burbank, which occurred July 21. Mr. Burbank was a native of Massachusetts and 80 years of age. He was one of California's pioneers, and at the time of his death, was president of the Bank of Tomales.

W. B. Clarke, manager of the San Jose branch of the Cottage Gardens Nurseries, reports a heavy demand for all kinds of florists' forcing stock, particularly rhododendrons and azaleas. His firm is working up a large stock of both of these, and expects to be able to satisfy all demands.

The monthly meeting of the Menlo Park Horticultural Society was well attended. Very fine exhibits of sweet peas and other flowers were staged. The showing of fruits and vegetables was also very commendable. It is not expected that the society will hold its fall show this year.

Jesse Seal, the well known dahlia grower, is sending in the finest Spencer sweet peas being received in this market. The quality of the flowers is unusual for this season of the year, and they are bringing top-notch prices. Some fine dahlias are also being cut daily.

The commissioner of corporations has issued a permit to the McGee Wholesale Nurseries to issue 1,000 shares of stock to G. W. McGee, H. S. Young and R. M. Sims. The company intends to devote its energies to the growing of fruit and ornamental stock.

One of the sights of Garden Gate Park just now is the giant plants of fuchsias in nearly every variety. The plants, some of which are 14 feet high, and a mass of bloom, and are worthy of a visit from anyone interested in this grand old flower.

The Thomas Floral Co., at the corner of Jones and O'Farrell streets, say they are well satisfied with business since opening up a few months ago. They have a fine location and always keep up attractive displays of the best stock obtainable.

A. Couchi, who is noted for being the best grower of Ulrich Brunners in this vicinity, is now sending in some of the best stock seen in years. It is so good that it has replaced American Beauty almost entirely in most of the leading stores.

The trial grounds of the California Dahlia Society at San Rafael, will soon be the mecca of all dahlia fanciers as all the latest novelties will soon be in bloom. The grounds are under the supervision of T. C. Burns.

John McLaren, superintendent of Golden Gate Park, and his assistant, John Atkinson, have been quite busy during the past two weeks judging war gardens all over the city.

Nels Peterson has benched all his carnation plants for the coming season. They all look to be in fine shape and give every promise of producing his usual high grade stock.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. have had a busy week with funeral work. They are now receiving some extra fine dahlias from Frank Pelicano's dahlia farm on Guttenberg street.

Domoto Bros. are supplying the market with a fine quality of Lilium auratum and rubrum. It is the best stock handled here in recent years.

Edwin Hoff, manager of the MacRorie-McLaren Co.'s Powell street store, is back after several weeks' vacation.

Pete Rosalia, of the Art Floral Co., has gone to the Sierras for his vacation. G. N.

OBITUARY.

William L. Hoerber, vice-president of Hoerber Bros., well-known Chicago wholesale florists, died from heart disease at the Lake Geneva sanitarium, Lake Geneva, Wis., Saturday, August 3, at the age of 47. He was in business at Paducah, Ky., with his brother, Fred C. Hoerber, up to nine years ago, when they sold out and ventured into the florist business, building a large range of glass at Des Plaines, a short distance from Chicago, and opened a wholesale establishment at 162 North Wabash avenue. He had charge of the Chicago wholesale house when they first started, but later looked after the growing end of the business, when his brother, Fred C. Hoerber, changed places with him and took charge of the store. While in Paducah, he contracted malarial fever, which left him in poor health and was responsible indirectly for his death. He was up and about until about six months ago, when he went to the sanitarium for treatment, and was apparently getting along very well, for he intended to leave for California. Naturally his sudden death was a complete surprise to his many friends in the trade, who extend their heartfelt sympathy to the entire Hoerber family in the loss of a loving husband, son and brother. Mr. Hoerber was held in high esteem by all who knew him, and while the funeral was a strictly private affair, there were many expressions of sympathy in the shape of beautiful floral tokens from the trade. He is survived by a wife, Margaret Hoerber, nee Zolk, two brothers, John L. and Fred C. Hoerber, who were associated with him in business, a sister, Mrs. Louis A. Passow, and father, John L. Hoerber, Sr. The funeral was held Tuesday, August 6, at 3 o'clock from his sister's residence, 3222 Washington boulevard, with interment at Waldheim cemetery.

Lieutenant Harry W. Prince.

John Prince, foreman for W. K. Harris, Philadelphia, Pa., has just received a letter from England, with particulars of the accidental death of his son, Lieutenant Harry W. Prince, of the aviation service, which occurred June 16, Enslitting a year ago, Lieutenant Prince spent six months at the aviation school in Texas, where he became very efficient and was promoted and received his commission as lieutenant just before leaving for England. Shortly after his arrival, at the aviation field in Thetford, he went up on a practice flight with an English instructor and captain. When they had attained a height of 1,000 feet, a nervous recruit in a single seated plane collided with them, and all three were dashed to the ground and killed. Lieutenant Prince was a very promising young man, mechanical engineer by profession, who had made great progress in his chosen calling.

Julius Koehler.

Julius Koehler, an old-time member of the craft in Philadelphia, Pa., passed away July 28. He was 87 years old. Mr. Koehler was a native of Saxony, Germany. He came to this country when 20 years of age. For several years he was gardener of the Robert Stewart estate at Torresdale, Pa. In 1873 he started into business for himself on Bridge street, Frankford, growing plants and cut flowers for the city florists. He was a good plantsman and successful grower, and built up quite a trade for his Easter and Christmas specialties. The older trade remembers with pleasure when he made the rounds of the stores in his wagon, nothing being too much trouble to please his customers. Mr. Koehler retired about 10 years ago, the business being continued by his two sons. William succeeded to the greenhouses on Bridge street while Eugene continues the store and cut flower department. He also leaves a daughter, Mrs. Gilmore. There are in all 11 grandchildren. K.

Frank Pileski.

Frank Pileski, a grower of Whitestone, N. Y., was overcome by the excessive heat while working in his greenhouses, August 5, and immediately expired. He was formerly a member of the firm of Pileski & Schott, of Flushing, N. Y. About two years ago, the partnership was dissolved, Pileski buying land and building greenhouses at Whitestone. He was about 40 years old and is survived by his wife and five children. A. F. F.

A. V. D. Snyder.

A. V. D. Snyder, a well-known florist and seedsman of Ridgewood, N. J., where he had been in business for 30 years, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. R. A. Post, Ridgewood, August 1, aged 63 years. He was a native of New Jersey. His wife died only a few months ago. His surviving children are Mrs. Post and one son. A. F. F.

HOUSTON, TEX.—One large house at the new range of the R. C. Kerr Co. will be devoted exclusively to Rose Columbia.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—A very much enjoyed outing and banquet was held recently by the local florists at the country house of the Buffalo Automobile Club.

WELLESLEY, MASS.—Thomas Capers, the well known grower, will close his carnation houses during the coming winter.

AUBURNDALE, MASS.—The range of F. W. Fletcher has been sold, the proprietor having entered government horticultural work.

BROOKLINE, MASS.—Mrs. Emma L. Palmer, wife of F. E. Palmer, prominent florist of this city, died at her home here, July 30, following an illness of several months.

St. Louis Cool.

According to the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, from figures based on the reports of the United States weather bureau, convention visitors may expect genuine summer resort weather. Here are the official average figures for the summer months of 1917: June, 75.3 degrees; July, 78.9; August, 75.3. In addition, attention is called to the fact that the four months average for humidity in 1916, shows St. Louis with an average of 68, to have the lowest record among eight of the largest cities of the United States, the others in order being Seattle, Wash., Chicago, Cleveland, O., Boston, Mass., Buffalo, N. Y., New York and San Francisco, the four months' average for the last named in that year being 82.

Society of American Florists.

ST. LOUIS CONVENTION HEADQUARTERS.

The Jefferson hotel will be the headquarters of the Society of American Florists at the annual convention, August 20-22. As all St. Louis hotels are usually well filled during the time the convention is held, it is advisable for all intending to be in attendance to reserve rooms now. The secretary will be glad to make such reservations if requested.

SECRETARY YOUNG AT ST. LOUIS.

The secretary is now located at the Jefferson Hotel, St. Louis, Mo., where communications in regard to the convention should be sent. A card of membership has been issued to all members in good standing. This card admits the person to whom it is issued to the convention hall at all times during the convention, and to the trade exhibition. The non-receipt of a card by any member is an indication that his 1918 dues have not been paid, as only those in good standing will be permitted to attend the meetings. It is, therefore, incumbent upon all who intend to be present at the convention, but have not paid their annual dues, to make prompt remittance.

As is customary, the secretary's presence in the convention city, ahead of the convention, is required for the purpose of giving attention to all the details entailed by the society's management, and particularly in regard to the trade exhibition. Intending exhibitors will please take notice that he is at their service, and will be pleased to render any possible assistance in the staging and care of exhibits.

The outlook for a successful convention is very promising. The importance of the subject matter of the programme is expected to draw a large attendance. The United States fuel administration has notified our Washington representative that Wallace Crossley, State Capitol, Jefferson City, Mo., federal fuel administrator for the state of Missouri, will be the speaker on the subject, "The Coal Conservation Order as It Applies to Florists," scheduled for discussion at the afternoon session, Thursday, August 22. Mr. Crossley is thoroughly familiar with his subject, and the application of the order to all sections of the country.

Among the additions to the list of exhibitors are the following: John A. Evans Co., Richmond, Ind.; The Ove Gnatt Co., Inc., La Porte, Ind.

The local committees are actively engaged in perfecting plans for the entertainment of visitors, which means that all who are in attendance are assured of a most enjoyable visit.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Public notice is hereby given that Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., submit for registration the new seedlings of Pyrethrum roseum here mentioned: Rutherford—Double red with light center. President Wilson—Double, deep rose-pink. Sylvia—Soft rose, double. Pink Beauty—Light rose pink, single. Rosy Morn—Double rose with lighter center. Cactus—Deep rose petals quilled and pointed the same as cactus dahlias. Dainty—Semi-double deep rose, center white. Favorite—Semi-double, deep rose, center white. CREDIT AND COLLECTION COMMITTEE.

The credit and collection committee will meet at the Hotel La Salle, Chicago, at 9:00 A. M. August 17. All interested in this subject or having suggestions to make are invited to join the committee in its deliberations.

R. C. KERR, Chairman.

New York to St. Louis.

The transportation committee of the New York Florists' Club has made the following arrangements for the trip of its members and friends to the annual convention of the Society of American Florists at St. Louis, Mo., August 20-22:

The party will proceed over the Pennsylvania Railroad, Sunday, August 18. Arrangements have been made for accommodations on the Keystone express No. 21, leaving the Pennsylvania Terminal Station, 43rd street and Seventh avenue, at 2:04 p. m., due in St. Louis 5:25 p. m. the following day (Monday).

Under existing traffic conditions it has been impossible to secure any rebate in the regular rates, which for the train selected are as follows: Fare, one way, $31.68; war tax, $2.53; additional fare for Pullman berth, $5.28; war tax, 42 cents; lower berth, $6; war tax, 60 cents; upper berth, $4.80; war tax, 48 cents, or, inclusive, the fare one way will be: Upper Pullman berth, $45.19; lower berth, $46.51.

In view of the limited passenger service available, all who wish to join the club party should make early reservations to A. L. Miller, chairman transportation committee, Sutphin road and Rockaway boulevard, Jamaica, N. Y., stating the persons for whom transportation is desired and the number of upper and lower berths.

Chicago to St. Louis.

The Chicago & Eastern Illinois railroad has been chosen for the trip of the Chicago Florists' Club members and friends to the annual convention of the Society of American Florists at St. Louis, Mo., August 20-22, leaving Dearborn Station, Monday, August 19, at 11:30 P. M., due St. Louis the following morning at 7:37 o'clock. The rates of fare one way, including tax, are: In coach, $9.41; in sleeping car or parlor car, $10.97. There is no party rate and no reduction for round trip. Pullman fares, tax included, are as follows: Lower berth, $2.20; upper berth, $1.76; drawing room, $7.70; parlor car seat, $1.10.

Regarding sleeping car accommodations, and all further particulars, address Sam M. Childs, General Agent Passenger Department, 108 West Adams street, Chicago. Telephone Harrison 5100.

Parties from other points passing through the city are invited to join the Chicago delegation on this train.

BUSINESS IS AT STANDSTILL.

The market has been very dull the past week, with not even a good sized funeral to use up the surplus stock. Business as a whole is at a standstill, and only the occasional birthday bouquet and hospital box varies the monotony. Quite a number of the retail florists are putting in their time in renovating their stores. In flowers on the market, gladioli are in the largest supply, and the quality, taking into consideration the long dry spell, is very good. Tuberoses have become a drug on the market, with little or no call. Roses of inferior grades are also a glut. Some few good Russell and Columbia are seen, but other varieties have been coming in very poor. Asters are only fair, and have a light demand. Some outdoor stock, such as gypsophila, delphiniums, marigolds, etc., are seen, but has no great call. In greens, everything but smilax is in good supply.

NOTES.

A fact that has caused some comment among retail florists in this jurisdiction is that a few supply houses from the east, who do quite a big business with local retailers, do not intend to visit the convention with an exhibit. If it is for any reasons of lack of help, the local committees will be glad to do anything they can to assist them stage their exhibits.

Secretary John Young arrived in this city August 2 and has established headquarters at the Jefferson Hotel for the coming convention. He will also maintain offices at the Moolah Temple, for the special benefit of contemplated trade exhibitors.

W. J. Pilcher, vice-president for eastern Missouri of the S. A. F., advises that the membership from the florists' club is now well over the 100 mark, insuring this club representation on the board of directors for the coming year.

Art Beyer, with F. C. Weber, who is in Michigan on his vacation, writes that he will be back to participate in the convention. In addition, he says: "Boys, be ready to hear some good fish stories." J. J. W.

SUPPLY AFFECTED BY HOT WEATHER.

The hot weather is having a telling effect on stock, as the quality of much of it is very poor, and the production has materially increased with the advent of higher temperatures. Many of the roses pop open on such short notice that they are only fit for the dump. Russell, Shawyer and Columbia are about the best varieties. Carnations are completely out of the running. Some very excellent asters supply the vacancy caused by them, however, and bring in good returns. Gladioli are extra fine, and the best varieties carry good prices. Dahlias have made their first appearance of the season, and Golden Glow was also noted in the flower shops for the first time last week, where it is used for decorative purposes. The first days of August ushered in a large quantity of funeral orders, and this trade has been supplemented with a few good-sized decorations, and a good demand for flowers and plants for the sick.

NOTES.

J. C. Nielson, representative of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, a visitor here last week, securing advance orders for the fall and holiday business, reports that the factories manufacturing waterproof crepe paper have been taken over by the government, for the manufacture of casing for artificial limbs for the army. This commodity, therefore, will be very scarce this season, as the wholesalers have only what is already manufactured to sell. Immortelles and other imported goods are said to be decidedly on the short side.

A large decoration for a prominent reception was executed by the Flick Floral Co. last week, with Miss Marguerite Flick in charge. Large hampers and baskets of Columbia and Russell roses, asters, purple buddleias, and Golden Glow were used. Funeral orders have been numerous at this establishment.

George R. Doswell, who left this city the latter part of June for Camp Benjamin Harrison, has been transferred to the Chamber of Commerce, at Indianapolis, where he will take a comprehensive course in motor mechanics.

Twenty-five corsages were made up and donated to the Red Cross gift shop by the Lanternier florists, August 3. Gladioli and auratum and Japanese lilies are making a fine showing at this store.

Several large donations of cut flowers are made each week to the Red Cross gift shop by W. J. & M. S. Vesey. This firm reports a big cut of asters, roses, Easter and rubrum lilies, and tomatoes.

The Freese Floral Co. donated a quantity of cut flowers for the Red Cross gift shop. Baskets of summer flowers present an attractive window arrangement at this establishment.

Asters and roses predominate at the store of the Doswell Floral Co. This firm made another large donation of cut flowers to the local Red Cross society, August 3.

Summer flowers in large variety are being displayed in the downtown shop of Ed Wenninghoff, asters and gladioli predominating.

GLADIOLI AND ASTERS PLENTIFUL.

Gladioli and asters are plentiful, but are selling well at good prices, considering the large quantity offered in this market. American Beauty roses of good quality are included in the offerings and are having a ready call. Mrs. Chas. Russell are in brisk demand, and the same holds true for Columbia, which is making new friends every day. The weather has been extremely warm the early part of this week, consequently roses are not arriving in as good a condition as the dealers would like to have them, but at that the quality is passable and there is no great surplus to speak of. Champ Welland, Mrs. George Shawyer, My Maryland, Ophelia, Sunburst, Hoosier Beauty, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Double White Killarney, Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, White Killarney, Hearst, Montrose, Mrs. Bayard Thayer and Mrs. Moorfield Storey are included in the rose shipments, as are a fair supply of the miniature varieties. A few carnations are received. Orchids, gardenias and lily of the valley are in short supply. Gypsophila of splendid quality is seen in quantity at several of the wholesale houses which report a brisk demand for same. Water lilies are selling exceedingly well, owing to the hot weather, and are featured in all the leading stores. Calendulas, Golden Glow chrysanthemums, daisies, snapdragons, candytuft and other miscellaneous indoor and outdoor flowers are seen in the market, including a limited supply of lilies. Business so far this month has been good, and if the total sales for August are anywhere near as good as those of July, the majority of the wholesalers will have no reason to complain. The St.

Louis convention is the main topic of conversation in the wholesale district, and indications are that there will be a good representation from this city and vicinity. The official temperature reached 102 degrees, August 5. The city's record, established in 1901, was 102.8 degrees.

NOTES.

The A. L. Randall Co. entertained 35 of its traveling men August 2-4, when they held a meeting here and it is needless to say that there was something doing all the time. Business matters were discussed at the meetings and the entire force was optimistic in regard to the fall outlook. Manager

Frank Johnson reports that the resident representative plan is working out fine, in fact much better than expected.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting a good supply of Mrs. Chas. Russell roses which are in good demand considering the general market conditions.

Miss Sylvia Sternheim, head bookkeeper at Kennicott Bros. Co.'s store, is away on her vacation part of which is spent at Milwaukee, Wis.

The Misses Nettie Parker, of A. T. Pyier & Co., and O. A. Tonner, of O. A. & L. A. Tonner, are enjoying a well-earned vacation.

Postponed examination No. 345, for the position of gardener, Class G, Rank II, Division Z, will be held at the offices of the West Park board in Union Park, August 9 at 9:00 A. M. Applications must be filed in the office of the board before 5:00 P. M., August 8. The examination is open to men between the ages of 21 and 55 years, regardless of residence. The duties of gardener include the planting, pruning and general care of trees, shrubs and perennials, lawns and outside gardens, and the occasional supervision of laborers in related work.

Peter Papes, of the Central Floral Co., Detroit, Mich., is spending his vacation with friends and relatives in this city. He paid a visit to his partner at his local store, doing business under the same name at 132 North State street, immediately upon his arrival here, but found Peter Duris and his assistants so busy with funeral work that he decided to move on before he was called upon to help out during the rush.

A. L. Vaughan is doing double duty at A. L. Vaughan & Co.'s store this week, while Miss Charlotte Paradise, cashier and bookkeeper, is away on her vacation. John Carlson is back on the job after enjoying a well-earned rest and Bill Johnson, who has charge of the shipping department, will leave next week for the Black Hills to visit his uncle's ranch.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is handling a large quantity of gladioli in all the leading varieties in addition to a complete line of all other seasonable stock. Manager Klingsporn reports their top July sales were away ahead of those of the same month of 1917.

Fred, Lautenschlager, E. C. Pruner, Phil McKee, A. F. Longren, Matt Mann, Allie Zech, R. E. Kurowski, Paul Klingsporn, R. J. Windler, T. E. Waters, William Marshall and several others have manifested their intention of attending the St. Louis convention.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. will have an exhibit at the St. Louis convention that will be worth while visiting, for T. E. Waters of the supply department has a new wrinkle up his sleeve this year. August Poehlmann is back from a business trip to Rockford.

Miss Marguerite McNulty, who has charge of Peter Reinberg's office, has two brothers, Archie and Don, with the American troops in France. Archie went over the top on July 4 and came Wietor Bros. will have no trouble in disposing of all their field-grown carnation plants at the rate they are selling now, for an early clean-up is in sight.

D. S. Musser, of Miller & Musser, was called to Henderson, Ind., August 3, by the serious illness of a sister who was operated upon that day.

Percy Jones, Inc., has a large supply of 4-inch and 6-inch chiffon on hand and is quoting very attractive prices to all customers this week.

F. W. Martin will leave in the near future for New York to visit his son, who is likely to sail for overseas in the near future.

J. A. Budlong continues to feature Golden Glow chrysanthemums in quantity as well as a fine supply of gladioli and asters.

Chas. Mason, in service, from Vaughan's Seed Store, is now thought to be with the American troops in France.

Albert Koehler is back on the job at the American Bulb Co.'s store after enjoying a most pleasant vacation.

J. Turskie has rented Frank Felke's range at Wilmette, taking possession August 1.

Otto Strobuck, of the George Wittbold Co., is spending his vacation at Antioch.

Miss Schneider, of the Wabash Flower Market, is enjoying a month's vacation.

A. F. Longren and family are the guests of Harvey Kidder of Ionia, Mich.

William Amling celebrated his fifty-second birthday at Maywood, August 3.

North Shore Horticultural Society.

The North Shore Horticultural Society held its annual midsummer show, July 24, in the Young Men's Club Hall, Lake Forest, Ill. There was an unusually fine display of cut flowers and vegetables, the entries in the plant section being poor. The exhibits of vegetables by K. Cofing, gardener to D. W. Cummings, were very fine, the three principal awards going to him in the vegetable classes. Exhibits of fruit (greenhouse grown) were made by J. O. Armour, Thos. Head, superintendent, and L. F. Swift, O. Petterson, gardener. Some extra fine gladioli were exhibited by Mrs. Bevan, T. Kiley, gardener, and A. E. Kunderd, of Goshen, Ind., the latter being awarded a certificate of merit for his fine display. The judges were August Koch, of Garfield park, Chicago; James Livingstone, of Milwaukee, Wis., and J. Krupa, of Lincoln park, Chicago.

The principal prize-winners were L. F. Swift, who was awarded the sweepstakes cup; D. M. Cummings, Cyrus H. McCormick, W. E. Fisher, superintendent; H. F. McCormick, J. Jackson, gardener, and Mrs. E. S. Moore, D. M. Naughton, superintendent. The vegetables, flowers and fruit were sold at auction at the close of the show, for the benefit of the Red Cross, Mr. Paulson making a very efficient auctioneer.

USUAL JULY DULNESS NOTED.

The month of July, just past, showed little change from the usual dull summer month, except the comforting fact that the total volume of business was encouragingly better than for July, 1917. As usual, funeral orders provide the bulk of the work. Owing to the unusually severe growing conditions during June, the supply of locally grown stock is quite inadequate; hence, the bulk of stock used must be secured from wholesale markets in more favorable localities. About the usual quantity of chrysanthemums seems to be in prospect, with stocks generally in fair condition. Carnations in the field have done fairly well, and probably a larger number than formerly will go into the houses this season. Prospects for fall and winter show no new turn at this time from the conditions of last season, which showed good business. Getting the stock and keeping down expenses seem to present the chief problem.

NOTES.

E. H. Kline and wife of the store force of W. H. Culp & Co. are spending a four weeks' vacation visiting relatives and friends at Dayton, O., and will probably take in the convention at St. Louis on their return trip.

Frank Cluff has slacked up a little on chrysanthemums, but will grow a little heavier in carnations. Mr. and Mrs. Cluff motored to Colorado Springs for their vacation trip and report a fine time.

Miss Lotta Tomer, chief clerk in charge of the order department for W. H. Culp & Co., left this week on a two months' vacation trip to Portland, Ore.

Chas. P. Mueller has planted carnations in most of his houses formerly devoted to roses and will grow no roses for winter flowers this season. C.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—The F. Walker Co., of this city, is offering its range at New Albany, Ind., for sale.

LANCASTER, PA.—The store of the E. F. Barr Co. is presenting a very up-to-date appearance with numerous improvements that are being made.

EAST MILTON, MASS.—The annual outing of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston was held at Cunningham Park, July 24, with a large attendance and an enjoyable programme.

Newark, N. J.

In passing through Newark and the Oranges, one is struck with the great number of service flags displayed by churches, business houses and private residences; also with the large number of stars on many of them. New Jersey is well represented at the front.

The Newark florists find the trade situation about the same as reported from other cities—summer dullness—but there is the usual amount of funeral work. August Begerow says it is about the same as other summers have been.

The Essex County Florists' Club held its annual outing at Berkley Heights, N. J., August 1, and it is said to have been an enjoyable event.

Chris. Penek, of the Rosery Floral Co., says they are doing as much business as they can expect to do at this season.

Phillips Brothers had quite a lot of funeral work, August 3.

SUMMER CONDITIONS FELT.

Business for the past week has been extremely quiet and summer trade is in full blast. Flowers are beginning to shorten up. Carnations are on the wane and sweet peas have been ruined by the hard rain storms of the past two weeks. Gladioli are selling well and prices hold up. Easter and speciosum lilies are in great demand. Salpiglossis and centaureas find ready buyers.

NOTES.

Henry R. Conley reports summer business about the same as other years. It has been two months since he has heard from his son, Lester, who has been in France since last fall.

Charles and Henry Robinson have left for a two weeks' vacation at the South Shore. Business interests at their store will be looked after by Joseph Margolis.

Houghton & Gorney's store looks very attractive with a profusion of summer flowers well arranged in baskets and vases. Business has been very good this season.

The annual gladiolus exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, for which a liberal list of prizes has been announced, will be held August 10-11.

Welch Bros. Co. reports good summer business with a large assortment of roses, sweet peas, gladioli and speciosum lilies.

Victor Hartford, salesman at Henry M. Robinson & Co.'s, has returned from a two weeks' vacation in the White Mountains.

THE BOOK OF GLADIOLUS

THE first authoritative book on this bulb ever printed in America, or possibly the world, issued April 1, 1911. This 120-page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating, storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

DEMAND HITS LOW MARK.

The past week has found business at about the lowest level of the summer season. There was an agreeable change in the temperature and a much needed rain, which was estimated by a prominent weather man as worth over a million dollars to the outdoor crops of this neighborhood. It certainly was invaluable to all florists' outdoor crops. Roses have shortened up a bit, although they are still in excess of the demand. The first of the new crop American Beauties are in and sell up clean at $3 per dozen for stock with 30-inch stems. Gladioli now rule the market, taking up half the room of the ice boxes. The best varieties find a reasonable demand at fair prices, but the majority of the stock is almost given or thrown away. Asters are not much for quality; in the very dry spell of the past three weeks, the early sorts had little chance to develop, and except when needed for work, there was little demand for the small, imperfect and short stemmed stock. There are still a few carnations, but so few as to be hardly worth considering; most of the growers are now cleaning out their houses and replanting. Easter lilies are good stock; a trifle scarce the past week and the more or less funeral work on, regulates their demand. Fewer and candytuft move off in quite large quantities; it is good summer stock, always salable when there is any demand. Cattleyas are a bit shy and bring full market prices. Local asparagus is more plentiful and draggy.

GLADIOLI.

As a flower to stimulate the summer business the gladiolus is not pushed, kept to the front, or given half the attention its good qualities deserve. It is the most showy of all the summer flowers, is free from disease and ravages of insects, almost certain to be in full supply in its season, and yet no special effort is made to interest the public or put it before them in decorative effects. Wagon loads of boxes of these flowers have been brought daily to the market for the past three weeks, coming in such quantities as to tax every facility of the dealers to handle them. Only about one-third of the stock was really fit, that is, of good color and variety and of salable quality. Owing to the dry weather, much of it was burnt, the edges of the buds and tips of the foliage being brown. It is not worth while to send such stock to the market, it being simply a waste of energy and money, as it will not bring express charges. Stock is evidently cut and packed in the heat of the day, while warm, as much of it arrives heated, either due to this, or too many packed in a box. The remedy is better and more efficient methods in selection of varieties, cutting, packing, and in the creation of a larger market by up-to-date methods of publicity.

NOTES.

This city will be well represented at the coming convention and trade exhibition in St. Louis. Henry A. Dreer, Inc., will have their usual fine display of greenhouse stock—palms, ferns, etc.

WITH THE WHOLESALESAERS.

Edward Reid has somewhat recovered from his last week's wild woods experience in the Poconos, with bears, wildcats, and four-inch catfish. Four inch "catties" are all right for school boys, but when one reaches man's estate, they are not much reward for an all-night's work. He is busy now with his Sunburst, Victoria, and Maryland roses, and claims to be "King Bee" on asters.

Gladioli in immense quantities, asters, roses, and choice larkspurs are the features of the Leo Niessen Co.'s stock. Business is fair for the season, but too much stock, particularly gladioli. The new yellow, Schwaben, is a fine flower.

Carl Cortis, of the Jos. Heacock Co., is setting up the big ice box, and enclosing the yard in a very workmanlike manner. Carl is certainly an all-round son of the craft.

"A little slow, but fair for summer," was the good word with John Berger. Easter lilies, gladioli and Maryland roses were quantity stocks. K.

Joseph A. Manda has recently bought a strip of land adjoining his original property, on which there is a good dwelling house, and he is now a land-lord. He expects to build more green-houses when trade conditions become settled. In the meantime, he has a fine stock of orchids, and is preparing to properly house them and shut down several houses. He has been advised that his son, who was for a time in a French hospital, has recovered from his wounds and returned to duty in the marine corps. He will attend the St. Louis convention, leaving Mrs. Manda, who is also a clever and experienced florist, to conduct the business in his absence. A. F. F.

ASTERS AND GLADIOLI DOMINATE MARKET.

The drought was broken on the afternoon of July 30 by a deluge of rain, but market conditions were not improved. If there was any difference, they grew worse toward the last of the week, as the rain increased the supply of gladioli and asters. It has seldom happened that such a great stock of asters reached the market in any one week. The rain improved the quality, but the fatal drawback was light buying. The dealers would have been glad to have cleaned up on asters at 50 cents per 100, but it could not be done. In gladioli, the situation was worse than the previous week. On August 3, fairly good asters could be bought for 15 and 20 cents per 100. One Brooklyn retailer bought 5,000, August 2, for $20. It will readily be seen that with so much stock going cheap, it was hard to get a fair price for roses or anything else that was plentiful.

August 5.—The glut of gladioli and asters continues. Our quotations do not show the worst features, for thousands are being lost. In the rose ranges considerable stock is being dried off and rested, which has cut down the supply, but there are yet plenty. There is no change in orchids, though inferior flowers go lower than our quotations.

EASTERN COAL SUPPLY THREATENED.

The coal situation does not seem to be particularly promising for this section of the country. It is stated that at a conference held in Washington, July 30, which was attended by representatives of the shipping board, the industries board and the railroad administration, curtailment of the fuel supplies of non-war industries in the eastern states was considered. Such a step, if taken, will be caused by the greatly increased demand of war industries in this section. It is stated that coal production in Pennsylvania, Maryland and West Virginia, which supply New England and other eastern states, has fallen off at an alarming rate during the past few months. A short time ago it was stated that there was coal at the mines, and that the trouble was in transportation, but now Chairman Hurley of the shipping board, states that for several weeks, ships have been lying idle at Norfolk awaiting coal from the mines. A large percentage of the coal for bunkering the ships of the shipping board and the navy and for supplying the by-product coke ovens which must be maintained to keep the steel industry going must come from the coal fields of Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Maryland, which produce the particular grade of coal required for these purposes. It would seem to be high time to stop drafting coal miners into the army. A roustabout cannot be made over into a coal miner in a day or a week.

LABOR SHORTAGE.

In the various discussions on the labor shortage, we have noticed nothing that is more to the point than the following from the Saturday Evening Post: "War industries are short three to four hundred thousand common laborers. A big munitions plant, making large-caliber guns, is short 2,000 machinists. War plants of Connecticut and Maryland alone are short 35,000 skilled hands. This is the gist of a recent announcement by the department of labor. Yet the labor is here. It needs only mobilizing and the training. For one item there is the tradeless man. Every community contains more or less numerous examples of him—the man who works casually or at odd jobs, or who can turn his hand indifferently to various sorts of manual occupations. He is not a loafer, though he may be 'at liberty' as theatrical people say, a good many days in the year. Generally he is past the age at which men serve an apprenticeship to a trade, but by no means past learning one. As an industrial soldier he is more or less the free lance, the bushwhacker, who takes a shot on his own hook. This ought to be his opportunity and duty, to step into the ordered and disciplined ranks—to learn a regular skilled trade and enroll in it. No one can look carefully about any typical American community, big or little, without realizing that a great quantity of labor power is unorganized, ill applied, half or wholly going to waste. If war pressure can be intelligently applied to that labor power a great permanent gain will be made." A number of propositions have been advanced toward increasing the supply of labor, the most objectionable being the proposal to import a large number of Chinese coolies. The writer does not hold the prejudice against the Chinese so loudly proclaimed, over 40 years ago, by the almost forgotten Dennis Kearney, but does not believe that there is any occasion for bringing them to this country. The advocates of Chinese labor should not be misunderstood; cheap labor is really what they want. There are good reasons for the belief that labor will never again be as cheap in this country as it has been in the past. In a country as productive and resourceful as this, there is no room for a business that cannot or will not pay living wages to its help. There is quite a difference between living with some of the comforts of life, and merely existing. A. F. F.

NOTES.

So far as we can learn, but a small number will attend the St. Louis convention from this city and vicinity. President Totty is seriously considering making the trip with his family, which is not large, by automobile, by way of Indianapolis, Wheeling and Dayton. Julius Roehrs and wife, of Rutherford, N. J., will attend. Mrs. Roehrs being president of the ladies' society. John G. Esler, of Saddle River, N. J., the expert on hail storms, will be there. Frank Traendly, who has been farming all summer, is likely to go and take Mrs. Traendly. Farm produce is high, and he must have made a lot of money.

William P. Sears, the well-known retailer of Sixth avenue and 42nd street, has two sons in the United States army. Walter J., who was formerly with him in the store, is now a corporal in the machine gun unit at Camp Hancock, Augusta, Ga. Edward A. is by profession a civil engineer, and is now in the engineer officers' training camp, Washington Barracks, Washington, D. C. He was previously an inspector of munitions for the Italian government, but thought he could do more for his country by enrolling in its service.

returned from a vacation of three weeks, part of which she spent at Atlantic City. Alexander Kupperman, of this store, has gone with his family for a month's stay on the Great Lakes. Joe Harris, a former employee, is now at the Plattsburg, N. Y., training camp.

Albert Bowe, who had been employed in the wholesale district in 28th street since a boy, his last position being with Riedel & Meyer, Inc., and who was among the first to enlist in the 165th Regiment, the old 69th N. Y., when we entered the war, is reported killed in action.

Among the new incorporations reported from Albany, July 31, is the Colonial Florist, of this city, capital $10,000. The incorporators are C. Sakeles, S. Sakeles and G. S. Wittyson. The headquarters are at Broadway and 157th street.

Mrs. W. H. Long, of 412 Columbus avenue, is spending the summer with her parents in Cape Breton, Nova Scotia.

Columbus

WEATHER BRINGS PLENTIFUL SUPPLY.

In contrast with two weeks ago, when it was with difficulty that enough flowers could be secured to fill orders, all kinds of seasonable stock is now abundant. Thanks to the setting in of the right kind of weather, the gladiolus crop, which threatened to be a failure, is turning out most satisfactorily, both in quantity and quality. Displays are now very attractive, the chief varieties being America, Panama, and Niagara. Prices run as high as $3. Asters are also prolific and of high state of perfection. Carnations are now out of the market. There are practically no pot plants of any kind. An unusual demand for Boston ferns has created a scarcity. Leading florists claim that they have never had a better July trade. The increased number of summer weddings incident to war times, with the prospects of all soldiers soon going to the front, is given as one of the reasons. Flowers are being used more extensively this season in fashionable shop decorations.

NOTES.

One of the attractive florist shops of Columbus, O., is that of Frank C. Viereck. It develops in a statement given out by his wife, August 3, that he is a brother to George Sylvester Viereck, editor of The Fatherland, New York, who is now being shown up by the government for sedition and grafting. She says her husband is an innocent sufferer from this publicity, in that it has hurt his floral business, and that he has taken a position as traveling salesman for a nursery to help support his family. Mrs. Viereck is looking after the shop. She asserts that he is a loyal American, and never held membership in any German society. "My husband is friendly and charitable to everybody and makes friends," she states. "His father and George ignored Frank because he was inclined to the culture of flowers and would not get down to books. The father is insulting and headstrong. When he was here five years ago he was greatly displeased because our two sons, his grandchildren, didn't understand the German language. He is a German politician, lecturer and literary man, and stands high in cultured circles in Berlin. George was 12 years of age when I first saw him. He had just come to America to live here, but was able to speak English fluently and correctly. His mother, it was said, had been a San Francisco woman. He did not want to return to Germany and become subject to military service." The family lived in America until a few years ago, Mrs. Viereck said, when they went back to Berlin. The father had kept in touch with Berlin life by making a trip there every year. He always preferred to live in Germany, but his wife liked America best. Some code letters from George, which were intercepted in England, were supposed to be family letters. The father and George visited Columbus five years ago, and were given considerable attention by prominent local German families. The florist's wife says that her husband has been in America 23 years and took out his naturalization papers in Baltimore. Her home was in Maryland, and she and Frank were married 18 years ago. They had lived in Columbus eight years. He was first in the employ of the Livingston Seed Company, but soon started in business for himself. She had never heard anything from her husband about the claim now said to have been made by the New York editor that he was connected with the royal family of Germany through morganatic marriage of Wilhelm I. with a court actress. It will be recalled that George Sylvester Viereck is now under charge of having received $100,000 from the German government for spy activities since the war started, and with having secured a like sum from private subscriptions among German-Americans for a supposed employment bureau.

Joseph Katona, florist at Olentangy park, the principal out-door amusement resort of this city, has bought of the owners of the park a parcel of ground adjoining the premises, for the sum of $15,000. No announcement has been made of Mr. Katona's plans for improving the property.

The T. J. Ludwig store has broken its past record by having three very large weddings within 10 days. All were of a military character, one being out of town, one was the largest in the history of the store.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Rendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-seventh annual meeting will be held June, 1919.

THE Bermuda lily bulb supply is very indefinite so far.

RUTABAGA SEED (Long Island) is $2.00 per pound and very scarce.

VISITED CHICAGO: Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn., returning from the west.

DUTCH growers report the tulip harvest will be light, while hyacinths promise a good yield.

NEWARK, N. J.—Alexander Forbes, of Alexander Forbes & Co., is making a month's trip to California.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—A nephew of the late William Henry Maule, in the aviation service, was killed July 4.

ONION SET harvesting in the Chicago district is progressing very favorably under dry, hot weather. Prices firm.

RECENT visitors to New York included Chas. F. Gueff, of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y.; S. F. Leonard, of the S. F. Leonard Seed Co., Chicago.

MRS. L. D. WALLER, of Guadaloupe, Calif., has presented her husband with a nine-pound boy, and it is the present intention to make a sweet pea specialist of him.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade August 7 were as follows: Timothy, $8.00 to $9.00 per 100 pounds, advancing 75 cents to $1.00.

THE French bulb crop is said to be late in the digging. Some New York houses report cable advices of these bulbs having moved. Latest news indicates no material change in prices, but ocean freights are 20 per cent above last year's.

ACCORDING to Commerce Reports, tomato growers at Mazatlan, Mexico, are interested in the purchase of suitable tomato seed for the planting season which begins November 1. The American consul at that place will supply a list of growers in the district upon request.

TOLEDO, O.—Cash clover was steady, August 6, at $18.50, closing at the same figure as on the previous day, and showing an advance of $1.50 during the week. Cash timothy gained 5 cents, selling at $4.40. September closed at $4.90, October $4.72½, December 4.77½, March $4.90 and April $4.80.

Japanese Lily Bulbs.

Another hearing regarding Japanese lily bulb importations was held at Washington, D. C., July 31. The Japanese legation said that imports of greater importance demanded the full capacity of available tonnage on the Pacific, therefore exporters have little hope of a favorable result from the conference.

Burlap.

The burlap market is steady at present and the demand is even lighter than is customary for this time of year. Calcutta is high in the market, and the prevailing price is 19 cents for light weight and 24½ cents for heavy weight.

Peas and Beans in the Northwest.

General crop conditions in the vicinity of Livingston, Mont., are fairly good, although peas are not up to last year's standard. The Paradise valley will probably come through with half of the normal yield, while the Galatin, just west of that section, will probably produce 75 to 80 per cent of the average. The situation in the Bitter Root valley is poor, and the same is true of Washington, many crops being halled out and much damage caused by the dry, hot weather in June. The situation in northern Idaho is fairly promising, but the yield of peas in the southern part of the state, especially in Twin Falls district, will be light. Bean crops in this section are quite good, but not out of danger. Aphis is reported in many crops of both peas and beans.

B.

New York Seed Trade.

Lieut. Peter Henderson, grandson and namesake of the founder of Peter Henderson & Co., is now in the aviation service in Texas and is reported recently married to Miss Aline Manierre of Chicago. The lieutenant is 30 years of age and son of the late Alfred Henderson. He is a graduate of Yale, vice-president of the firm, having been identified with the advertising department since 1912. Charles Henderson and his son, Howard, are in California. Patrick O'Mara of this firm has returned from an extended vacation, spent in the Berkshires, and is looking well.

Since Wm. Elliott & Sons went out of business at 42 Vesey street, H. P. Stanley, who was with them for 10 years, has had the store and has been doing business in plants. He expects to continue in the seed and plant business.

James McHutchison is reported to be recovering his health at Kennebunkport, Maine.

The Misses Peek, of Vaughan's Seed Store, have the sympathy of a wide circle of friends in the loss of their mother, who died August 5.

Philadelphia Seed Trade.

Carl Gloeckner, in charge of the bulb department of the Henry F. Michell Co., talks interestingly of the situation as it is today. There is every reason to believe that Dutch bulbs will arrive on usual schedule time, in his opinion, and, although growers are subject there as here to the labor handicap, the stock is reported to be in good condition and sufficient to fill all orders. With French bulbs the situation is not so promising. Recent letters and cables declare stock to be up to standard, but overland transportation to Marseilles, the only ocean shipping point, is made very difficult, as cars are not to be had for such freight, which must be shipped by inland waterways, motor trucks or wagons. The center of the French bulb industry is at Ollioules, where nearly 400,000 acres are devoted to the cultivation of Paper Whites, Roman hyacinths, freesias, early forcing Golden Spur, Lilium candidum and other French varieties. The distance to Marseilles is 90 miles. All shipping to the United States from this port is by the Fabre line, with but one vessel a month. Bulbs usually arrive the last of July or early August, but latest cables say no vessel is just at present available and growers hesitate to lift their bulbs until they are assured of speedy shipment. Some growers have written that they were promised transportation by the middle of August at latest, and perhaps a week sooner. Mr. Gloeckner fully expects French bulbs to arrive during the latter part of August. The assurance that Lilium Harrisii will come through from Bermuda helps a little. When bulbs arrive here Mr. Gloeckner will advise growers to have all stocks sent by express, as freight deliveries last season were in many cases so delayed as to cause serious loss.

Fred Michell has just received a letter from Capt. Chas. F. O'Connor, of the 19th regiment of engineers, of which his son, Harry F. Michell II, was a member, giving some details of his death, which occurred April 7, 1918. Mr. Michell was one of a party of five who were sent down the river on a raft. When in this comparatively helpless position, they floated through clouds of gas, were overcome, fell from the raft and in their helpless condition were drowned. None of the bodies of the five soldiers has ever been found. Capt. O'Connor did not hear of the incident until a month after it happened, as he himself had spent two months in the hospital, recovering from a similar asphyxiation.

New Early-Flowering or Winter-Blooming GIANT PANSIES

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering and its unusual hardiness, which enables them to withstand quite severe Winters and to bloom right on into the Summer. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant.

14. WINTER SUN. Golden yellow, eye. 16. CELESTIAL QUEEN. Light or sky blue.
15. ICE KING. Silvery white, with eye. 17. CHARM OF MARCH. Dark velvety blue.
18. MIXED. The above four colors with other shades and variations. Each color separate or mixed.
500 seeds, 25c; 1000 seeds, 40c; 1/4 oz., $1.10; 1/4 oz., $2.00; oz., $7.50.

VAUGHAN'S INTERNATIONAL MIXTURE. This is one of the Specialties that has established the reputation of Vaughan's Flower Seeds and one which we maintain most carefully. Trade pkt., 50c.; $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., \$1.50; $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., \$5.00; oz., \$10.00.

VAUGHAN'S GIANT MIXTURE. This mixture includes the richest reds, coppers and bronzes, together with the most delicate rose and pink shadings, all the distinct colors of Trimardeau and the splendid Cassier strain. Trade pkt., 25c.; $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 75c.; oz., \$5.00; $\frac{1}{2}$ lb., \$18.00.

VAUGHAN'S CUT FLOWER MIXTURE. This mixture is put up by ourselves and contains mostly light colored sorts. We have sold this mixture for several seasons to some of our Chicago cut flower growers. Trade pkt., 25c.; $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 60c.; oz., \$4.00.

NEW EARLY-FLOWERING GIANT. The new strain produces its giant flowers about four weeks earlier than other types. In March, when the old type pansies hardly show any buds the plants of the new strain bear from three to five of their giant flowers. Early Flowering Giant White, Yellow, Light Blue, Dark Blue and Mixed. Trade pkt. (500 seeds), 25c.; $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 80c.

CHICAGO PARKS BEDDING MIXTURE. This is a mixture made by ourselves from 20 different and distinct varieties of this type. While the flowers of this strain do not grow as large as those of the Giant Pansies they excel them by a much greater number of flowers to a plant. Trade pkt., 15c.; $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 35c.; oz., \$1.15; $\frac{1}{2}$ lb., \$4.00.

VAUGHAN'S P. P. (Popular Price) MIXTURE. This mixture, like all "Vaughan" mixtures, is made up by ourselves from separate colors and strains of the Giant and Chicago Parks Bedding types and will furnish a large variety of colors with a good proportion of giant flowers. Trade pkt., 20c.; $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 35c.; oz., \$2.00; 4 ozs., \$7.00.

LENEX, MASS.—An instructive lecture on the soy bean by Dr. Yami Kin, a Chinese authority, was a feature of the meeting of the Lenox Garden Club July 29.

A LONG ISLAND trucker is growing 300 acres of Irish Cobbler potatoes, with a yield of 400 bushels to the acre. His auto trucks take 100 barrels to a load (in bushel sacks), the selling price being $4.25 per barrel of 165 pounds.

BOSTON, MASS.—The community market in Horticultural hall opened July 30, but was a disappointment to more than 1,000 prospective purchasers, as, the home gardeners evidently having a market for their surplus stocks among their neighbors, few applications for space were received.

ACCORDING to the July crop report of the United States department of agriculture the acreage of soy beans for 1918 was 383,000 compared with 524,000 in 1917. Plantings of cow peas were 5,485,000 acres as compared with 7,019,000 last year, while velvet beans show 1,601,000 acres as against 4,686,000 the preceding year.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetable.

Chicago, August 6.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, 50 cents; celery, crate, 35 to 60 cents; head lettuce, 2-dozen, $1.50 to $2.00; radishes, per 100 bunches $3.00; tomatoes, 4 baskets, 35 to 75 cents.

New York, August 5.—Celery (state), per bunch, 15 to 40 cents; cucumbers, 75 cents to $1.25 per basket; mushrooms $3.00 to $5.00 per basket; tomatoes, per pound, 14 to 15 cents; lettuce, per package, 50 cents to $1.25; radishes, per 100 bunches, 50 cents to $1.00.

Vegetable Markets.

Reports to the Bureau of Markets, United States department of agriculture, of shipments and jobbing prices for the period July 30-August 5, show decreases in volume of movements, noticeably large in white potatoes and watermelons with prices on both these items tending upward. In onions, Washington and California sacked yellow stock made a gradual advance of 10 to 15 cents, closing firm in markets in the middle west at $3.10-$3.40 per 100 pounds. New Jersey yellows advanced to $2.75 per bushel hamper in New York. Supplies were generally light. Sweet potato shipments are beginning to move earlier than last year. Total shipments were 64 cars. Alabama stock opened well in middle west markets at $3.00-$3.25 per bushel. North Carolinas in eastern markets went at $8.50-$10 per barrel. New Jersey is supplying the bulk of the carlot movement in tomatoes. Prices dropped 25 to 50 cents in New York under heavy receipts, declining to $1.50 at the close. Iowa cabbage was fairly steady at $3.00-$3.25 per barrel in Kansas City and Pittsburgh. Most northern markets are being supplied by home-grown stock.

Women Successful Farmers.

Charles Lathrop Pack, in charge of the war gardens campaign at Lake-wood, N. J., sent eight farmerettes to Dixville Notch in the spring and the results of their efforts have been so successful that a government representative has been sent to make a report of their work. The young women have one of the best managed farms in the state.

Burpee's Sweet Peas

New Winter Flowering Spencers.

The coal problem is one of great concern to the commercial florist, and there appears to be no alternative, except to produce such crops as can be grown with the smallest amount of heat. Sweet Peas can be successfully grown under conditions that would not allow production of other popular flowers.

We recommend to our florist friends that they sow Sweet Peas under glass for a commercial winter crop. Sweet Peas are the logical paying crop for the coming winter. They may be grown with very little heat.

Early Sankey. Greatly reduced.

WHITE

3395 Burpee's Early Sankey. Magnificent white. Black seeded. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 75c; oz., \$1.25; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$3.75; lb., \$12.50.

3396 Burpee's Early Snowstorm. The best of the white-seeded, early-flowering Spencers yet introduced. The flowers are of great size and substance, beautifully waved and are borne in great profusion. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., \$1.00; oz., \$1.75; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$6.00; lb., \$20.00.

CREAM

3381 Burpee's Early Canary Bird. This is a splendid, rich, deep cream or primrose colored self. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 75c; $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., \$1.25; oz., \$2.00.

3391 Burpee's Primrose Beauty. An attractive and pleasing shade of deep primrose, flushed with rose. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 75c; oz., \$1.25; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$1.50; lb., \$15.00.

LIGHT PINK

3385 Burpee's Early Loveliness. The color is white, the entire flower being suffused soft pink until it reaches the edges, which are distinctly plicated with rose-pink. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 75c; oz., \$1.25; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$3.75; lb., \$12.50.

3397 Burpee's Early Sweet Briar. Color a lovely shade of pink throughout, but with a soft salmon or amber suffusion, this being more accentuated in the younger flowers and buds. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 75c; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$1.25; oz., \$2.00.

DEEP PINK

3384 Burpee's Early Enchantress. It is a bright rose-pink, becoming deeper toward the edges of standard and wings, gradually softening in tone toward the center of the flower. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 75c; oz., \$1.25; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$3.75; lb., \$12.50.

3390 Burpee's Early Pink Beauty. A soft rose-pink on white ground, richer toward the edges, gradually softening in color as it reaches the center of standard and wings. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 75c; oz., \$1.25; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$3.75; lb., \$12.50.

ROSE PINK

3383 Burpee's Early Impress. This is a magnificent flower of largest size. A most distinct and glorious shade of bright deep rose-pink. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., \$1.00; oz., \$1.75; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$6.00; lb., \$20.00.

CREAM PINK

3382 Burpee's Early Daybreak. The color is a pleasing shade of rich rose-pink on cream ground, the color becoming deeper toward the edge of standard and wings. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 75c; $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., \$1.25; oz., \$2.00.

3396 Burpee's Early Sunburst. The color is a pleasing shade of rich pink, becoming lighter toward the base of standard and wings. The entire flower is suffused with soft amber and salmon. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 75c; oz., \$1.25; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$3.75; lb., \$12.50.

W. ATLEE BURPEE CO., Seed Growers, Philadelphia

CRIMSON and SCARLET

3386 Burpee's Early King. A glowing, rich, bright crimson. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 75c; oz., \$1.25; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$3.75; lb., \$12.50.

3394 Burpee's Rosy Morn. The color is a pleasing shade of rose with crimson-scarlet standard, immense flowers. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 50c; oz., 85c; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$2.50, lb., \$8.00.

ROSE

3393 Fordhook Rose. This lovely variety is a charming shade of rosy carmine. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 50c; oz., 85c; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$2.50; lb., \$8.00.

LAVENDER

3389 Fordhook Pink. A distinct shade of pink suffused with lavender throughout. Under artificial light it is particularly pleasing. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 50c; oz., 85c; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$2.50; lb., \$8.00.

3391a Burpee's Early Princess. Color a lovely shade of soft lavender suffused mauve. A color in great demand. The flowers are most attractively fluted or waved. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., \$1.00; oz., \$1.75; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$6.00; lb., \$20.00.

3392 Burpee's Early Lavender King. A first-class lavender has been much wanted in this type, therefore we have great pleasure in offering the new Lavender King. This glorious new variety is a rich, true, deep lavender throughout. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., \$1.00; oz., \$1.75; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$6.00; lb., \$20.00.

BLUE

3380 Burpee's Early Blue Bird. This is a charming shade of blue. Somewhat similar to Wedgwood. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 75c; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$1.25; oz., \$2.00.

MAUVE

3388 Burpee's Early Mauve Beauty. Color a pleasing shade of rosy mauve. Charming under artificial light. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 75c; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$1.25; oz., \$2.00.

BICOLOR

3398 Yarrowa. The color is a bright rose-pink with a clear, creamy base. Floradale-grown seed exclusively. Oz., \$0.75; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$2.40; lb., \$8.00.

3387 Fordhook Pink and White. This is the most popular color in early-flowering Sweet Peas. Having a bright, rosy-pink standard with creamy white wings, lightly suffused rose. Oz., \$1.00; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$3.75; lb., \$12.00.

PICOTEE EDGED

3384a Burpee's Early Exquisite. The ground color is a soft shade of primrose, the edge of the standard and wings being beautifully 'picotee'd' with deep rose-pink. A strong, robust grower, the large flowers are freely borne on long stiff stems usually in threes and fours. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 75c; $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., \$1.25; oz., \$2.00.

J. R. Maybaw, Waxahachie, Tex., President; J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa., Vice-President; Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass., Secretary and Counsel. Forty-four annual convention will be held at Chicago in 1919.

CHICAGO.—William Peterson, of the Peterson Nursery, is spending the summer at Winona Lake, Ind.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—The tussock moth has again made its appearance in apple orchards in this vicinity.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—F. D. Butterfield, well known to the nursery trade in this vicinity, died here July 18.

MACON, GA.—The sixth annual meeting of the Georgia Horticultural Society was held in this city, August 8.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.—A "tree planting day" has been suggested when 1,000 business men would each plant a tree on a 200-acre tract available for the purpose.

Roses at Bagatelle.

We have received a report on the new roses sent to the rose gardens, at Bagatelle, near Paris, for trial, and it is satisfactory to learn that both the gold medals have been awarded to roses sent from English-speaking countries—one to Howard & Smith, of Los Angeles, California, for their new variety, Los Angeles, and the other to William Paul & Sons, Ltd., of Waltham Cross, for Paul's Scarlet Climber. Los Angeles is the result of a cross between Lyon rose and Mme. Second Weber. It has the beautiful coloring of Lyon rose, without its capriciousness, flowering all through the season.—London Gardeners' Chronicle.

American Dahlia Society.

A list of special prizes has been announced in Classes A to K inclusive for the exhibition of the American Dahlia Society in conjunction with the Massachusetts Horticultural Society at Horticultural hall, Boston, Mass., September 14-15. The following firms and individuals are among the contributors: Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Penn. The Florist, Boston; Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co., Boston; Carter's Tested Seeds, Boston; R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md.; J. K. Alexander, East Bridgewater, Mass. Special silver and bronze medals are also offered by the American Dahlia Society for the finest general display arranged for effect, any or all types, to occupy a space of 50 square feet. Further information may be obtained by communicating with the secretary of the society, J. R. Lewis, 736 Riverside drive, New York City.

Pomological Station in Brazil.

Vice-Consul Richard P. Momsen reports that the Brazilian government has authorized the establishment of a pomological station in Deodoro. The work of the station will comprise the production of domestic fruit trees and those foreign types already selected and acclimated, the introduction of new foreign species, the improvement of indigenous fruit trees, the study of insect pests and methods of combating them, the study of better methods of packing and transporting plants and fruits, experiments to determine the most successful methods of conserving fruits and the question of distributing fruit to dealers. The school will be open to students who wish to pursue this branch of agriculture and to farmers who wish to observe practical demonstrations of modern pomological methods.

Aesculus Parviflora.

The last of the horsechestnuts to flower, Aesculus parviflora, will soon be in bloom. It is a tall, round-topped, shapely shrub well suited to plant in large masses or as a single specimen. In good soil and when uncrowded by other plants it soon spreads over a large area. A native of the southeastern states, where it is found from South Carolina to Florida and Alabama, this horsechestnut is hardy in New England, and in cultivation at the north grows into a larger and finer plant than in its native wilds. The small white flowers are produced in long, narrow, erect spikes which stand up above the plant and make them conspicuous during the last weeks of July. There is a mass of these plants at the northern base of the wooded hill on the right-hand side of the Meadow Road and in the rear of the horsechestnut group.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin.

Gold Medal Roses.

The British Horticultural Advertiser describes three gold medal roses shown at the exhibition of the National Rose Society of England, July 4, as follows:

Col. Oswald Fitzgerald, H.T. (Alex. Dickson & Sons, Ltd., Newtownards, I.)—A well-formed flower, almost big enough for exhibition, of a deep glowing crimson; the richest and most brilliant H.T. we have seen. We are inclined to consider this as the novelty of the day.

Golden Ophelia (B. R. Cant & Sons, Colchester).—This combines the perfect form of Ophelia with rich yellow color.

Lamia (W. Easlea, Dancroft Nursery, Leigh-on-Sea).—Rich apricot, the buds tinted red on outer petals; well-shaped bud opening rather single. Not large, but a grand bit of color.

Pax (Rev. J. H. Pemberton, Havering-atte-Bower, Essex).—Creamy-white, neat bud opening almost single. A hybrid from the musk rose and with pleasant musk scent. Pretty, but not to our ideas a gold medal rose.

Poppies in France.

I can recall when summer hazed
The sky, and all seemed in a trance,
How the bright poppies burned and blazed

Across the rolling fields of France.

They made a glory of Champagne,
Wave after wave of harmony;
They spread a cloth of crimson stain
On many a field in Picardy.

Again the poppy blooms are fair
Beneath the summer's haze-hung sky,
But now (O poignant sorrow!) there
Than theirs behold a deeper dye!

JULY CLOSES SATISFACTORILY.

Business was brisk during the last half of July, in spite of the fact that the weather was very warm. Weddings occur frequently, although they are simple affairs and the call is for limited decorations and bridal bouquets. Glad-toll are now being received in great quantities and find favor with flower buyers as well as being used to quite an extent in designs. Asters have also arrived and are of good quality for so early in the season. Roses are scarce and the quality is becoming poorer daily, due to the warm weather. Carnations are small and inferior. Garden flowers are still being offered.

NOTES.

A garden exhibit will be one of the special features of the industrial exhibition to be held in this city in September. Entries have already been announced by a number of local florists.

Nicholas Collatos arranged a very attractive patriotic window last week, featuring miniature airplanes and army tanks. Baskets of flowers made a striking background.

Arthur Newborn is disposing of some of his surplus stock of superfine gypsophila. Quantities of this flower were destroyed by the recent storms in this vicinity.

J. B. Kellers' Sons have been busy with funeral work, with orders for many pieces for the Hart funeral.

J. C. Murphy, 299 Plymouth street, has given up his store and will enter one of the camps as a mechanic.

Miss Lillian Wheeler is spending her vacation at Lake Canandaigua.

E. C. Armbrust has returned from Lake Canandaigua.

Visitors: James Bates, Oakfield, N. Y.; Milton Selinka, New York.

Who Plants A Tree.

Who plants a tree
Plants not what is, but is to be—
A hope, a thought for future years,
A prayer, a dream of higher things
That rise from out our doubts and fears,
As seed or acorn from the cold
And dungeon darkness of the mould
To light upsprings.

Who plants a tree
Blesses earth's children yet to be.
Toilers shall rest beneath its shade,
The dreamers dream of golden hours,
And frolic youth and winsome maid
Shall bless the shadow that it gives;
So, happy birds among its leaves,
And lowly flowers.

Who plants a tree
Plants aspiration heavenly:
Youth, with eternal upward glance,
And vigor, counting not the toil
That raises life 'bove circumstance;
Plants resolution absolute,
And home-bred courage striking root
In native soil.

Who plants a tree
Plants beauty where all eyes may see,
In mirror of her loveliness,
How Nature fashions beauteous forms
Through sunny charms and darksome stress—
A parable of human life
That grows to excellence through strife
Of beating storms.—Robert H. Adams in Chicagoans Discuss Wholesaling.

Interesting Views Presented at Meeting of Chicago Florists' Club.

At the regular meeting of the florists' club, at Karthausers' grove, August 8, the feature of the evening was a discussion of conditions at present affecting the growers, wholesalers and retailers in the Chicago district and the relations existing between these branches of the trade. There was a spirited discussion entered into by a number of prominent wholesalers, their views being presented, in part, as follows:

From Wholesaler's Standpoint.

By John Michelsen, of E. C. Amling Co.

We have seen the Chicago flower market progress from day to day and season to season. There are some things we can all be proud of, but there is still plenty of room for improvement along all lines, especially under the present conditions.

First of all, we must look after our supply of stock; this means the man who really is the foundation of our business, namely, the grower. Without him and his welfare looked after, all our efforts are lost, so he is consequently the most important. You can only obtain a price for his stock by asking for it. We should impress upon him to keep a complete record of his production and receipts so he can be able to tell, from time to time, when to market his crops to the best advantage; also, what varieties of stock to plant, in order to meet the demand. He must also produce the best quality possible, and if he can do this, he is bound to benefit by it, as the demand for quality is always there. There is in spite of this, at times, an oversupply, and when this occurs he will lose money if his stock is not the best. The best grower never loses in proportion to the one who grows undesirable stock. This much for our supply.

Now, how about the wholesaler who condemns the poor stock, and the retailer who comes to his store or calls up on the phone and is promised the world with a fence around it and sometimes only gets the fence? Do we always size up our supply correctly?

This is a vital point from a selling standpoint. Do not try to fool the buyer, as this hurts your demand very much and makes sales on the wrong line of stock. Get your customer to push the varieties of stock you know you can supply. This will make money for the customer as well as the grower.

Let us try to equalize the demand so all the stock will sell at a good price. No grower has ever lost anything on a high market, so why worry about the items short on the market, but rather worry about the heavy cuts that we cannot get away from? Induce quality that you generally find goes with the large cuts. We should always impress on the retail florist that he cannot run a flower store without flowers, and that he loses money as well as a customer, when his competitor fills the order. His argument that he cannot afford to carry stock is not a good one, for his percentage of the profits should be so based, and he must also charge more money to cover the increased cost of operating.

We should not handle stocks from surplus shippers, who as a rule, are our competitors on the shipping trade. In so doing we do two things—help to load up the market and prevent the regular shipper from getting what belongs to him, and lower the prices in general. Growers who do not ship entire cuts to one house, keep us in the dark. You can only judge your supply by the daily cuts, and when you know that you have received all the stock there has been cut from any one place from day to day, this is the only competition necessary without letting a grower make competition on his own stock in the same market.

We can do more shipping business if we do our business better than the florists in other cities, not by selling cheaper, but by delivering better stock and in good condition. Many good retailers are up against unfair competition, due to our lack of collecting our money promptly from his competitor, who uses our money in furthering his business, while the other one pays promptly.

The whole sum and substance of our business is that we need more real business and many other ways of doing things omitted. Do justice to your grower by trying to get the best prices possible to enable him to produce at a higher cost. He pays his commission, or his selling expenses, by operating his wholesale house. Do justice to the retailer by keeping down unfair competition. With this in the minds of all wholesalers, we can overcome the present as well as the future conditions.

Increased Cost of Growing.

Abstract of a paper by Otto W. Frese, manager cut flower department, Poehlmann Bros. Co.

About 35 years ago, I marketed for J. C. Vaughan, the first flowers sold on the Chicago market on a commission basis, the consignment consisting of a market basket of carnations, sweet alyssums and other garden varieties from a small town in Illinois. The entire lot was taken by one State street florist and other shipments followed. It was then that the commission charge of 15 per cent was established, and this rate, based at that time on the comparatively small cost of handling has remained unchanged, despite increasing costs of labor, rent, fuel, boxes, etc., until the present day. But with practically everything that enters into the business advanced from 100 to 200 per cent, it is impossible that the same margin of profit can be maintained, and in my opinion, the wholesaler should receive at least 25 per cent under existing conditions. This can be done by classifying growers according to the variety and grade of the stock they ship, creating a scale to apply to the different classes. If it were not for the sale of green and other supplies the wholesalers would find themselves running behind on the present basis. There should also be an exception to stock from outside markets when such comes in competition with local production to the extent of glutting the market and lowering prices.

A large number of the growers are under the impression that they do not get full returns. It is my opinion, however that the producer gets every penny—and sometimes more. The trouble is some growers have very little confidence in the wholesaler as shown by their changing from one to another, becoming known as "switchers" and their stock naturally is not handled to the best advantage. I do not believe, however, that this feeling exists in the mind of the intelligent and competent grower, and the sooner the undesirables are forced out, or place more confidence in the wholesalers, the better it will be for all concerned and for themselves in particular. The greatest cause of dissatisfaction is the price that stock is sold for and the question of raising prices on all good marketable stock should be worthy of earnest consideration.

Of course, in so doing, there would be the protests of the retailers, claiming it would be impossible to make sales at higher prices. This is natural as the retailer aims to buy and also sell as cheap as he can, but then if the price was raised uniformly, the retailer would have to charge more and he could get better returns. Cut flowers have not increased in years, selling at the same prices, despite increased cost of production, but there must be a change if the growers are to stay in business. Flowers are as essential as a great many other commodities. An increased wholesale cost would naturally result in higher selling prices and in retail sales this additional expense must not be lost sight of.

David Lloyd George and the Flower Girl.

The argument has been advanced that growers should set the prices at which their goods should be sold. This would, however, be poor policy, as they are not in daily touch with market conditions. Sales, therefore, must be left entirely in the hands of the wholesaler, and he should at all times have the grower's interests in mind and strive to maintain prices. A great deal of favoritism is often shown and too much good stock is unnecessarily jobbed off.

We are gradually advancing along different lines and are now doing things that were formerly thought impossible, and they are working out satisfactorily to everyone concerned. The public is paying higher prices for everything and naturally expect to pay more for flowers. It is not reasonable that they should be sold for the same price as heretofore. The grower must receive more for his product, and if he does not receive co-operation at the hands of the retailer, the situation will be far reaching and confronted with a shortage of stock, the retailer will have to pay higher prices than he ever dreamed of. Stiffen up your backbone, Retailers. When you approach a customer and ask him $3 for roses that formerly sold for $1.50 or $2, he will pay. He knows why you ask more.

Profitable Prices for Grower.

By Paul Kilgusorn, manager of Chicago Flower Growers' Association.

This is a subject which needs no introduction, as it has been discussed more or less thoroughly since the inception of the florist business. However, up to the present time, it has not turned out to be a 100 per cent proposition from the grower's viewpoint.

The following suggestions are submitted for general consideration:

First—The production of a good average quality of flowers. We all know that some growers produce much finer quality than others, and consequently, should receive better returns for the stock sent to the market. Poor stock is unprofitable at all times for the grower and the middle man who handles the goods to sell to the retail trade.

Second—Get the proper market value for the stock. This would be easy of accomplishment if the wholesaler and salesman were more thoroughly posted on the original cost of the stock, the grower's overhead expense, and the prevailing market conditions. Such knowledge is essential to insure the grower a fair profit on his investment and labor. The average retail buyer aims to secure his stock as cheaply as possible, after accomplishing his purpose by setting his own price, and in a good many instances overruling that of the salesman. A more general knowledge among salesmen of the grower's problem, would lead to better judgment in selling, in compromising, and in holding the price in accordance with market conditions.

It is well for the retailer to stop and consider, that unless the grower realizes a profitable return for his flowers, he may discontinue growing them, and perhaps turn his attentions to the production of vegetables. Such has been the case in many instances within the past year, and furthermore of the same would not be conducive to the trade in general.

What will the retailers do if this should occur? Is it not well to weigh this problem carefully, and stop the tendency to hammer down prices to the point while the retailer realizes an abnormal profit, and the producer suffers a loss? Never overlook the fact that one needs the other, and that neither should have all the profit. It should be fairly divided.

Wholesale House of Future.

Abstract of paper by J. E. Pollworth of Kenilcott Bros. Co.

Modern business is always aggressive. To spend intelligently in accordance to the needs of the business is conservation. Let us introduce commercial ideas and practices found in other lines of activity. Some wholesalers have shown this spirit of aggressiveness where others fail to keep abreast of the times—standing still or losing ground. The cost of wholesaling has advanced steadily toward the 15 per cent commission allowance. To hold down the cost of doing a wholesale business, is to do more business. No reduction of cost or expense can be expected, and it is for that reason that some effective and practical plans be devised to "get the money" for the grower—that's getting it for us and for the retailer, who must see the grower prosperous in order to have the producer raise the stock for him to do business with.

Wholesale houses in the past could start with a little capital to do a 100 per cent business on a 15 per cent basis. The wholesale market is conducted any way any individual house may see fit to carry on its business.

SOME MEMBERS OF THE ST. LOUIS TRADE.

John Moritz, Superintendent of Forest Park Greenhouses is seen in the Above Illustration Holding the Silver Cup Presented to Him at the August Meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club, in Appreciation of His Good Work in Connection With the 1917 Spring Flower Show in That City. To His Right is John Young, Secretary of the Society of American Florists, at His Left, L. Jules Bourdet, Vice-President of the Same Organization. The Others in the Group are St. Louis "Live Wires".

A wholesale commission house should have its limitations. It should not accept consignments of "indoor and outdoor" stock, except from such growers whose specialty is to commercially produce for the wholesale market. The wholesale grower and the wholesale cut flower commission business should omit selling direct to the consumer—otherwise known as the "Red Violet Business."

Growers consigning to any one house should organize and hold regular meetings to take up matters of interest to consignee and consignor, thereby promoting the welfare of both. License the commission firms and bond them for the proper conduct of their business—particularly for the benefit of the consignor and the prestige such supervision will carry to the distant buyer. Stop questionable methods of soliciting consignors.

Increased overhead cuts closer into the 15 per cent allowance of the consignor. Long credits will have to be discontinued. Each credit extended by a wholesaler uses that much more of the capital. No retailer has a justifiable reason to expect to use a wholesaler's capital to carry on his business. It takes from eight to twelve per cent for a wholesaler to do business. If collections are not within a fixed basis of income, additional money of the wholesaler must be supplied. The expense of selling has increased without increase of commission income.

Chicago is a natural "dumping ground" for cut flowers coming in from all parts of the country. While we are obliged to accept them when express charges are paid or guaranteed, it is our privilege to charge 20 per cent from transient shippers. Retail dealers are attracted to this market only as we have the goods to advertise. The wholesale grower and the commission wholesaler have done very little to create a demand for flowers with the consuming public. So long as the commission wholesaler exercises no control over his consignors to bring about better conditions of marketing, so long will we stay as we are. The grower who co-ordinates his greenhouses with the commission wholesaler, broadens the responsibilities of such wholesaler, each co-operating with the other, yet each retaining the individuality.

The grower should take into consideration with his wholesalers the possibilities of the products he wants to grow—that the same are "good sellers." Growers should endeavor to produce dependable, acceptable products to satisfy the retailer. Getting stock into the wholesale market in the best of condition is worth all it costs to the grower in entitling him to the highest prices with the least amount of trouble and effort in the handling of it by the wholesaler. All stock should be bunched and graded to run uniform in quality. Wherever practical, it is advisable that the stock show some mark of identity of the shipper, since such stock when known to the buyer creates a demand for itself with consequent higher prices.

Only in mobilizing the resources of the Chicago market can we hope to obtain such regulation as will best serve the needs of the grower towards higher prices. Make buying in this market so inviting and prove up the strength of our "productive power." Let us make it easier for city retailer and distant buyer to buy cut flowers from this market because it is cheaper to get them from the Chicago market than it is for the retailer to grow them for himself.

Fewer wholesale houses and better ones, each big enough to do things as they ought to be done, will aid towards equalizing the prices to serve the retailer and provide a guarantee of prices to "keep up" the earnings of the grower.

Growers, large and small, with the retailer, bring about an understanding on the different phases of this market. Harmony will prevail among all classes of the trade. That is the wish of the "wholesale house of the future." The better understanding toward each individual member brings about unlimited possibilities to do good. Uniformity, standardization with a constant alertness towards progressiveness will make the cut flower industry of greater influence in the business world.

Controlling Surplus Stocks.

By C. L. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn.

The surplus of flowers, or gluts of flowers, can be partially controlled by the grower in the following manner:

The excessive supply of roses is largely caused by heat waves. The United States weather bureau issues a daily bulletin and weather map, which shows from 24 to 48 hours in advance the various changes of temperature that will occur. These predictions have been proven correct in such a large percentage that they can be depended upon as correct. If the growers will watch these maps and predictions, they can end the surplus supply of roses by disabbing the short and medium stems and reduce the excessive supply during the warm weather, and in that manner let the shipments be more equal to the demand.

The flower market is very largely a weather market. The cold waves cause a shortage, and the warm waves a surplus. As these weather maps are issued free, it is very important that the florist should get this valuable information and they can save a good deal of money by guiding themselves by these weather predictions. The supply of bulbous stock is hard to regulate, except by planting in rotation.

The supply of carnations is also an item that is hard to regulate. However, with both carnations and bulbous stock, by throwing away the poor qualities, a much better price can be realized from the improved quality of stock to warrant the loss of the poorer grades. Stock grown outdoors such as gladioli, asters, etc., are very hard to control.

There are certain sources that will buy flowers, provided the price is low enough, but whether these sources of disposal are advantageous to the market is hard to say, as frequently they come in direct competition with regular customers, and cause the regular customers considerable loss.

The main thing for the growers to do is to watch the weather reports and try to guide their production by the predictions which are given out in these reports.

General Trade Suggestions.

By Miss O. A. Tonner, of O. A. & L. A. Tonner.

It seems fitting at a meeting of this kind to mention a few things that have often been discussed, but no action ever taken. There is a necessity for improvement in all three divisions of the trade, but we cannot expect co-operation or protection unless we stand for sound principles in each individual division.

Our biggest problem is to get a larger average price for the grower, but our attention, in this line, should be turned decidedly to the times when their heavy cuts come in; for at these times their stock is wasted. Flowers ought never to be sold so cheap, that the public, for the time being, turn their thoughts to something more favored than flowers.

Overstocking the larger wholesale houses ought to be considered. It is true, they are the first to send prices up, but they are also first in causing them suddenly to drop below normal, when their surplus in some lines, is found wanting for a market. We are depending on a retail trade to consume our stock; we should therefore protect them from that unfair competition, which does destroy their buying power—sometimes for a week or more—and this has its detrimental effect on our general market as well.

Can we look forward to a time when the surplus is handled in ways more profitable for all, through a local board whose duty it would be to promote ways and means of distributing the surplus, and keep a more normal market?

An active committee, made up of and supported by all three divisions of the trade, undoubtedly could produce favorable results that now seem farsighted.

Higher Prices for Flowers.

Abstract of a paper by A. T. Pyfer, of A. T. Pyfer & Co.

There is no line of business suffering today as much as the flower business on account of low figures obtained for the product, and unless prices are advanced immediately, we will find many growers out of business before the end of another year. Many have already closed all or part of their houses, are devoting them to vegetables, or planning to close them for the winter. Therefore, this decrease in supply, and a normal demand, will have a tendency to increase prices as the business is dependent almost entirely on supply and demand. We might say, entirely dependent, since we lack organization and strict co-operation among the wholesalers and growers, and so long as a grower will be satisfied to get a lump sum at the end of the week, regardless of how much stock is sold, or at what price, these conditions will exist.

The grower is the one who is losing the largest amount of money these days. Everything he uses in producing flowers has advanced, and he is paying the price, because whatever he buys is controlled by organizations who know the cost of production and charge accordingly. The grower can keep a record, and can know these things, and know all he wants to know, but he forgets the most important thing of all—system. It is just as important to have a bookkeeper in your greenhouses, no matter how small your place, as it is to have expert knowledge of how to produce good flowers. Let the grower keep a record of his costs and demand an accurate and detailed report from his commission man, and you will have taken the first important step toward getting what we must have in order to keep the flower business in existence—higher prices. Therefore you must employ someone, or take time each day, at least, to make a debit and credit entry in a ledger as regularly as you would water and cut your stock. Show the wholesaler what it is costing you to produce the stock and demand higher prices.

The wholesalers lack all knowledge of cost of production in most cases, and are unorganized and do not co-operate with each other, each doing all he can to undersell his competitors. During the month of July most growers have obtained better average prices for the month than they did last year, and yet they do not know if they have received cost or not, nor has the wholesaler obtained the highest price possible, as many times during the month there was a vast difference in prices on the same kind of stock. Let the grower distribute his stock to as many houses as he thinks best, so that no one house will be overloaded and by several houses handling his stock, he can have a daily report of all stock sold and on hand and distribute his stock accordingly. Even in a glut the grower gets a better average and more stock is sold than when unloaded in one house and slaughtered, disregarding prices or cost of production.

What kind of co-operation is there, or will there be, with the wholesaler and retailer? Here, too, there is lack of co-operation and a tendency to put prices down and sell to department stores in order to move the surplus or glut, "thus killing the market for several days for the retailer, who must in a way, meet department store prices, or at least be told about the low prices down town by many customers each day." The retailer wants higher prices and standard or uniform prices to all, and co-operation in selling wholesale only; also to have the retailers buy everything from the wholesaler and get organized and overcome these underselling competitors.

PLANT NOTES.

Sweet Peas.

To have sweet peas in bloom by Christmas the seed should be sown by September 1. If it is intended to grow them to follow some crop that is now in the beds they can be sown in pots, but if the beds are now ready it is better to sow them in the beds themselves. The growers of large quantities have the rows running lengthwise of the houses, two rows in each four-foot bed, one on each side, with a path in the center, but they can also be grown in rows running across the beds, the rows being about three feet apart. This distance will be found necessary or the plants will get twined together, making a bad snarl of the vines. In sowing the seed in pots, place five or six seed in a four-inch pot, and in sowing in drills in the bench, plant the seeds about an inch apart. It is very easy to thin them out if they come up too thick, and one good strong plant to a pot and about eight inches apart in the row is about what should be left to grow on. It is often difficult to get good germination during the hot weather, therefore it is well to plant enough seed. Many growers have trouble with the seed rotting and also the plants damping off after they have grown to quite a height. They must be watered very sparingly until they begin to climb on the strings. The white seeded varieties are often very difficult to start; a good way which we have found very successful is to sow the seed in the drills on top of the soil, throwing a little sphagnum moss over them until they begin to grow, when they can be lightly covered with soil, and when they begin to climb, the drill can be filled in. This will prevent the seed from rotting and proper watering will remedy the damping off.

Wallflowers.

The wallflowers that were sown in the spring should now be planted in the benches that they may get a good start before the cool weather sets in. They should be planted in a house that can be held at a cool temperature to procure the best results, a house that does not have a night temperature exceeding 50 degrees, and even 45 degrees is better. They will not bloom to any extent until after the turn of the year, when they will stand a little higher temperature. The soil should be a good rich compost and the plants can be set about eight inches apart. Stake the plants as soon as they begin to grow and keep them tied up so that the spikes of bloom will not become crooked. Constant fumigation will be necessary, for they are likely to be infested with aphids unless guarded against.

Nephrolepis.

The Boston fern and its sports, which have been grown in the bench all summer, should now be potted. The bench is full of young suckers, which, if saved, will make fine stock for another year, so in lifting the old plants take a knife and cut around the plant about two inches from the center, and place a trowel under the plant, leaving the young stock in the bench. They will soon start to grow, when they can be placed close together in flats and grown on in a fairly cool house until next spring, when they will make excellent stock for planting out. The plants that are lifted should be large enough to plant in a six-inch pot. If there is a demand for larger sizes, two, three or four may be planted in seven, eight or nine-inch pots. Many of the plants have probably not made an even growth, being more or less one-sided. These should be the ones selected for doubling up in the larger pots. As soon as potted they should be kept close and warm for one or two weeks and frequently syringed; they will then have obtained a good hold in the soil, and should be given plenty of light and air. The call for these plants will begin by October 1, and it is much better to have them well established before they go into the residences, and to do this they should be potted by September. The greatest source of disappointment in these plants is in sending them out before they have become established. The Whitmani and finer leaved varieties are now growing rapidly, and should be given room enough to spread and make fine plants.

Hollyhocks.

During August and early September is the right time to sow hollyhock seed for the next season's flowering. Seed sown in the spring will not produce a plant that will flower to any great extent that year, and they will have to be carried over the winter to make good, large plants, but seeds sown now will make fine plants for next year. For the last few years the fungus that has attacked hollyhocks has made it difficult to carry the old plants over with any degree of certainty, but with late summer sowing much of this trouble is obviated. Be sure and purchase a good strain of double seed, and sow in a shaded frame, and as soon as large enough pot up in two-inch pots. Grow them in a frame until November 1 and then pot in three-inch or four-inch pots. These can be carried over the winter in a cold greenhouse or in well protected frames, and started in the greenhouse in March and nice plants for summer blooming be assured.

Poinsettias.

The plants of poinsettias, in the northern section of the country, should be in the houses by September 1, for cool nights are apt to occur from that date on, and the successful culture of these plants requires an even temperature. The early struck cuttings should be potted into six-inch pots and properly staked, the smaller stock to be grown in pans can be grown until October in the small pots. Give the plants a light location in full sunlight, and space out sufficiently to allow a good circulation of air around the plants. In potting the plants if there are no arrangements so that they can be watered with manure water later, leave a good inch of space at the top, so that they can be given a topdressing when the bracts begin to form. An extra feeding at that time will greatly increase the size of the bracts and brilliancy of the color. Close the ventilators on all cool nights as soon as the temperature falls below 60 degrees, and as soon as the night temperatures begin to run lower than that point a little fire heat will be necessary. The one great point in growing poinsettias is in keeping them at an even temperature and growing rapidly.

Marguerites.

The marguerites for winter blooming will soon have to be potted in their blooming pots. This can be done now at any time, and if they are becoming pot-bound the sooner the better. Nine and ten-inch pots are none too large if good flowers are to be grown, and the soil should be good and rich. Pot firmly, using a rammer that the soil can be made solid, and use good drainage and keep the buds picked off until cool weather sets in; the blooms that are made during the warm weather are of inferior quality and no good flowers will be produced until the plants get a good hold in the new soil. The plants are far better plunged in frames for some time yet than in the houses, for they may become infested with red spider under the glass. The plants in the benches will need to be frequently sprayed to keep them free from insects and the blooms should be kept picked off of them for some time yet. When cool weather approaches allow the flowers to come along. Cuttings can be made at this time, which will make nice flowering plants about the turn of the year, at a time when the large plants seem to take a rest and do not bloom profusely. This will insure a cut throughout the season.

War-Time Economy.

In these troubled times, each should do his or her best to relieve the situation, in every way they can, to conserve their energies, to give as little trouble as possible to their neighbors and the people with whom they do business.

Harry Bayersdorfer, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., is a level-headed business man. His firm prides itself on its service; many people however, take advantage of this liberality in being continually on the phone for little things that are invariably to be sent at once. The average florist is, he says, very shortsighted; he will not lay in a stock worth while, even of things which he requires every day, preferring to buy from time to time as his business demands it. He could do much better if he would order goods at quantity prices instead of buying one or two of a thing when needed. Many florists will only buy letters an inscription at a time, probably spending 10 cents carfare and half an hour's time for a boy, when he was needed at the store. With a stock on hand, all this would be avoided. This is only an instance; many a sale is lost, he feels sure, because the goods wanted are not in the store to show customers.

Florists who are responsible are often careless in settling their accounts, seldom taking the benefit of the discounts allowed for prompt payment. At this time all should do their part to save every unnecessary expense, both in labor, in buying intelligently, and by settling their bills promptly earn the discount.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Summer Work.

With the outside temperature hovering around 90 in the shade nearly every day now, it is a hot proposition caring for the plants in the chrysanthemum houses, and those having the work to do are often tempted to put a shade on the glass so that the conditions will be more comfortable, but chrysanthemums do best under full light with plenty of air. If grown under shade or close conditions, the plants will make a soft, thin growth and the wood does not ripen well enough to produce fine flowers. During periods of terrific heat, the plants should be given a good syringing morning and afternoon to maintain a moist atmosphere and encourage the growth. Care should be taken not to get the soil in the beds too wet, especially at times of thunder storms and heavy rains, which create a great deal of dampness inside and prevent the soil from drying out quickly. It is a mistake for the grower to allow the soil to remain in a wet state continually; better results will be obtained if the soil is allowed to get fairly dry between each watering.

Careful watering is one of the most important factors in growing chrysanthemums. The practice of the old-time gardener of rapping the outside of the pots when growing the plants in pots to see if there was a good light rattle there before watering to some extent holds just as good today with bench culture. Examine carefully the condition of the soil before each watering. Every careful grower has noted that many times the best blooms are cut from the outside rows of the bench where the soil has a chance to dry out more than in the center. This is a good guide to go by, it being necessary to water the outside rows two or three times more often than the center ones. To watering haphazardly can be traced the cause of more inferior blooms than anything else.

The month of August is a critical period in growing chrysanthemums. Before the month is very far along, some of the early-flowering and early-planted exhibition varieties will have their buds ready for taking; then when we get to the 15th and 20th of the month, most of varieties that mature in October will also have their buds ready, and so it will go to the end of the month and through the early part of September. To be prepared for the bud setting, the plants should receive careful attention from now on. Watch closely the work of removing the side growth, also to that of properly supporting them to enable the plants to grow uprightly.

J. J. HESS, OMAHA, NEB.

Another very important item is to make sure the plants are free from fly. There is not any other time when the insects will do as much damage as now. If neglected, the fly will work down into the top growth and badly cripple the young shoot or bud which is developing there. The weather conditions at this season of the year are favorable for the rapid increase of all kinds of insects. All kinds of fly are particularly abundant in the middle west this season. Roses, spiraeas and many other outdoor shrubs have been badly infested. This means that unless the spraying of the plants in the houses with the insecticide is attended to regularly, they also will be attacked. The writer has heard growers state that they do not spray their plants until there is a good crop of fly on them; then they apply a strong dose of insecticide and clean them off. This, I consider a poor policy, because a great deal of the young growths' strength has been sucked out. It is far better to keep the plants clean by systematic, regular spraying. The green cabbage worm, hairy caterpillar and grasshopper are other insects that attack the plants at this time. The best method that we have found to get the best of these creatures, is by hand picking, but it must be done regularly to be effective. All three of these pests do a wonderful amount of damage in a very short while. The cut-worm is another beast that we have to combat and is one that is hard to get under control, because they work mostly at night and hide down in the soil at the base of the plant during the daytime. Finely sifted lime or wood ashes, lightly colored with Paris green, dusted over tops of the plants is effective when daily syringings do not have to be done, but now when it is necessary to syringe, the poison gets washed off the plants before it gets in its work. Another plan is to lay small pieces of board on the surface of the soil for worms to secrete themselves under, then catch them by hand. Also, when a plant has been attacked, the cut-worm usually can be found by rubbing away a little of the loose soil at the plant's base, but whichever method is followed to combat these or any other insects, eternal vigilance is the only means of success.

FLORISTS' FERNS.

Hot Weather Treatment.

Several species of ferns that are popular in the trade, are nearly or quite hardy, and this fact shows the reasonableness of the outdoor treatment accorded these plants during the summer by most trade growers. The majority of ferns are more or less subject to attacks of thrips during the hot weather, and this pest flourishes amazingly in the greenhouse, where ventilation cannot be so thorough as in a cold frame with the sashes elevated on a framework one foot to 18 inches above the sides of the frame. By the adoption of this plan of shaded sash on an elevated framework, the plants are sufficiently protected from the sun and also from heavy rains, while getting abundant ventilation both day and night. Naturally it is not quite as convenient for watering in these frames as it is on the benches of a greenhouse, but with a conscientious man and a good hose the watering does not loom up as an obstacle to this method of culture.

All the numerous species and varieties of peris that are useful in the trade list, will grow admirably in the frames, and that standby for the fern dish, Aspidium tsussimense, will make more progress in the frames than in the greenhouse. The Cyrtomiums, or "Holly ferns" are also happier outdoors for the summer, where they will make that short-stemmed growth with dark green foliage of heavy texture, that appeals so strongly to the decorator. That this particularly useful fern enjoys the conditions of the great outdoors is not to be wondered at when we remember that in many portions of Europe, and also in parts of our own country, Cyrtomium falcatum is much planted in the hardy fern garden, and that C. Rochfordianum is simply an improved form of the above.

Young stock of the common adiantums, for example, A. cuneatum, and those of the decorum type, to which group A. hybridum and A. Croweanum belong, are also well-suited in the frame for the summer.

The nephrolepis may also be given outdoor treatment with good results, but with the larger sized plants, one cannot so readily care for them in the ordinary frame, and in addition to this, there may be some available bench room that needs filling for the warm season, and as the nephrolepis form a quick crop for fall sales, these ferns are commonly doubled up in 5-inch or 6-inch pots and hurried along in the greenhouse. Many and various have been the sports from Nephrolepis exaltata, but for the present, at least, N. Scottii and N. Teddy, Jr., seem among the most useful, both being good house plants, and of sufficiently compact growth to make a shapely specimen in a 6-inch pot.

The cristate and lacinate forms of the nephrolepis, and of these there have been many introduced, are very beautiful, when well grown, but usually do not stand up so well as the Scottii type in the dwelling, and in consequence have enjoyed but a fleeting favor among the trade generally.

The ciobotiums also need a great abundance of air during the summer, for while these lovely ferns may be grown very rapidly under favorable conditions in the greenhouse, yet the growth is likely to be very soft and not nearly so well adapted for the florist's window as the plants that occupy a

ORCHID NOTES.

Summer Varieties and Winter Plannings

As the summer season advances, the supply of orchid blooms dwindles. Cattleya gigas and C. Gaskelliana of the labiata section, with C. Harrisonia, being the most prominent, and to have these to perfection a well ventilated house with moderate shading is very necessary. Lealia purpurata and L. tenebrosa, when well grown, stand out boldly when used as cut flowers. These and the numerous Laeliocattleya hybrids, which are becoming quite plentiful, are good for summer work. L. C. Fascinator (C. Schroederæ + L. purpurata), L. C. Canhamiana (L. purpurata + C. Mossiae), L. C. Eudora (L. purpurata + C. Mendelii) and L. C. luminosa (L. tenebrosa + C. aurea) are all fine for the hot weather, when used with Epidendrum radicans and the long trailing spikes of Oncidium Wentworthianum (yellow) and its light flowered companion, O. leucochilum. Amongst a batch of Vanda cerulea there can always be cut a few spikes during the hot summer months. The blue color of this orchid and a few other botanical varieties can always be used cess of the plants imported? The depreciation, or deterioration, of so many orchids all over the country from year to year proves that orchid growing is far from perfect. Take the plants shown at the annual flowers shows, and note how very few specimens come back in good shape the second or third time. It is safe to say newly imported stock always predominates, and when this supply is cut at the source how long will the orchid business last, profitably? Even now the 50 per cent coal allowance means considerable crowding in, for better or worse. Yet, if the head grower will only become more observant and trust less to assistants, the results may be better than ever before.

In the first place, it is advisable for every man in charge of a collection of commercial orchids to get well acquainted with atmospheric conditions of the locality he sojourns in; the high and dry western districts want more care in ventilating than the low eastern sections, for if treated the same in this respect one might get too much ventilation and the other not enough. It is useless to try to write down instructions for some low lying district, as in the past few months the humidity has been 100 several times; the moisture has been sufficient to keep most orchids going without any water for as much as 10 days. Yet a change may come, and a soaking of water is needed every three days. A safe way is to have a few ferns growing in pots in any orchid house, and about every third time these ferns dry out the orchids will need a soak too.

Shading is a very important thing in growing orchids; too much is as bad as not enough. In the first place, the plants remain wet too long after each watering, and in the second the plants dry so quickly that they take little good out of each watering. Some shade that does not get washed off with each heavy rainstorm is what is wanted. The perfect shade for orchids has not been found. The roller blind arrangements, whether made of wood slats or canvas, are a nuisance. They are both expensive to make and there is a great waste of time in operating them; and, now that help is scarce, there is no gain in using them anyway when the plants will do just as well and in most cases flower better.

J. J. Beneke.
Vice-President St. Louis Florists' Club.

to advantage in any decorations that may have to be done at this season.

The flowers from the above named will come from now on, but preparation for the coming winter is what the florist or orchid grower should now attend to. This, indeed, in many cases will be found difficult, owing to unrest caused by the war, but to the genuine orchid grower it may prove a blessing, as there appear to be indications of the big importations of orchids from their natural haunts being entirely cut off for some years to come, thus weeding out automatically the orchid merchants from the orchid growers; for truly the reputations of many of the former have been gained purely from the continuous importations consigned to this country for years past. Also, the shortage of labor will no doubt revolutionize the methods that have for years been thought necessary to ameliorate, or foster, the raising of orchids. The question is: Have all the methods generally followed been best for the suclath shelter for three or four months of the warm season. But these ferns must be given plenty of space, and should also be elevated above the ground in order to keep their fronds clean, for once the fronds become muddy, it is not an easy matter to clean them, owing to the hairy surface of the leaves.

Cibotium Scheidei is really a remarkable fern, in the fact that it will stand so much exposure to wind and comparative dryness without injury, whereas Dicksonia antarctica is a hardier tree fern in regard to temperature, and yet if allowed to get as dry as the Cibotium, the Dicksonia would lose all its foliage.

It would seem as though there is an opening for the sale of a greater quantity of hardy ferns for outdoor planting, for there are multitudes of homes in our country that have partially shaded corners that would be far more satisfactory with a permanent planting of hardy ferns than they are now with some unhappy flowering plants for a brief period in the year, and nothing else for the remainder of the seasons. But to bring such matters before the public in a manner to impress them, the florist must give an object lesson in the form of a hardy fern garden somewhere on his own grounds, and while these object lessons cost money to inaugurate, yet it would doubtless prove to be money well spent.

A well made catalogue is undoubtedly a business getter, but a well arranged fern garden would also reach some people, and be even more convincing.

PETERIS.

Nitrogen Supply Increased.

The largest experimental plant in the United States for the manufacture of fixed nitrogen from the air, with the exception of the ones now being constructed for the war department, is in operation at the department of agriculture experiment farm, Arlington, Va. At this plant the nitrogen from the air is combined with hydrogen to form ammonia which can be used in the manufacture of explosives and fertilizer.

GARDEN VIEW AND PONDS, MISSOURI BOTANICAL GARDEN, ST. LOUIS.

It is well to consider what a lot of unnecessary work has been thought needful in the past in orchid houses. A lot of this labor has been handed down from one to the other; few have stopped to think if a lot of this was of any benefit until a time comes, like the present, when one man has to do what two or three men used to do. A system worked out for ventilating and watering by each grower would do away with a lot of unnecessary damping and syringing daily. No harm can be done to cattleyas if they are allowed to become fairly dry before they are watered. Then give a good supply, until the water trickles through the hole cut in the bottom of the pot. In watering this way, enough water gets on the benches and floor of the houses to last two or three days without further attention, with the exception of ventilating.

As Cattleya gigas, C. Mossii, C. Mendeli and C. Gaskelliana pass out of flower, they need examining to find out if any require repotting, and with any that need this operation take away the old back bulbs and tear away the old potting material (for it is unwise to put any cattleya in a new pot and leave the old roots and their soil undisturbed). Use a good grade of peat, and pot each plant firmly, but do not give water for three days—then sparingly until well rooted.

Dendrobium Phalaenopsis is now growing rapidly and does well in the sunniest spot in the cattleya house. It will require water in abundance until the flowers open. All other dendrobiums are growing fast; in fact, any orchid that is making good bulbs should never be allowed to lack water, but it is not a good plan to keep them in a sodden state all the time. Make a practice of letting each batch of plants become fairly dry before repeating. It is well to note the extra hours of daylight and see that the houses are not closed too early; leaving a little ventilation open all night is a plan that can safely be followed.

C. Y. PRIDE.

Missouri Botanical Garden.

From a recent address on the Missouri Botanical Garden, St. Louis, by Dr. George T. Moore, director, we take the following:

"The cultivation of plants for their healing qualities by the monks of the middle ages is generally supposed to have been the forerunner of the modern botanical garden, although these mediæval gardens doubtless had their origin in others of greater antiquity. In a recent treatise on embroidery and lace by a Frenchman, the ingenious theory is advanced that the idea of a botanical garden originated during the sixteenth century in France, when the demand for flowers and fruits to serve as patterns for the designing of brocades caused the horticulturist, Gene Robin, to open a little garden, with conservatories in which he cultivated strange and little known varieties. This proved to be such a success that Henry IV purchased the establishment and under the name of 'The Garden of the King,' it became crown property. In 1626 the learned Guy de Brosse suggested that medical students might study these plants without interfering with the designers of embroidery and tapestry. Hence the first Jardin des Plantes, with its natural history museum, came into existence. This institution served so many excellent purposes that other countries rapidly attempted to duplicate it—the author concluding with the naive statement, 'Who would have thought it possible for embroidery thus to come to the aid of science?'

"Unfortunately for this notion as to the origin of botanical gardens, the Jardin des Plantes was founded by Louis XIII in 1610 and although the æsthetic study of plants and of flowers must undoubtedly have appealed to those who visited the garden, just as it does today, it seems quite certain that such collections of living plants were primarily brought together because of their real or supposed medicinal value.

"The function of a botanical garden as an aid to scientific teaching and research did not develop much, if at all, prior to the middle of the seventeenth century, when those at Bologna, Montpellier, Leiden, Paris and Upsala became more or less noteworthy in this respect. The taste for ornamental and decorative plants had meanwhile slowly been gaining ground, as well as the desire to cultivate rare and unusual species. Many persons of wealth and influence, during the eighteenth century, became, through the employment of men skilled in botany and horticulture, generous patrons of science. The world was searched for new and rare plants which were brought to Europe for cultivation and magnificent volumes describing these collections were published. The older gardens were essentially private institutions, but later many of the existing establishments, with an increasing number of new ones, were opened to the public, either without charge or for a small admission fee.

"The modern botanical garden has a number of functions which did not appear simultaneously, but were a matter of gradual development. Beginning with the utilitarian idea, there were added the æsthetic, the scientific and the educational, using these words in the broadest sense. Depending largely upon local conditions, these functions have been given different degrees of prominence, some gardens being essentially æsthetic, some mainly scientific, and others, combining in about equal proportions all of the elements mentioned. Certainly the modern tendency is to make the botanical garden something more than a 'museum of living plants' which, however necessary, is to a large degree uninteresting and lacking in its appeal to the public.

"Most botanical gardens in this country are either connected with some institution of learning, or maintained wholly or in part by the municipality. In this respect the Missouri botanical garden is unique, since it has no connection whatsoever with the city, paying taxes on all its revenue-producing property and only indirectly being associated with Washington University, through the graduate school of botany.

"The garden as it now exists is the development of the private garden of Henry Shaw, who came to this country from England in 1818 and soon after settled in St. Louis. Acquiring a fortune within about 20 years, Mr. Shaw devoted the larger part of the remaining 50 years of his life to the enlargement and management of this garden, which, although freely opened to the public, remained his private property until his death. Seeking the advice of such men as Dr. George Engelmann, Sir William and Sir Joseph Hooker, and Professor Asa Gray, Mr. Shaw, in a will, remarkable for its breadth and foresightedness, left to a self-perpetuating board of trustees the administration of his property and, through a director, the management of the garden which he himself designated as the Missouri botanical garden.

"It may truly be said that practically all the various aspects of the work of this garden at the present time, whether they be scientific, educational, or æsthetic, were conceived by Mr. Shaw and provided for in a very definite manner by his will. As funds have become available, various aspects of the work have been enlarged and it is possible that in some respects the development has proceeded further than Mr. Shaw imagined possible, but the germ of the idea may be found in his will and had he lived to the present time it seems more than likely that his own management would have produced practically the institution as it now exists.

"The garden comprises about 125 acres in the heart of the city, about 60 acres of which are as yet unimproved. It is in no sense a part of the park system, being enclosed within a stone wall or fence, and pleasure vehicles are not admitted. In addition to the ordinary landscape treatment of such a garden, including the usual plantations of trees, hardy shrubs, and flower beds, there are also special outdoor collections comprising such features as the so-called 'North American tract' in which are included a systematic arrangement of a considerable number of plants hardy in the vicinity of St. Louis; a small arboretum; a medicinal garden; a large Italian garden, laid out on strictly formal lines; a so-called 'Linnean garden,' which takes its name from one of the older greenhouses, called by Mr. Shaw the 'Linnean house,' and which because it is bounded on three sides by a wall, is patterned after some of the English gardens; a rose garden; an economic garden, in which are displayed special collections of useful plants, such as rice, peanuts, tobacco, sugar cane, cotton, farm crops of various sorts, examples of vines, hedge plants, annuals and perennials suitable for growing in the vicinity of St. Louis; bee plants, herbs, small fruits and anything which can serve as a demonstration to the public of what may be accomplished in the growing of useful and ornamental plants.

"During the last few years about 100,000 square feet of display greenhouses have been added, within which have been maintained permanent collections of palms, economic plants, ferns, desert plants, cyads, orchids, etc.

"In addition to the outdoor and indoor collection of plants, the garden maintains one of the best botanical libraries and herbariums in the United States, and these two features serve as most important adjuncts to the Shaw School of Botany which, with adequate laboratory facilities, devotes its principal endeavor to the training of graduate students in botany, these students receiving their master's or doctor's degree from Washington University. This school, although largely "In addition to the graduate students, a school for gardeners is maintained, which, because of the unique opportunities available, and the special character of the work, is perhaps not to be equaled elsewhere in this country. Young men and women who have received a high school training or its equivalent are admitted on examination and devote three years, of 12 months each, to the practical and theoretical aspects of landscape designing, floriculture, horticulture, engineering, etc. The courses include such subjects as diseases of plants, entomology, soils, mechanical and freehand drawing, plant breeding, general and systematic botany, as well as the various more strictly horticultural subjects. The morning of each day is spent in practical work, both indoors and out, and by the end of the third year the student has had an opportunity to become personally acquainted with the definite growing methods and management of such groups of greenhouse plants as orchids, palms, tropical economic plants, desert plants, etc., as well as the actual propagation, growing and care of practically every sort of plant which can be grown out of doors in St. Louis.

"While the plan and conduct of such a garden is essentially scientific, differing from most private estates or parks, the public apparently appreciates the efforts being made since the attendance is constantly increasing. It has been amply demonstrated that a gar-maintained by the funds of the garden is a department of Washington University. A small experimental greenhouse, near the laboratory, provides the necessary working space for the graduate students. Under this greenhouse there are cellars, devoted to the experimental side of mushroom growing, as well as a large pit in which investigations concerned with the rotting and destruction of timber are carried on.

"The small museum and library building, erected by the founder, is now devoted to a remarkably fine collection of specimens illustrating the diseases of wood, and from time to time exhibitions of special interest are shown here.

den of this character will furnish recreation and pleasure to thousands who are not seeking merely for amusement, and every effort is made to have the collections, in so far as possible, informational if not instructive. Naturally, such a place must be attractive and the mere accumulation of numbers of botanical species, crowded together, will not answer the purpose. By maintaining floral displays of plants which are either little known, or because of the wealth of bloom and color cannot be seen elsewhere, and by showing rare tropical plants which, because of their fruit or use in commerce, are known to the average individual, as well as the commoner things which are frequently read about but seldom seen, the garden is able to make a definite appeal to many. Such an institution, with the various enterprises referred to, is naturally expensive to maintain and it is impossible to do all in any one department that might be desirable. However, it is believed that the income will eventually be sufficient to support the various projects now under way and that ultimately the Missouri botanical garden will become an even greater monument to the greatest patron of botany and horticulture that this country has ever known.

Burbank's Superwheat.

If Luther Burbank has developed a "superwheat," that will be, after a fashion, an answer to the "super-canon" of the Germans, the news of his achievement is good and important news. But in spite of all that Mr. Burbank has done in the way of improving trees and lesser plants, announcements made by him are not received by everybody as promising a revolution in any domain of agriculture. That he is a man of genius in his own line is admitted with only here and there a murmur of dissent, but that is largely because, on the one hand, he does not follow the methods of orthodox science in making his experiments, and, on the other, because the commercial exploitation of his discoveries has not always been such as to commend itself to the part of the public attentive to such matters.

In criticism of Mr. Burbank personally, however, nobody has a word to say, and it may very well be that he has evolved a strain of wheat better than any hitherto known. To increase the yield and quality of this most precious of all the cereals would be a benefit to the world to which few, indeed, would be comparable in value. The present record of the United States as a wheat grower is wonderful as regards quantity, but our average production per acre is not at all creditable either to our intelligence or our skill. Our inferiority has been due to the abundance, until recently, of our new and cheap land. Of that we have no more, and better methods are sought of necessity.—N. Y. Times.

Why S. A. F. Conventions are Essential.

Conventions are the focused eyes of business. Never have the constructive agencies of the nation been called upon for such duty of patriotism and economic service as now, because of the war. Probably no other broadly constructive force eclipses in its potentialities for good that great American institution—the business convention. Persons who never really thought deeply in their lives before about conditions confronting the flower industry have begun to think now, as a result of the things the war has brought home to them.

We must today think in masses, and this naturally brings larger scope of reason and clearer vision. If the Society of American Florists were not to keep up its end in the gigantic pace that is being set us by the progressive elements in business, politics, etc., in the world at large, we must see ourselves left hopelessly.

Conventions are fundamentally assemblages of men brought together to consider questions peculiar to their lines of endeavor. They discuss these things to find out just what a man in the same line, but with a different pair of eyes, has seen. They attack their problems; they discuss possibilities; they present abstract propositions which are the forerunners to realized things they must first conceive in the abstract. Above all, they discuss their activities with a view to bettering their business and their conditions as business men.

Conventions in wartimes such as these are vitally essential. It will take all of the best brains in every line of peaceful endeavor, working at their top capacity, to see ahead and arrange to cope with the revolutionized conditions that will follow the war. For reasons as stated above, it is essential that the Society of American Florists' convention be held and that essential questions be discussed. It is questionable whether it would be wise to eliminate business counsel, curtailing commercial activity and slowing up the rapid circulation of money, thereby reducing the ability of each dollar to do the maximum of work.

Secretary Ladies' Society of American Florists.

As stated above, we must think in masses; think clearly and think with a vision, and this can be most easily done for our particular line of endeavor at the coming convention.

THE ROSE.

Roses Without Heat.

Roses that will produce in quantity, flowers that are always in demand at top market prices, that require practically no coal, in fact, can be grown entirely without this expensive material, are or should be in high favor in these troubled times. Such a rose is the Victoria, formerly Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, now rechristened. Before the advent of Bride and White Killarney, this was the standard white variety of commerce, although it was always difficult to manage when flowers were wanted in the dull, winter months. For this reason, and the fact that it bruises very easily, making it a difficult rose to ship, it was given up by many growers.

Chas. F. Knorr & Bro. of Lawndale, Philadelphia, Pa., who have an envious reputation as growers of superb cut roses, have long made a specialty of the Victoria for the summer market. Their oldest stock has been planted for 16 years and is still producing from five to six crops per season, which generally begins with Easter, running well up into November, and some have been brought in as late as Christmas. The average is however, five crops. Their plants are all in ground beds, raised about one foot above the paths; these are dried off in late November and receive no more water until started up in March in the first house for the Easter crop. About 3,200 plants are grown, divided into four houses. Through the winter, they aim to keep the temperature a little above freezing, although the past winter, when their coal ran out, the houses went down to 16° and the plants appeared none the worse for it.

Before starting, the bushes, which for the most part have held their leaves, are cut back to about 18 inches and the loose mulch or old manure from the top dressings is scraped off down to the hard soil. The beds are then given a light watering to soften the soil and a six-inch mulch of fresh manure is applied and settled with a good, thorough watering to wash it in. The fresh manure does not hurt, as there are no leaves or foliage to burn. A little heat is given at this time to get them going, but except for an early Easter they do not require much; just a little to dry up the dampness or keep down mildew. Natural heat is much better than the artificial. This year on account of the scarcity of coal, they did not make Easter, the first flowers being cut in May. Proper ventilation is important; raised early in the morning, it is partially shut off at 5 p. m., and closed finally about 6 p. m. Even in the hottest days of summer, the ventilators are never left open all night. At times in summer, the inside temperature rises to 110°. During these periods, they syringe the roses over the top and also wet the roof, which will drop the glass 10 to 12 degrees.

The first crop is generally the best, although they get very fine flowers in the fall. Their oldest house was cut back last year to within six inches of the ground. The plants were later than the others in starting, but came in all right later, producing the best stock on the place in the fall. As they grow older, the plants appear to renew themselves, the old bearing wood dying as strong new shoots from the bottom take their place. Much of the blind wood that comes with every growth will break again from the first strong eye near the end of the shoot and produce good flowers before the next crop is ready. The crops are produced in from five to six weeks. A top dressing of manure is given after each second crop is taken. A house of 1,500 plants had cut or produced 50,000 flowers last year. They are believed to pay quite as well as tea roses, as they take practically no coal, and there is nearly always a good demand, other roses being so poor for the most part of their season. The beds look wonderfully well, those in full crop showing plenty of fine buds with stems 18 to 24 inches in length.

At one time, this firm had quite a trade in rooted cuttings or young plants in 2½-inch pots. Cuttings were taken in November, as then the wood was hard and rooted easily. But few growers make a specialty of this variety, which Mr. Knorr says is unquestionably the best white rose for summer, and if well grown and carefully handled, would find a demand at good prices in any market.

In a range of glass 50x150 feet, filled last winter with Killarneys which were frozen out, beets were planted about February 10. The rows were 12 inches apart, between which were planted radishes. The radishes were pulled first in six or seven weeks. The beets were ready May 10. The radishes sold first at five cents, then four and three and one-half cents, per bunch of 10. The beets brought 10 cents per bunch of six. There was not much money in it, but as scarcely any artificial heat was necessary, it was something to help make up the loss.

Unless there is a very careful selection and succession of crops, Mr. Knorr thinks most greenhouse men would find vegetables a poor substitute for flowers, at least from a money standpoint.

Larkspur Specialist.

William Swayne, Kennett Square, Pa., makes a specialty of Larkspur Belladonna. The clumps are stored in a frame and brought into the houses to make successive crops. They are planted on raised benches. Radishes between the rows are a catch crop before the larkspur shades the ground. The first larkspur is now being cut. The stock looks very promising, being covered with spikes which will soon be ready to cut freely. A house of callas was a sight. These are grown in six-inch pots set close together on low, raised benches and plunged in cinders. As they get root bound, a top dressing of cow manure gives a needed stimulant. Three hundred and fifty flowers had been cut the day before the photograph was taken. The average for the season is seven flowers to a plant. Houses of mimigonette, Double White daisies, and pansies were interesting.

FLORISTS' PALMS.

Reducing Temperatures.

The combination of two evils, namely, shortage of coal and a period of excessively cold weather at the same time, made last winter a memorable one to many florists, and in some cases the situation was too powerful for the grower to combat, and in consequence some establishments were closed entirely, while others were compelled to limit the area heated or reduce the average temperature maintained in the houses.

The latter plan, that is, a reduction of temperature, may be carried out to a reasonable degree in the palm houses without serious injury to the stock. December and January, especially,

Ensign Carl Cropp.

Son of Carl Cropp Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago

cover a comparatively dormant period in the life of these plants and thus makes it easier to lower the temperature somewhat without any serious loss.

During normal times, when coal is plentiful and the season ordinarily sunshiny, one may overcome this tendency to cease active growth with some species of palms, and by maintaining a rather high temperature and moist atmosphere may induce some growth of both roots and tops, but at such a time as this fuel conservation demands that the palm grower, in common with his brothers in other lines of the business, shall sacrifice some of the advantages of abundant heat and make less effort to force growth in the winter. Then the question arises as to how much reduction in temperature may safely be made without serious injury to the plants, and this reduction must take into consideration the varied needs of different species.

The kentias, both Forsteriana and Belmoreana, will endure, for a reasonable time, a night temperature of 45° to 50°, but when these palms are submitted to such a temperature as this it is especially necessary that watering and syringing shall not be overdone and shall be finished as early in the day as possible, in order to have the foliage dry before night. Lantana borbonica will also bear a night temperature of 45°, but at such a temperature the foliage will lose color and the plants will get very hard.

Phoenix Roebelinii and other members of that family will bear a reasonable reduction in temperature—for example, 48° to 50° at night, and somewhat lower than that if the plants are watered sparingly. Cocos Weddelliana is more impatient of low temperature than the various trade palms referred to above and is liable to lose its roots and get the yellows if given a lower temperature than 58° to 60° at night for any length of time. And this peculiarity of heat loving seeds also to be natural to the seeds of the cocos, for a severe chill, without actual freezing, will affect the germinative power of such seeds in quite a marked degree.

Areca lutescens is also a warm-house subject and will not bear a lower temperature than 50° at night with a very good grace, and will keep in better color and much more active condition at 58° to 60°. The livistonas, both L. rotundifolia and L. altissima, may also be counted among the tender subjects, and particularly so while in very young plants.

Chamaerops and coryphas are quite cool house subjects and may be kept in good condition during the winter in a night temperature of 45°, but neither of these species is used very largely among the trade in this country.

As indicated already, these various palms are not likely to make growth under the conditions suggested, but that they may be safely kept through the winter at about such temperatures, or even lower for a short time, has frequently been proved, and as the weather improves toward spring these semi-dormant plants will again become active and soon progress in size.

Of the two kentias, K. Belmoreana is the most susceptible to cold, and if one can so arrange it, it is advisable to place this species in the warmer portion of the house; but care in watering is one of the essentials to success when keeping the plants cold, for they are less likely to get a serious check in low temperatures if the roots are slightly dry.

Changing the Case.

As far as possible the flowers in the case should all be looked over in the late afternoon or evening hours of the day. The busiest time in a flower store is generally the early morning. Cleaning up the stock and changing the water in the jars is to say the least a mussy job and should not have to interfere with the work on the early orders. If gotten out of the way the night before and fresh jars of water made ready for the next day's stock, the store is clean and inviting for the early customer and all help is available for the work in hand, or rush orders that often come in over the phone.

Fuel Oil for Steam Boilers.

BY W. H. CULP.

When the price of coal is mounting higher day by day, the rapidly increasing use of petroleum as a substitute fuel wins wider attention than ever before. The opening up of oil fields in a large percentage of states in the Union has made this new fuel more accessible and therefore cheaper. It has been used in place of coal for a number of years in the proximity of extensive oil fields. Now it is used for heating purposes in a constantly widening area, as familiarity with its nature and use spreads. Florists in some states have used it to heat their greenhouses for some years. Others who have not experimented with it will be glad to know how advantageous would be its use to them in the face of the soaring coal prices.

I will state at the outset that for hot-water heating fuel oil is not practicable unless the plant is sufficiently large to justify the installation of a small auxiliary steam boiler to supply the steam necessary for the operation of the burners. Hence in this article I shall treat the problem as applied to steam heating plants exclusively.

At least 25 or 30 pounds of steam pressure on the boiler is necessary for the successful operation of a fuel oil burner. A greater pressure is better, and where a reducing pressure valve can be used to step down the pressure in the heating mains, and the boiler is sufficiently sound to carry it easily, a pressure of 50 pounds will be found most efficient.

COMPARED WITH COAL.

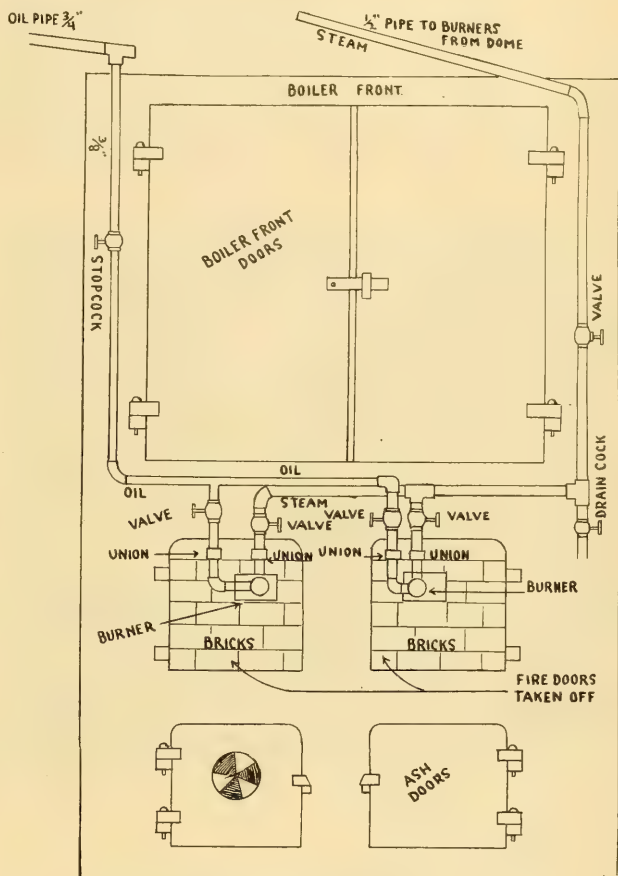

In comparing fuel oil with coal for economy, calculations can be based upon about three barrels of oil to one ton of good soft coal in heat units, with the following additional points in favor of fuel oil:

First, steadiness of fire and intensity of heat, giving greater capacity from the same boiler. In our case, we have two boilers. If coal is used, the fireman must start the second boiler when the outside temperature falls below 20 degrees, requiring extra coal to get it going. With fuel oil, the first boiler carries the heat until the temperature outside drops to zero. The saving in fuel required to start the second boiler is important in itself.

Second, fuel consumption can be stopped when steam is shut off, or shortly before, and by closing chimney and air dampers closely and shutting off steam at 10 pounds, the boiler pressure will usually be sufficient to start the fire when needed in the afternoon. Ten pounds of steam will start the fire if care is used and it is watched until the pressure reaches 25 or 30 pounds, which it will do much more quickly than with coal—another saving in fuel and time. Third, the labor of firing is greatly reduced. All that is required is attention to the pressure gauge, keeping the feed tank pumped full, and occasionally regulating the burners to hold steam at proper mark, or to free from clogging, sometimes caused by a clot of dirt in the oil, which is rare, or some water in the oil getting to the burners. This allows the night man time for whatever work that can be arranged convenient to the boiler room.

EXPENSE OF EQUIPMENT.

The cost of equipment need not be heavy. The burners and boiler room equipment of feed tank, pump, piping, furnace firebrick and labor should fall well within $25. If the florist does the work himself the cost will be even less.

The storage tank is rather expensive. If it is placed outdoors, the oil is likely to give trouble by becoming so cold that it jellies and will not run. We avoid both these obstacles by a storage cistern of concrete. If you have a railroad switch, and receive oil in carloads, the cistern or cisterns should have a capacity of one and one-half or two carloads. If your fuel has to be hauled to you, a cistern somewhat smaller will do, unless a storage capacity is desired in order to take advantage of quantity prices or special quotations.

The most convenient form for this cistern is square or rectangular, of concrete walls and bottom four inches thick, with ceiling joists bedded in the side walls and covered with flooring. The digging should be done carefully, so as to give good backing to the concrete walls. The concrete should be pretty strong, and the whole job, bottom and sides, should be handled continuously—not allowed to stand partly done over night—to avoid cracks and leakage.

As soon as the form-boards can be removed, the walls should be well brushed over with a thick, cream-like mixture of pure cement and water. A whitewash brush can be used. This coating will lessen the porosity of the concrete, and will be most effectual if applied while the concrete is still green. Several days later, after the walls are fairly dry, give a coat of a solution of a bar of strong laundry soap in about eight quarts of boiling water. A good brushing over of walls and bottom with this will prevent loss of oil through seepage.

After the concrete has set hard enough so that it will not be damaged by the jar of hammering, the cover should be nailed to the joists. The cover should fit close down on wall and be dirt-proof. A trap-door of good size and carefully fitted should be provided, and a pipe for filling—3-inch is a good size—should be let through the cover. A 2-inch pipe, extending almost to the bottom and leading to the boiler-room, should be provided for filling the feed tank. Care should be used to keep the cistern absolutely clean before putting in the oil, for even a splinter will make trouble when it reaches the valves at the burner.

FEED TANK FOR BURNERS.

The feed tank should be set up in the boiler room or potting shed where it is warm—not much closer than 10 feet from the boilers, but not too far away. It should be placed five feet or more above the burners.

The capacity may vary; 100 to 120 gallons is good. Our tank is galvanized iron, 30 inches in diameter by 44 inches high, holding the equivalent of about one ton of coal. The top is covered except for an opening about eight inches in diameter, into which the 2-inch pipe from the filling pump is turned. The cover for this opening is trimmed to accommodate this pipe and also a cord attached to a light float in the tank, which passes over a pulley to an indicator which moves up and down on the face of a gauge outside the tank, thus showing the height of oil in the tank.

We use a common thresher's tank-wagon pump, which is cheap, easily worked by hand and fully adequate. We recommend that the tank be refilled when the indicator shows it to be one-third or less full. If this is done, the sediment in the bottom of the tank is not likely to be stirred up, and in case the oil in the cistern is cooler than that in the tank, the change in thickness will not affect its flow through the burner valves.

The feed pipe from tank to burners may connect on either the bottom or the side. If attached at the bottom, it should be screwed through the opening until it projects upward nearly an inch from the inner surface of the tank. If screwed through the side, it should be connected at a similar distance from the bottom of the tank. For the supply of two to four burners, this pipe should be $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch. In addition to the outlet for the feed pipe, there should be another small opening as close to the bottom of the tank as possible. This should be fitted with a $\frac{1}{4}$ or $\frac{3}{8}$ -inch pet or drain cock, and is for draining away water that is always present in small quantities, and which settles in the bottom of the tank under the oil. This cock permits the removal of the water before enough accumulates to get into the burner feed pipe and cause trouble.

The feed pipe from tank to burner should be $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch and carry overhead with a slight fall to the front of the boiler, where it should end in a tee with an opening for a $\frac{3}{8}$ -inch vertical pipe leading down to the burners. This vertical pipe should have a stop cock at about the middle of its length or at a convenient point for frequent use. This stop cock should always be closed, as well as the valves at the burners, when the fire is shut off.

THE BURNER.

The burner consists of a section of 1-inch pipe about 20 inches long for steam, inside of which is a $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch pipe for the oil, and is made as follows:

Take the piece of 1-inch pipe and cut a thread on each end. Provide a cap for one end, and in the center of this cap drill a whole that will just let the $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch pipe through. About six inches from the end to be capped, drill three small holes equidistant on the circumference of the 1-inch pipe. These should be of proper size to be threaded for small stove bolts, which are to be used as set-screws to center the $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch pipe and hold it true in the hole in the cap.

For the other end of the 1-inch pipe, provide a tee with $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch pipe opening on the side and a bushing reducing one inch to one-quarter inch.

On one end of a section of $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch pipe an inch or more longer than the 1-inch pipe already prepared, including tee and bushing, cut a long thread, so that when screwed through the bushing from the inside of the tee, the pipe will project out far enough for an elbow to be screwed onto it. After the tee and bushing and section of $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch pipe have been set up together slip the 1-inch pipe over the $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch pipe and screw it temporarily into the tee to get the exact length of the $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch pipe, which should be cut off close to where it comes through the cap on the 1-inch pipe.

The inner edge of the small pipe should be made smooth, and the outer edge filed down evenly, so that a thin knife point can easily pass all around the pipe when it is properly centered in the hole in the cap. If this orifice is too large, too much steam will be sent into the fire, deadening the latter, as well as wasting steam.

PREPARING THE FIREBOX.

In the common type of horizontal tubular boiler, with brick setting and firebox, I would set a burner in each of the fire doors. Although one burner is usually all that is used at one time, the other, being already set, is handy if the first needs clearing or cleaning.

First, cover the grate with some old pieces of sheet iron, except an area about six or eight inches square at the front edge near each door, which affords air to the fire. On this grate covering lay a row of firebricks across the grates about two feet from the dead plate or front ends of the grate bars. After this course of brick is laid, fill behind them, back to the fire wall with fine coal ashes and cinders three or four inches purpose of the wall is to hold the flame steady and spread it to fill the firebox.

Next, cover the rest of the grate in front of the lattice wall with ashes and cinders, except the openings left in the sheet iron for air. Pile upon this covering next to the lattice wall coarse cinders and broken firebrick about six or eight inches high and eighteen inches wide, extending toward the fire doors about twelve inches. This pile should be against the center of the lattice wall. The lower edge of the flame will strike against it, making it almost white hot. Its intense heat instantly vaporizes any stray drops or sprays of oil that may occasionally fly from the burner tip, and causes more perfect burning of the fuel.

The door openings are bricked up. The first three courses may be laid straight across the opening. In the fourth course a half brick should be omitted, to provide an opening through which to set the burner. This opening should be at the inside edge of the door, so that the burner may be nearly under the center of the boiler. These openings are also for observation of the fire, and should be covered with small sliding plates of sheet iron or tin, either clamped to the burner pipe or hinged on a pin at one corner for convenient use.

SETTING THE BURNER.

The steam supply pipe should be $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch for a fifty horsepower boiler, and not less than $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch in any case. It should come direct from the dome, and not from any pipe line leading from the boiler for any other purpose. It should turn down at the side of the boiler front, and have a globe valve at some convenient point, which should always be closed, in addition to burner valves, when fire is shut off. The pipe should come down to a point about on a level with the tops of the fire door openings, and end in a tee with side deep, to protect the sheet iron and grates from heat and to check undesirable air drafts upon this part of the fire.

On top of the row of firebrick across the grate, build a lattice wall of firebrick, lapping the ends about one and one-half inches. This lattice wall should extend entirely across the firebox and up to a point about twelve inches from the under side of the boiler. It requires no mortar. The opening towards the fire doors, and with a short piece of pipe and pet cock in lower end of tee. Through the pet cock the steam pipe is drained each time before steam is turned into burner, thus preventing the spraying of considerable water into the firebox, which would be dangerous to the hot lining and brick walls.

Out of the side opening in the tee head, lead a pipe across the front of the boiler, just above the fire door openings, reducing to $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch for the first burner and continuing $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch to second burner. Each of these should have a valve for regulating the steam volume to each burner, and a union between valve and burner. The oil pipe connections are made in the same way, the $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch pipe being reduced to $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch for each burner, and valve and union employed on each burner.

The oil pipe connections should each have an extra nipple and elbow, to give it a swing joint construction and so relieve strain likely to exist otherwise because of too rigid pipe lines.

The burner should be set so that it lies near or in the inside corner of the opening left for it in the brickwork, and should point slightly towards the center line under the boiler. It should run in nearly level, never pointing upwards. As a rule only one burner will be fired at a time, and set in this way, the flame will be most evenly distributed in the firebox.

FOR FIREBOX BOILERS.

For vertical and horizontal firebox boilers, which do not have firebrick lining, it is well to protect the side of the firebox opposite the door with a lining of firebrick, as the flame from the burner is very intense and should not impinge too directly upon the boiler plate. The location of the lattice wall may have to be slightly changed. In this type of boiler, also, it may be best to extend the burner into the firebox only enough to clear the door opening an inch or two. The idea in all cases is to fill the firebox with flame, without undue intensity at any one spot.

TO OPERATE BURNER.

Of course steam is necessary to operate the burners. This necessitates getting up steam by coal or other means before setting the burner, and it is a difficult job to lay the grate covering and lattice walls in the furnace still hot from the coal fire. But, by using sticks, poker, etc., it can be done.

Where there are two boilers the matter is simple enough. Equip one boiler for oil burning, and put in steam line so that either boiler may be fired from the other's steam. Then fire with coal under the other boiler and steam from it for the oil fire until it will take care of itself. Then the coal fired boiler may be allowed to cool and receive its equipment for oil. Or, if it is an auxiliary boiler, it might be left for coal on emergency occasions.

In starting the burner, after steam is turned on, the pet cock at the tee in bottom of steam line should be left open until live steam comes through. Then close pet cock, and open steam valve on burner. Let run for a moment until burner is hot; then close, and introduce through opening at side of burner a lighted torch of asbestos soaked in oil on the end of a wire. This should be held slightly to one side of the end of the burner, to prevent the steam from blowing it out. Now turn on steam just a little, so that it barely blows from the end of the burner. Next turn on the oil—just a half turn of the valve. The oil should leave the end of the burner mixed with steam in a spray, and ignite like gas. If by accident it blows out the torch, turn off oil and steam—the oil first—and relight torch.

The fire will not burn at its best until the firebox and lattice walls become thoroughly hot, and therefore will require more attention at first.

The chimney draft can be run more closed than for coal. The ash-pit doors can be closed, or almost closed, the opening being determined by test. These doors can be used to regulate the introduction of air through the opening in the grate covering under the ends of the burners. The chimney draft should be strong enough to draw the fire through the flues, and also draw enough air to feed it well, but not so much as to cool the fire.

allow some of their heavy elements to separate and settle to the bottom of the tank, choking its outlets completely and causing no end of trouble until tank is taken down and completely cleaned.

WAR SAVINGS STAMP WINDOW OF HENRY A. DREER, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

When the fire is burning right, the flame is clear and almost white, making no soot and no smoke from the chimney, although in very cold weather there appears a white vapor just away from the chimney top. By watching the chimney, one can tell much as to perfect combustion, and steam and oil valves on the burners and dampers and air inlets should be adjusted until proper results are obtained. With a cool firebox, or in starting up a burner, some smoke will probably be in evidence, but a properly adjusted oil burner should burn about as clean as gas.

When shutting off steam we usually cut off the fire first, and when steam is down to ten or twelve pounds, cut off the steam. We close up all drafts and dampers at boiler, and are sure that all oil and steam valves to burners are also closed, for oil dripping in the firebox might generate enough gas to blow out the boiler front. Bear in mind that ten pounds of steam will start the burner, and if during the day it threatens to drop below that point it will be little trouble to start the burner and run the pressure up to 20 or 25 pounds, which can be done quickly if outlet valves on top of boiler are closed.

Unless the oil from the cistern is too cold to run from feed tank, do not heat it. A steam coil in the feed tank will do this. But heat it barely warm. If made too warm, some fuel oils will Cyclamen Mite.

The cyclamen mite, Tarsonemus pallidus Banks has for some time been classed as a serious floral pest, being widely distributed over the United States. It has attained quite a wide range, being found as far east as Connecticut and as far west as Washington and Oregon. The spread of this pest is no doubt effected by the shipment of seedlings and specimen plants from one locality to another. It often happens that a florist's stock of plants is killed for some reason, by fungus, or other trouble, or perhaps he is tardy in sowing his seed soon enough to setheir part results ordinarily in the appearance of minute brown specks which may appropriately be termed a type of russetting. Owing to the injury caused by the mites, and the continued growth about the damaged parts, the leaves become so shriveled as to give the plant a very dwarfed and shriveled appearance (figure 2). Often the leaves become very much thickened at the points immediately surrounding the injured parts. Where old cyclamen corms are preserved in the greenhouse, one may find mites about the corms throughout most of the year.

curled and distorted as to render them unsalable.

CONTROL.

As most of the species of mites have an extremely primitive respiratory system, it is often difficult to control them satisfactorily by fumigation with various gases; hence sprays must be resorted to as a preventive or control measure. After older cyclamen plants become badly infested, there is not much hope of saving or improving them as the mites are usually concealed under the calyx and even to the innermost flower parts of the buds, so that it is quite impossible to reach them with a spray. When the older plants, particularly cyclamen, have become badly infested it usually will be advisable to burn them and sterilize the soil, but the growers should avoid getting their plants in this condition by exercising preventive measures while the plants are young.

There are certain proprietary volatile liquid-nicotine extracts and non-volatile extracts on the market which may be used on cyclamen in the control of this pest. In experiments carried on against this mite neither the volatile nor the non-volatile nicotine extracts, with the addition of a small quantity of soap (one ounce of soap to a gallon of solution), injured the young or older plants of chrysanthemum, snapdragon or cyclamen, when used at the rate of 1 to 1,000 (or a teaspoonful to a gallon of water). The formula to be used then in the control of cyclamen mite is as follows:

Nicotine (40%) volatile or non-volatile, 1 teaspoonful.
Soap, 1 ounce.
Water, 1 gallon.

The non-volatile nicotine extracts and the volatile nicotine extracts are practically identical so far as killing properties are concerned. The non-volatile nicotine extracts are cheaper and whenever they can be used without injury to the plants, they should be used. The volatile nicotine extracts, however, are preferred by most florists because they can be used for fumigation purposes as well as spraying, and also because they can be used on delicate strains and varieties which might be injured by non-volatile extracts. The addition of soap to the spray is essential because it prevents the formation of small drops which roll off and thus do not penetrate to and thoroughly wet the mites. In other words, soap causes the spray to cover surfaces in the form of a film, giving both better penetration and sticking properties.

CYCLAMEN MITE.

Fig. 1—Three Leaves Showing the Severe Distortion Due to Attack of the Mites.

cure plants for the holiday trade, and to meet this demand, he is forced to purchase seedlings or mature plants from an extensive grower. If the stock of a wholesale florist is infested with this mite, he can readily transmit the pest to other localities, either on the plants or in the soil in which they are shipped. Frequently, the plants are not heavily infested on leaving the wholesale grower, and show no signs of injury, but as the mites multiply very rapidly, under favorable conditions, the plants may become seriously infested a short time after reaching their destination.

The cyclamen mite does not occur in a great variety of host plants, having apparently thus far confined its attack to a few species only. From data on hand, it would seem that the mites have a preference for cyclamen, although they have been reported on chrysanthemums, snapdragons, geraniums, and lobelias.

NATURE OF THE INJURY.

The work of the mite resembles a gall on the older leaves (figure 1) as well as on the young developing leaves. They do not generally attack the older leaves, but work mostly on the young unfolding leaves. The injury noticed on the older leaves is usually done while the leaves are small. The mites apparently shun the light and consequently penetrate to the innermost recesses accessible. Their color and size are such as to render their detection a matter of more than ordinary difficulty. With their styliform mandibles or mouth parts, they probe the tissues, in order, apparently, to imbibe the juices found there. This action on

The writer found that the buds, both leaf and flower, are ordinarily badly infested. The most noticeable effect from the attacks of this mite is the distortion of the leaves which stunts the plants, and the discoloration of the flowers. Flowers, which should have been a soft pink or red, come blotched and streaked (figure 3), and ultimately the blooms wilt and die prematurely. This injury to the flower parts is, of course, mainly noticeable when the flowers are in bloom. Most of the injury is accomplished, however, in the flowerbud stage. The mites in all stages of development may be found between the calyx and corolla, within the corolla and on the stamens and ovary. When the infestation of plants is severe, the plants do not bloom normally and ultimately become so badly

CYCLAMEN MITE.

Fig. 2—(1) Healthy Plant; (2) Slightly Infested; (3) Badly Infested Plant.

The florist should not wait until his plants are fairly grown before making an application of spray, but should start when the plants are quite young. Cyclamen seeds are usually sown in flats in rows 1½ inches apart, about the middle of August with other sowings made, until January, depending on when the flowering plants are desired. In about eight or 10 weeks after the seeds are sown, the plants will be ready to be transplanted into other flats, or into 2½-inch pots, as the case may be. They will now be from 1 to 1½ inches high; this is the time when the first spraying should be made. From then on, the plants should be sprayed with either the volatile or staple nicotine extracts at the rate of a teaspoonful to a gallon of water, with the addition of a small quantity of soap, every 10 days, until the flower buds are well developed and begin to show color. Do not spray after this, as the solution has a tendency to discolor the flowers, and the plants are then far enough along so that the mites cannot do material damage. Where geraniums, snapdragons and chrysanthemums are infested, the leaves do not usually become curled so that fewer sprayings will suffice.

AVOID CROWDING PLANTS IN FLATS.

In transplanting into the flat, do not crowd the plants too much, as it is difficult to get the spray on the developing young leaves, as it is the young growth that should be protected. A good spraying apparatus for this purpose is a compressed-air hand outfit which will give sufficient force.

The mites usually attack cyclamen first during the dry weather. Poor cultivation, insufficient ventilation, and moisture encourage mite attack. Cyclamens particularly need a great deal of attention and care for their proper development. Nevertheless, the mites will attack vigorous plants, and a preventive measure should be employed.

Advertising, Motor Power of Industry.

Relax in your advertising, and your business will eventually slow down to a standstill—and then what? Advertising serves to stimulate the buying public to greater needs and to awaken the desire for certain commodities that perhaps lay dormant in the mind of the prospective purchaser. It is absolutely necessary to carry on our advertising campaign to greater power than ever before, in order to stimulate more demand for flowers, for two reasons: First, because we have made a good start, and, second, because it will be the means of creating more sales for flowers—and that will solve the higher price problem so essential to the growers to overbalance the increased labor cost and 50 per cent deficit in coal distribution.

This is the missing link that must supply the needed energy so essential for the furtherance of our business to a means that must make it profitable. With this is needed the individual efforts of the various florists throughout the country to back it up to get the fruitful results. Unless this is done on a broader scale than ever before, I can see only disaster for a good many of the florists in the near future; while the men who have courage and vision to go through will and must benefit, more now than ever.

It would be most unpatriotic on the part of the florists of this country to even think of curtailing in this direction, as it would lead to still further inroads of depression, and eventually this would of necessity be the means of their not being able to participate in our Liberty Bond, Red Cross and other movements so essential to help win the war.

This problem affords food for serious thought, and the greatest thinking minds in the advertising world have decreed that advertising, now more than ever, will be the motor power that will solve the problem—that of giving us maximum results for energy used. Boys, go to it stronger now than ever, and watch the results!

National Publicity for Flowers.

The chairman of the publicity finance committee arranged with the secretary to make a two days' visit to Chicago last week, for the purpose of making a canvas of the district in the interest of the campaign fund. The visit, necessarily, could not be extended beyond the stipulated time, as the secretary was obliged to return to St. Louis on Saturday evening, convention matters there requiring his attention, consequently it was only possible to call upon a few outside of the wholesale district. As will be seen from the list of subscriptions, the wholesale florists freely contributed. These amounts form an important addition to the list of subscriptions from Chicago already reported. The secretary was also assisted in his canvass by Charles L. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn; Paul Klingensporn, state vice-president for Illinois North, and Frederick Lautenschlager, chairman of the Illinois publicity committee and president of the Chicago Florists' Club, who generously devoted their time to the work.

Our campaign fund now lacks about $7,000 of the amount which we started out to raise—$50,000. Among the thousands of florists who have not yet subscribed, the required amount should be raised in a day or two, at any rate, prior to the convention. The trade papers, all of them, are kind enough to give space to our weekly reports of the work being done by our publicity committees, therefore it would be hard to believe that there can be any florist in the land who is not familiar with our campaign, with its objects and with the benefits already resultant, so far as reported. With the knowledge is has of the effort put forth to make every florist see the great necessity for a campaign such as ours, our promotion bureau is satisfied that anyone who does not know of what we are trying to accomplish never sees a letter carrier and, worse still, never reads a trade paper. Why, then, cannot the few hundred dollars required to complete the fund be immediately forthcoming? That it will be forthcoming, eventually, there is no doubt whatever, but we want it now, before the convention, so that the committees can report that our object has been attained. We know of several other industries, many of whose aggregate investments are not nearly as great as those in our own trade, who have created for a similar purpose far larger funds than the florists are asked to create and are enjoying the benefit which they were positive would result.

Do you want to have the public believe that flowers in their homes are not essential, or that their purchase for any purpose is an extravagance in wartime? Do you want to see the use of your products cut out at functions where they have always played a conspicuous part? Do you want to see them denied admission to hospitals and other places where their cheering influence is beyond dispute? Of course you do not. Then subscribe to this fund, because it will be expended in a country-wide effort to prevent these very conditions, and without this effort the future of our business would be dark indeed. So impressed are some of our subscribers with the value of our work that they are increasing their subscriptions. So, why hold back, Mr. Nonsubscriber? The campaign is as much in your interests as in those of anyone else in the trade, and your returns are absolutely sure.

Canadian Horticultural Association.

WELL-ATTENDED CONVENTION.

The Canadian Horticultural Association met in annual convention at the Normal School, Ottawa, Ont., August 13-16, advance announcement of which has been made in previous issues, the well-arranged programme containing much of timely interest to the large and representative attendance. The convention was called to order by E. I. Mepstead, and after being welcomed to the city by Mayor H. Fisher, the delegates were occupied during the balance of the opening session with President Hayward's address, the report of the secretary-treasurer, H. J. Eddy, the secretary-treasurer, H. J. Eddy, and the appointment of committees. President Hayward called attention to the fact that in the 21 years the association has been in existence it had been guided by the most prominent men in horticultural lines in the Dominion, and that it seemed quite remarkable that every past president of the association had been spared to see the coming of the present meeting. He dwelt briefly upon war conditions and extended his full sympathy to all members who had sons or friends on the firing line in France. As regards the tariff, he called attention to the fact that no change could be made in these anxious times, but that when things again resumed a normal state a revision would undoubtedly come, adding that at the present time there are horticultural interests favorable to taking down the bars in order to cheapen articles that enter into their particular needs, without thought of the consequences, seeming to fail to realize the general balance that must exist in tax distribution. He also discussed the coal situation, pointing out that those who burn anthracite and are limited to 70 per cent of normal requirements may make up the balance with coke or screenings, and that the trade will be given every opportunity to secure its allotted supplies to carry on its establishments. The labor shortage, he said, will also undoubtedly continue for some time. He referred to prices as a delicate subject, and recommended that a committee be appointed, representing the different growing and distributing centers, to take up this important matter, the findings to be made public through the trade press. A committee was also suggested to take up the matter of service with the express companies, especially as regards importations. In closing, he urged optimism and confidence in all business lines. The report of Secretary-Treasurer H. J. Eddy showed the association's finances to be in excellent condition.

The papers and discussions which featured the following sessions, were fully up to the high standard which has marked the previous gatherings of this organization. Among the well-known speakers and their topics were the following: Wm. C. Hall, Montreal West, "Easter Lilies"; E. B. Hamilton, London, Ont., "Extension of Credit"; H. B. Dilleuth, Toronto, "Decoration Day"; Jas. McKenna, Montreal, "Plants for Christmas to Replace Imported Stock"; George M. Geraghty, Toronto; Jos. Bennett, Lachine, "Care of Plants after Being Received in the Store"; Charles Craig, Ottawa, "Plants for Easter to Replace Imported Stock"; Robert Burrows, St. Anne de Bellevue, "Outdoor Gardening on a Private Place"; followed by the question box. The visitors were delightfully entertained during their stay, among the features arranged by the committee in charge being a trip to the Dominion Experiment Farm, followed by a luncheon; a bowling match between the Ottawa and All Canada teams; a visit to the establishment of R. H. Wright, at Aylmer, at which place sports were held on the lawn; a trolley ride to Britannia, and a visit to the parks and other points of interest, under the auspices of the Ottawa Florists and Gardeners' Society. Special entertainment was provided for the ladies in attendance.

A feature of the convention was the most excellent trade exhibition, the judging of which was in the capable hands of F. Dick of London and R.

Store Items.

During August one has to be on the lookout, so as to know just where to lay his hand on this or that scarce flower when the order is for something in a hurry. Today and for several days past the market has been overstocked with Easter lilies. Orders are taken for these flowers to go out tomorrow; no need to hurry we'll get them in the morning. When morning arrives a visit to the market shows crops all off, no lilies or very few in sight. Orchids, lily of the valley, good roses, etc., are never to be depended on at this time, so the moment an order is taken, if the stock on hand is low, call up the dealers at once and avoid disappointment later.

Talk sprays and wreaths. Most customers will be satisfied if the great variety in their arrangement is explained to them. Intricate designs that require expensive flowers, variety and much stemming of stock, are to be avoided as much as possible. Recommend lettering on ribbon instead of the background of flowers. When finished, such pieces are as sure to please and much more profitable and satisfactory to the store.

Always keep in mind that your business is not just an occupation. The store is carried on for the purpose of making money. Each transaction should be worked to the limit and everything done in a legitimate way to sell as much to the customer as possible. In taking an order for a design or spray find out how much the customer has thought of spending, and then try and raise this by showing how a choice orchid or two, or a dozen more roses or lilies of the valley will make it stand out among other pieces of a similar character. Never give a definite figure when asked for prices on sprays, wreaths, pillows, etc. A statement that "We make them from five, six, seven fifty and ten dollars up, according to size," is pretty sure to bring the question, "Have you nothing cheaper?" or the statement, "Well, we want to get something very nice," which shows at once how the customers are to be handled.

The visitor who is a stranger should be shown every courtesy; if a purchase is made and sent with a card, attention should be called to other nice things in the store and if possible a sale made to be sent home. If this is not possible, a request to add their name to the mailing list so that they may get the store invitations, booklets, etc., will generally bring a favorable response.

Leaflets containing interesting items about plants and flowers, short cultural notes for treatment of the window plants, fernery, etc., which include and describe the seasonable choice plants and cut flowers in stock at the time, is good advertising matter which should be sent to all customers at least once a month from October until June.

Investigate every complaint; in fact, look for trouble and avoid it in a more intense form later on. Inquire how the plants sold recently are doing, or if the fernery is satisfactory. Valued customers have been known to transfer their business on account of some such trifling complaint, as an unsatisfactory filling of the fern dish which was not immediately made good.

St. Louis Convention of 1904.

The convention of the Society of American Florists to be held in St. Louis, Mo., August 20-22, will doubtless recall to the minds of many members the twentieth annual meeting, held in that city in 1904. That meeting will be remembered as one of the most interesting since the society's organization, made all the more pleasurable by the fact that the World's Fair was held in St. Louis that summer. In contrast, we cannot help but reflect upon the radically changed conditions existing in that year and the present one, peace and prosperity on the one hand, war and its incident trials which beset the trade at present, on the other. Nevertheless the florists throughout the country, thoroughly imbued by the spirit of true American patriotism, are proving themselves alert to their responsibilities, and the St. Louis wartime convention, with problems of grave importance before it, will without doubt go on record as a meeting of achievement.

At the convention of 1904, held in the Exposition building, Philip Breitmeyer, Detroit, Mich., presided, J. J. Beneke, St. Louis, vice-president. It will be recalled that J. C. Vaughan, of Chicago, was elected president for the following year, Joseph Freeman, of Washington, D. C., which city was selected for the 1905 meeting, being chosen vice-president. Secretary Wm. J. Stewart, of Boston, Mass., and Treasurer H. B. Beatty, of Oil City, Pa., were re-elected.

The trade exhibition was most extensive, the consensus of opinion being that it was the finest in the history of the society up to that time. Among those represented, and whose success has not dimmed in the intervening years, were Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago and New York; Geo. A. Kuhl, Pekin, Ill.; Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa.; J. A. Peterson & Sons, Cincinnati, O.; George Wittbold Co., Chicago; Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J.; Jos Heacock Co., Wyncote, Pa.; C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, Wis.; F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y.; Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., New Orleans, La.; Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago; J. G. Esler, Saddle River, N. J.; J. C. Moninger Co., Chicago; King Construction Co., North Tonawanda, N. Y.; A. Dietsch Co., Chicago; Lord & Burnham Co., New York; Anders Rasmussen, New Albany, Ind.; Foley Greenhouse Manufacturing Co., Chicago; H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Reed & Keller, New York; S. S. Pennock Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; C. A. Kuehn, St. Louis, Mo.; Wm. F. Kastling Co., Buffalo, N. Y.; A. T. Boddington Co., and Schloss Bros., New York.

The bowling series were exceptionally well contested, both in the events for ladies and gentlemen. The late Philip J. Hauswirth, of Chicago, chairman of the sports committee, was in man of the arrangements and his work was highly complimented. J. H. Stevens, referred to at that time as "the youthful bowler from the Windy City," established a clear title to the championship and rolled all contestants off their feet, being awarded a diamond medal. In team scores, Chicago maintained a strong lead, followed by St. Louis, Detroit and Washington. The late Mrs. F. J. Hauswirth rolled high scores in both the ladies' individual contest and single games.

That the convention was well attended is shown by the fact that the names of those who registered numbered 320, including 51 of the fair sex. And among those who were present, how many remember the discovery of the strange footprints in an inner court section of the St. Nicholas hotel site.

New York to St. Louis.

The transportation committee of the New York Florists' Club has made the following arrangements for the trip of its members and friends to the annual convention of the Society of American Florists at St. Louis, Mo., August 20-22:

The party will proceed over the Pennsylvania Railroad, Sunday, August 18. Arrangements have been made for accommodations on the Keystone express No. 21, leaving the Pennsylvania Terminal Station, 33rd street and Seventh avenue, at 2:04 p. m., due in St. Louis 5:25 p. m. the following day (Monday).

Under existing traffic conditions it has been impossible to secure any rebate in the regular rates, which for the train selected are as follows: Fare, one way, $31.68; war tax, $2.53; additional fare for Pullman train, $5.28; war tax, 42 cents; lower berth, $6; war tax, 60 cents; upper berth, $4.80; war tax, 48 cents, or, inclusive, the fare one way will be: Upper Pullman berth, $45.19; lower berth, $46.51.

In view of the limited passenger service available, all who wish to join the club party should make early reservations to A. L. Miller, chairman transportation committee, Sutphin road and Rockaway boulevard, Jamaica, N. Y., stating the persons for whom transportation is desired and the number of upper and lower berths.

Chicago to St. Louis.

The Chicago & Eastern Illinois railroad has been chosen for the trip of the Chicago Florists' Club members and friends to the annual convention of the Society of American Florists at St. Louis, Mo., August 20-22, leaving Dearborn Station, Monday, August 19, at 11:30 p. m., due St. Louis the following morning at 7:37 o'clock. The rates of fare one way, including tax, are: In coach, $9.41; in sleeping car or parlor car, $10.97. There is no party rate and no reduction for round trip. Pullman fares, tax included, are as follows: Lower berth, $2.20; upper berth, $1.76; drawing room, $7.70; parlor car seat, $1.10.

Regarding sleeping car accommodations, and all further particulars, address Sam M. Childs, General Agent Passenger Department, 108 West Adams street, Chicago. Telephone Harrison 5100.

Parties from other points passing through the city are invited to join the Chicago delegation on this train.

Medical Plants in France.

Efforts are being made in France to spread the culture of medicinal plants, and last year the grand parterre at Fontainebleau was planted with hyssop, borage, sage and poppy. The Orleans railway has offered its unoccupied land beside the tracks for the culture of belladonna, henbane and chamomilla, which had been imported before the war from Austria, Belgium and Germany.—Revue Horticole.

ROCHESTER, PA.—H. L. Thompson, well-known florist of this city, has arrived in Los Angeles, Calif., with his automobile after a very pleasant trip. He left here June 30 and will make a tour of the western states before his return.

OBITUARY.

Albert Bowker.

Albert Bowker, reported in the casualty list of General Pershing's army, published August 7, as "killed in action," July 15, was well known in the wholesale district of New York, where he had been employed for about 10 years previous to his enlistment. His first work in the district was for A. J. Guttman, and when the latter gave up the store at 34 West 28th street he continued in the service of Badgley & Bishop, later going to Riedel & Meyer. Soon after the entrance of this country into the war, he volunteered, being among the first to enlist in the old 69th regiment of New York, which had been termed "the fighting 69th." It is now the 165th.

Albert Bowker was born in New York 28 years ago. He received a good education, and after leaving school was for a time in the circulation department of the New York Times. He was an "all American," and thoroughly understood the meaning of fighting "to make the world safe for democracy." From the time of his enlistment, he was anxious to get to the front, as shown by conversations before he left with his regiment and by letters received from him after he reached France, about a year ago. Both parents being dead, he had made his home in this city with his sister, Mrs. Emily Burke, 146 West 101st street. In letters to Mrs. Burke and another sister, Miss May Bowker, he had written shocking details of German atrocities, such as the shooting of defenseless prisoners and that the Germans were using shells filled with fever germs. Physically, he was a fine specimen of manhood, being six feet tall and well proportioned. Of the many young men who are in the service from the florist trade of this city, he is, so far as known, the first to give up his life for his country.

A. F. F.

Amaziah M. Herr.

Amaziah M. Herr, father of Chas. B. Herr, the well known carnation grower of Strasburg, Pa., died August 4. While not actively engaged in the business, he was remarkably well informed on all matters pertaining to floriculture, and was of much assistance in the building up of Chas. B. Herr's reputation as a carnation grower. He was always on hand at the greenhouses to welcome any of the trade, and was looked up to and honored by all. The funeral was held from the residence of his son-in-law, Dr. Martin H. Musser, and was attended by a great number of friends and relatives, as well as by a goodly proportion of the Lancaster County Florists' Association, who sent a beautiful spray of flowers as a token of their sympathy. He is survived by three children, Marv, wife of Dr. Martin H. Musser, Edgar and Chas. B. Herr.

ALBERT M. HERR.

Francis W. Bird.

Francis W. Bird, Walpole, Mass., of Neponset paper pot fame, died August 9, at a Boston hospital.

DETROIT, MICH.—The florists' club will hold its annual outing August 22 in the grove of the Breitmeyer Landscape & Nursery Co., on the Huron river. Rockwood, Wayne county Dixie Highway. The election of officers for the ensuing year will take place at that time.

Personal.

Ralph Cushman, son of E. H. Cushman, the well-known gladiolus grower, is in the military service.

Is the coal in?

In time of war, prepare for peace.

ONCE again, "Meet me at St. Louis."

ONE retailer says the government should be induced to fix a reasonable price for lily of the valley.

OUR special cover this week shows a portion of O'Fallon Park, St. Louis, and the headpiece on the first inside page is a view of the Missouri Botanical Garden palm house.

OUR young men of the trade are giving a good account of themselves at the front. They are, of course, falling here and there, and the bereaved relatives and friends have our sincere sympathy. Greater throngs, more eager than ever, are pressing forward to the front every day.

American Gladiolus Society.

As we go to press, the ninth annual meeting and exhibition of the above society opens at the Iroquois hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., the attendance being large, and the fine showing of splendid blooms already staged giving promise that the convention, which extends over four days, will be one of the most successful in the history of the society. A detailed account of the meeting will appear in our next issue.

Yearbook of Department of Agriculture.

"The Yearbook of the Department of Agriculture, 1917," recently issued by the government printing office, contains 853 pages and over 70 illustrations, among other interesting chapters in the contents being the following: The Soy Bean Industry in the United States; Production of Drug-Plant Crops; Fertilizers from Industrial Wastes; The Seed Supply of a Nation, and Co-operative Marketing.

John Young's Good Work.

Secretary John Young's hurried tour of the leading cities from the Atlantic to the Pacific has resulted in bringing the publicity fund of the Society of American Florists up to $40,000, approximately, and the addition of some 450 new names to the roll of membership. This would have been considered grand work in our most prosperous days and speaks volumes for the optimism and business conditions of wartime. That's the spirit that wins in everything, commerce as well as armed combat. Keep it up.

Window Glass Advances.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—The 11½ per cent advance in products announced by the American Window Glass Co. has been followed by a similar upturn in the output of the Consolidated Glass Co. and revision upward will be announced within a few days by the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. and Johnston Brokerage Co.

The 50 per cent curtailment in output has resulted in the stocks of window glass being low.

Society of American Florists.

ST. LOUIS PROGRAM OF VITAL INTEREST.

With the convention but a day or two away, it is pleasing to note the greatly increased interest in the subject matter of the programme. There is every indication of a large attendance, and it would not be surprising if the number of visitors should exceed the number registered at any preceding convention. It should be borne in mind that the society's membership roll has been increased more than 25 per cent since our last convention, and, naturally, a large proportion of those making up this increase will want to meet their fellow members, as well as to take some part in the proceedings, or to get information which will help them in the solution of business problems such as beset us all in these troublous times. Never before did we have before us for discussion matters of such vital interest to our trade as those scheduled in our programme—publicity, with details concerning the expenditure of a fund expected to approximate $50,000; the fuel situation, which is fraught with perplexities as to what we can and cannot do to keep our establishments going; credits and collections, which promise in the near future to engage our most serious thought, and the various other matters of general interest.

St. Louis has the advantage of central location, consequently its drawing power should be greater than that of a city located remotely north, south, east or west. It is a city of high rank among our commercial "hub" cities, and its facilities for the care of large visiting bodies are excellent. Hotel headquarters will be the Jefferson hotel, conveniently located. The convention will be held in Moolah Temple, easily reached from the hotel district.

THE TRADE EXHIBITION.

The trade exhibition, as already announced, will be housed in the same building as the convention. A feature of this exhibition this year will be the display of florists' accessories "made in America." As might be supposed, imported goods will play a minor part in the general display and their place will be filled largely by goods produced at home.

Visitors who are interested in bulbs will have an opportunity to bid on the splendid collection forming the exhibit of the Cottage Gardens Nurseries, Inc., of Eureka, Calif., which exhibit is to be sold at auction for the benefit of the Red Cross, proceeds to be turned in as the donation of the S. A. F.

Federal Tax on Business Firms.

Washington, D. C., August 13.—According to a schedule inserted today in the draft of the $8,000,000,000 revenue bill by the house ways and means committee, proprietors of all businesses or professions, with only a few exceptions, will pay an annual federal license, the schedule being as follows:

"Under the occupational tax plan, the proprietors of any concern doing business of $2,000 a year or more will pay $10 annual tax and wholesale concerns doing business of $200,000 or more will pay a tax of $25 along similar lines. This does not apply to clerks or employees of concerns or to salaried men. Farmers, clergymen, school teachers and mechanics are also exempted."

STOCK OF GOOD QUALITY LIMITED.

Were there more good stock on the market, there would be good business for this time of the year. Gladioli are plentiful, but the quality is poor. Roses and asters are in the same class and go at very low prices. In fact, there have been no good outdoor flowers for the past three weeks, due to the extremely hot weather. Some good lilies are being received and they command fair prices. American Beauties are still small in flower and open up so fast they are hard to dispose of. There are a few carnations to be seen, but no demand for them. All of the local florists have been ordered to reduce their ice supply 50 per cent, and it is in consequence hard to keep stock from one day until the next.

NOTES.

The outing of the local trade at Walnut Beach, April 7, was a much enjoyed affair, being attended by about 250 persons. In addition to a well-arranged program of sports, dancing and bathing were indulged in. Every person who entered the grounds was entitled to a chance on a handsome lamp donated by the A. L. Randall Co., of Chicago. This was won by George Franks. A 10-weeks-old pig, donated by E. C. Ludwig, was won by Otto Minzenberg, and Miss Edith Thompson won a French poodle presented by Chas. Dougherty, of McKeesport. Some wonderful pitching by Abe Kronegold and a home run by B. Thompson were features of the ball game between the retailers and growers.

John Harris went to Saltsburg, August 9 with a truckload of flowers for a funeral at that place. He arranged 40 designs and many bunches.

Randolph & McClements used two truckloads of stock for a wedding in Beaver, Pa., August 10. M.

BUSINESS FAR ABOVE COMPLAINT.

The centennial fair, which opened August 9 and will close August 26, has brought good business to all of the local florists, with a splendid demand for everything seasonable, and this very satisfactory situation follows a very good trade for the season recently closed. Rain is very badly needed, especially for nursery stock and outside plantings of florists' flowers are also suffering badly, gladioli and asters in particular. The coal situation is not causing much alarm among the growers in this vicinity, most of them being within easy hauling distance of the mines.

NOTES.

A. C. Brown reports better returns from his store than in other years and is very optimistic. His stock of roses, carnations and a general line of pot plants in his greenhouses are looking fine for the fall and winter business.

The Janssen Seed & Floral Co. has a fine display of palms, foliage plants and a general line of floral designs in the competitive class at the fair. The entire arrangement shows taste and ability.

Hembreiker & Cole are showing their capabilities in the competitive fair displays which change every three or four days.

Miss Belle Miller has her establishment in fine shape for the fall trade and reports unusually good business this season to date. RAMBLER.

BUSINESS IS SOMEWHAT BETTER.

Trade has shown considerable improvement over last week, especially as far as the city demand is concerned, which probably never was so quiet as during the seven days preceding August 10. Gladioli are in heavy supply, but plainly show the effects of the hot weather. They are in good demand, however, and are selling at fair prices, considering the quantity of the stock offered and the general market conditions. Asters are having a good call and are bringing higher prices than they did last week, but high-class stock in this line is exceedingly scarce. Roses are none too plentiful, neither are they arriving in any too good condition. American Beauty roses are moving nicely and sell up fairly well right along. Mrs. Chas. Russell are cleaning up early each day at very satisfactory summer prices and so are Columbia, which is giving good satisfaction. Champ Weiland and Mrs. George Sawyer are selling well during the hot weather, and the same holds true for My Maryland, which are to be had in limited supply. Some good Double White Killarney roses are reaching the market, but taking the hot weather into consideration, there is very little fancy rose stock available. Lilies are good property and command high prices. Orchids are on the short side, and choice stock brought as high as $12 per dozen last week. Gypsophila is seen in quantity, but is moving fast, and is being stored away for later use by some of the supply houses and retail stores. There is a large quantity of miscellaneous outdoor stock in the market which helps fill in the window displays during the quiet summer months. Green goods are ample with the exception of ferns, which have been none too plentiful the past week. The St. Louis convention will be well represented from this district, according to the talk heard in the wholesale market, and it is expected at least 50 and probably 100 will be included in the representation from this vicinity.

NOTES.

A. C. Kohlbrand, secretary of the Wholesale Cut Flower Association, received the following letter from the Department of Commerce, Bureau of Census, Washington, D. C., this week: "The President of the United States, under date of April 8, 1918, issued an order to the secretary of commerce, authorizing him to have the bureau of census collect such statistical data as might be needed by any branch of the federal government in connection with the conduct of the war. This bureau has accordingly been requested, as a war emergency measure in the interest of the war industries board, to take a census of commercial greenhouses at once. There are a number of commercial greenhouses in the United States engaged in growing vegetables as well as flowers and plants, and these will be included in the census. I have been informed that you are in a position, through your business connections, to give me a list of the names and addresses of a number of commercial greenhouses, and I am writing you to assist the government in this way at your earliest convenience. I assure you that your assistance and cooperation will be very much appreciated at this time. The penalty envelope enclosed for your reply requires no postage. Thanking you, and awaiting your early reply, I am very truly yours, Sam. L. Rogers, director." Mr. Kohlbrand is compiling a list of commercial ranges in this vicinity, and requests all vegetable and flower growers in this locality to send in their business address as early as possible.

Henry Arnold, with O. A. & L. A. Toner, has enlisted in the navy and is awaiting his call to report for duty which is likely to be sometime this week. He has been attending the Moler school for aviation mechanics with August Barnett, of Erne & Co., and George Kaspar, of the Batavia Greenhouse Co., but decided to enlist rather than be selected under the new proposed draft now pending. He has been with the Toner firm for a number of years and was one of the most promising young men in the market. His many friends join in wishing him every success and a safe return.

Joe Stezskal, formerly in the retail business at 1210 West Eighteenth street, has been drafted for military service and left this week to report for duty at Jefferson Barracks, Mo. His brother Frank is now with the American troops in France and another brother, John, who is registered in the first draft, is in employ of Kyle & Foerster.

A. Lange returned last week from Mt. Clemens, Mich., greatly refreshed by the vacation. Mrs. Lange remains at Mt. Clemens, where her son, Homer, expects to join her this week.

John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co., and Henry Wehrmann, of Maywood, have returned from Fox Lake, where they spent their vacation with their families.

Secretary John Young, of the Society of American Florists, spent two days here last week in the interest of the national publicity fund with good results.

Fred Dietrich, of A. Dietrich & Co., and wife, have returned from a delightful auto trip to Duluth, Minn., where they spent their vacation.

Frank Schramm, of Crystal Lake, and family are spending their vacation at New Elizabeth, Wis. He has just remodeled his barn, including a new concrete floor to be used in housing 50 sheep which it is figured will prove to be a good investment in more ways than one especially in connection with his greenhouse range.

Curtis Kindler, of the Raedlein Basket Co., is at the Great Lakes naval training station, and writes that he likes it very much. He is still in detention and remarks that all he has had to do so far is to mop the deck three times a day, help in the galley and do other hired girl duties.

Milton Alexander, with Lion & Co., New York, is calling on the trade here this week. He says that Morris Levine who is now with the American troops in France asked to be remembered to all his friends in the trade in a recent letter from the front.

C. L. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, says that the severe hot weather of the past two weeks has caused so much damage to the outdoor asters and gladioli that a shortage of stock may be expected in the near future.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. have dressed up their store for the express benefit of the convention visitors enroute to St. Louis. Mr. Pyfer has attended a large number of the conventions, and is well acquainted with the trade at large.

A. L. Vaughan was ably assisted at A. L. Vaughan & Co.'s store this week by Mrs. Vaughan, who is helping out during Miss Paradise's absence. Max Ringier is again on deck after enjoying a well-earned vacation.

Joe Wiltgen, formerly of Wiltgen & Freres, has been selected by his draft board in Evanston to take up a special

A. Bensen, who is now interested in the Lombard Floral Co., is on the job every day, but the writer is wondering how long he will be able to resist the call of the wild. Mr. Bensen has done considerable globe trotting, which included orchid collecting for Poehlmann Bros. Co. in South American countries.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. will keep the office of its supply department open all day Sunday, August 18, for the benefit of the out-of-town visitors passing through here on their way to St. Louis. This firm has one of the finest display rooms in America, which everyone is cordially invited to visit.

Morris Grossberg, of the Grossberg-Tyler-Finnermann Co., is back from a very successful business trip through Wisconsin and Michigan. Louis Finnermann, of this firm, leaves this week on a southern and eastern trip, which will include the St. Louis convention.

Charles Kohn, formerly assistant traffic manager at Wietor Bros.' store, writes in a letter to Charles Drissler from France, where he is with the American troops, that he is in the best of health and asks to be remembered to all his friends.

Allie Zech and Matt Mann, of Zech & Mann, and E. C. Pruner will attend the St. Louis convention, making the trip in Mr. Zech's auto which has been completely overhauled for the occasion. Mrs. Zech will accompany them.

H. Van Gelder, president of Percy Jones, Inc., reports that the shipping demand is holding up remarkably well and compares most favorably with that of other years. His firm has a splendid supply of chiffon on hand.

Paul Klingsporn, manager of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, reports that his firm's sales show a 50 per cent increase for the month of July over that of the same period of 1917.

The Misses O. A. Tonner and L. A. Tonner are members of the Baconton Pecan Growers' Association consisting of 85 members, which holds its regular meetings in the Tower building.

Fred Lautenschlager, of Kroeschell Bros. Co., will be on the job at the St. Louis convention with an exhibit as in other years, and will be pleased to renew old acquaintances there.

Walter Mott, representing Hammond's Paint and Slug Shot Works, Beacon, N. Y., called on the trade here this week. He will attend the St. Louis convention.

The Wholesale Cut Flower Association will meet at the Wayside Inn, Morton Grove, August 15, at 6:30 p. m., when dinner will be served.

Leonard Koehler is back on the job at Kyle & Foerster's store after spending a delightful vacation at Indian Lake, Michigan.

A. Miller, of the American Bulb Co., is back from a business trip to St. Paul, Minn.

Peter Baumann is again attending to his duties at Peter Reinberg's store, after enjoying a two weeks' vacation.

Visitors: E. G. Lempe, Grand Forks, N. D.; I. O. Kemble, Marshalltown, Ia.; J. A. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, Pa.; C. B. Knickman, representing McHutchison & Co., New York.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club was held at Karthaus-er's grove, August 8, with a good attendance, President Lautenschlager in the chair. Six new members were elected, L. Finnerman, 162 North Wabash avenue; E. A. Bending, Fort Scott, Kan.; D. D. Robertson, 430 Ogden avenue; A. A. Craig, 123 South Wabash avenue; Sam Freund, 729 South Wabash avenue, and Eric Johnson, Wabash avenue and Lake street.

Chairman Lautenschlager presented an exhaustive report of the advertising committee, covering the spring poster and posterette campaign. The report showed a substantial balance in favor of the club and Mr. Lautenschlager was accorded a standing vote of thanks for his splendid work on this committee.

The transportation committee announced arrangements for the trip to St. Louis for the annual convention of the Society of American Florists, August 20-22. Club members and friends will leave Dearborn station, Monday, August 19, at 11:30 p. m., via the Chicago & Eastern Illinois railroad, due St. Louis the following morning at 7:37 o'clock. The rates of fare one way, including tax, are: In coach, $9.41; in sleeping car or parlor car, $10.97. There is no party rate or reduction for the round trip. Pullman fares, tax included, are as follows: Lower berth, $2.20; upper berth, $1.76; drawing room, $7.70; parlor car seat, $1.10. Parties from other points passing through the city are invited to join the Chicago delegation on this train.

Regarding sleeping car accommodations, and all further particulars, address Sam M. Childs, General Passenger Department, 108 West Adams street, Chicago. Telephone Harrison 5100.

The visitors included James J. Karins, the well-known representative of Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, Pa., and E. A. Bending, of the Palmer Forced Draft Co., Fort Scott, Kan. Mr. Bending gave an interesting account of his firm's apparatus, claiming it will permit greenhouse men to use low grade fuel at a great saving. The installation, as we understand it, can be paid for in the difference between the cost of the old and the new firing systems. Louis Wittbold, who has tried the apparatus at his firm's Edgebrook plant, said it will increase the capacity 50 per cent to 100 per cent without injuring the boilers, with a saving of fuel from 15 per cent to 40 per cent. The apparatus at Edgebrook has increased the capacity over 100 per cent, with a fuel saving of over 16 per cent.

Routine matters closed the business meeting soon after and the assemblage was turned over to Chairman Waters, of the good-of-the-club committee who had arranged for a number of important papers by leading wholesale florists of the local market. The papers were then read in large part as printed elsewhere in this issue.

Horticultural Society of New York.

An exhibition of plants and flowers will be held August 24-25, in the Museum building, New York botanical garden, Bronx park. The premium list is arranged mainly for gladioli. Schedules are now ready for distribution, and will be sent on application to the secretary, George V. Nash, New York botanical garden, Bronx park, New York City.

GEORGE V. NASH, Sec'y.

OLD ORCHARD, ME.—Patrick Welch, of Boston, and family are at their summer home here.

STURGIS, MICH.—M. F. Wright has four acres of gladioli in bloom, making a fine display.

LOWVILLE, N. Y.—Mrs. William Keay has closed her florist business and will remove to Utica.

CLEVELAND, O.—The sympathy of the trade is again extended to George W. Smith, formerly proprietor of the Cleveland Florists' Exchange, in the death of his youngest son, who died July 31, aged seven years.

DEMAND MELTS AWAY UNDER HEAT.

The extreme heat the past week gave the business for the season 1917-18, which so far was quite satisfactory, the "knock out blow." Stock for shipping purposes became soft, with the consequence that the volume in this line took a drop. With the lack of funeral work, the local demand was at very low ebb. Roses came in with a rush and continue quite plentiful. Carnations, with the exception of a few stragglers, are done for. All outdoor stock, which is showing the results of the prolonged dry spell, is very plentiful, with only a limited call. Rubrum lilies are coming in in large quantity. Thus we enter into the period of the "dog days," with hopes of an early arrival of the new season 1918-19, with trials and tribulations not experienced by many of the present day florists.

NOTES.

The regular meeting of the florists' club was held, August 1, with a very good attendance. Ervin Riebs, of Riebs Bros., North Milwaukee, was elected to membership. In view of the fact that our neighbor florists in Illinois have been granted the privilege of burning screenings, plus their 50 per cent allotment of coal, our local fuel administrator is doing all in his power to get the same concessions for the Wisconsin boys. They are at hand, so we see no reason why the privilege should not be granted.

The committee appointed by President Kennedy of the local florists' club to work out preliminaries preparatory to organizing a state florists' association, held its first meeting, August 6. In view of the fact that during these trying times, the slogan should be "Co-operation" instead of "Competition," we see no reason why this step should not result beneficially to all concerned.

While it has threatened to rain, well, it really did a few drops occasionally of late, still we are minus the moisture which is so highly necessary to keep crops from ruination. In this vicinity, and especially in the city, trees have been losing a good many leaves of late, due to the drought, and many other crops are done for by this time.

H. Arndt, Jr., of Wauwatosa, who grows a limited amount of cut flowers for the wholesale market, is anxiously waiting for a ruling on the coal screenings question. A favorable reply would suit him first rate, as the expense of rearranging his heating system would not, in his estimation, prove a profitable move.

With half of his help, two sons, serving Uncle Sam at this time, and a third liable to be called any time, Gust Baerman, on the Burleigh road, is trying his best to get the place planted up for the coming season. All his outdoor stock is looking better than ever before.

Most of the carnation specialists are about through with housing the field stock at this time. While the early propagated stock made good sized plants, it was the smaller ones that did not make the usual growth, due to the lack of rain.

A. Reinhardt, of North Milwaukee, says that the scarcity of unskilled labor compelled him to do nearly all of the rough work himself, but things are progressing nicely at that, he claims.

In commenting on the extreme heat, we cannot fail to report a light frost, reported, July 31, at Fond du Lac, Wis. The only real crop that suffered was buckwheat.

TRADE SHOWS SLIGHT IMPROVEMENT.

A glut in the market continues, but it is not as pronounced as a fortnight ago. The supply has shortened a little, while business, although not any too good, is somewhat better. Roses are fairly plentiful, but do not meet with a particularly strong demand. A few field carnations are now in and sell well. Asters are rather short at this time; the late ones are slow in arriving in quantities. Gladioli are in a heavy supply and lilies are fairly plentiful at this time. Other offerings include coreopsis, snapdragons and hardy hydrangeas.

NOTES.

E. G. Gillett has announced his intention of attending the S. A. F. convention.

William Mayhall and wife drove to Dayton, Ohio, in their auto, August 12.

J. A. Peterson and wife will motor to St. Louis to the convention.

C. E. Critchell has been getting in some excellent Easter lilies.

NEWPORT, R. I.—Edward R. Haas has closed his flower shop, and will transact all business at his greenhouses in the future.

OUTDOOR STOCK AFFECTED BY HEAT.

Summer dullness prevailed last week, with not even a good sized funeral to ripple the surface. Roses are coming in a little more freely, with Russell and Columbia the best of the lot. Gladioli suffered severely on account of the extremely hot weather, the tips all being dried up. Local asters are coming in, but the flowers are small. Out-of-town shipments of asters and gladioli have been moving quite well. Ferns and plumosus are of good quality and supply.

NOTES.

The florists' club held its annual meeting, August 8, at the Jefferson Memorial in Forest park, with a good summer attendance. The election of officers resulted as follows: A. H. Hummert, president; J. J. Benecke, vice-president; J. J. Windler, secretary; W. C. Smith, treasurer, and Alex Lurie, trustee for three years. Chas. Kuehn, Jr., Otto E. Bruenig, Theo. G. Brown, Chas. W. Wors, John B. Barnard and Hiram O. Nichols were elected to membership. The various convention committees reported good progress. Secretary John Young of the S. A. F. was present and entertained the members with a talk on his experiences in his travels through the northwest and west in the interest of the publicity campaign. After the meeting the members were taken in hand by Messrs. Streble and Moritz of the park department and piloted around the park and the new zoo, which all proved to be very interesting.

All local members of the florists' club have been appointed a committee to help and guide the visitors at the coming convention to the convention hall at Moolah Temple. Moolah Temple is removed from the center of town about 20 blocks, but is very accessible by street cars direct from the heart of the city. Look for the big sign, "Say It With Flowers."

The prettiest garden in or near this city is on so-called "Government hill" in Forest park, planned and planted by John Moritz of the park department. It is a most beautiful outlay and will be well worth seeing by all visitors to the convention.

DEMAND VERY LIGHT.

Midsummer trade is with us firmly, and business in all branches is extremely quiet. There is a fair amount of good stock arriving each day, which cleans up at some figure, although not altogether profitable for the growers. The market is overburdened with gladioli, which sell anywhere from 75c to $4 a hundred. Asters are quite plentiful and the best bring $2 a hundred. Sweet peas are about over. The heavy storms of the past two weeks have ruined them entirely. There are a few good long stem roses seen, but the majority are short stemmed and of a poor grade.

NOTES.

The palm houses at the A. Leuthy range are in good condition. He has been collecting and growing palms for a number of years, and now has a large and interesting collection, which at the present time is quite valuable. He is also growing largely of varieties of small ferns, rubber plants, dracaenas and large specimens of pandanus.

Thos. Roland is shipping from his Nahant range a large assortment of fancy crotons, dracaenas and ferns. His stock of cyclamens and begonias is looking better than ever, and he anticipates a good, heavy plant trade this fall.

The W. W. Edgar Co., at Waverley, is remodelling and condensing its system to comply with the fuel ruling. They have a splendid stock of begonias that will be ready shortly.

Arnold & Fisher have a good choice of asters and a large house of choice varieties of single and double button chrysanthemums, which are developing in good shape.

Wm. E. Elliott is having a good crop of roses. His best are Ophelia, Christy Miller, Victory and Cecile Brunner. He is also cutting Sprengerii and Asparagus plumosus.

An electrical storm, combined with heavy hail, visited this vicinity recently, doing a large amount of damage to glass and outdoor stock.

Welch Bros. report a fair business the past week and find it very hard to obtain enough lily of the valley and orchids to fill demands.

Janiten & Wollrath, growers at Waltham, are having fine success with lilies and America and Francis King gladioli.

A. M. Davenport has a fine batch of Asplenium nidus avis from thumb pots up to 6-inch pots, in splendid condition.

S. K. G.

St. Paul, Minn.

BUSINESS FAIR AND STOCK IMPROVING.

General conditions are seasonable, business fair and stock inside of improving quality. Funeral work continues good. Roses, such as Russell, Columbia and Ophelia, are showing a marked improvement in quality, but carnations are poor and scarce. Outdoor stock, of which gladioli leads, is fine; perhaps the finest specimens produced in years are to be had, but the supply is not overabundant. Some exceptionally fine giant cosmos are coming into the market.

NOTES.

The Minnesota State Florists' Association has planned for their members and friends an outing on August 15. Inspection will be made of the Armory flower garden, Minneapolis, at 9 a. m. and the balance of the day will be put in visiting places of interest around Lake Minnetonka, including a boat ride to Big Island and a visit to the game preserve. The committee consists of Aug. Swanson, C. N. Ruedlinger and O. R. Eckhardt.

The growers are preparing their stock for the state fair exhibits, which will be held the first week in September. The premium list this year is larger than previously. New entries in the form of perennials, ornamentals and shrubs have been added. This is a new feature this year, and no doubt competition will be keen for prizes. Amounts offered in premiums for plants and flowers total $1,390.

The Acorn Greenhouses will discard all roses but Russell, Columbia and Ophelia. Their efforts will be directed to these leading varieties only.

A. Miller, of the American Bulb Co., Chicago, spent the latter part of the week in the Twin Cities and reports business favorable.

G. Taepke, of Detroit, Mich., accompanied by Mrs. Taepke and his mother, spent a few days visiting the various establishments.

Among pot plants, gloxinias are going well with the retailer. Some excellent grown plants are offered by Holm & Olson.

James Souden, of Holm & Olson greenhouses, wears a large smile. The arrival of a daughter is the cause, present outlook being promising. Funeral orders and flowers for hospitals are now the main features of the trade. Decorations for social functions consist principally of garden flowers and flags and bunting. The usual arrangements of the florists' stocks are lacking. With good rainfall during June and July, although below normal, following a dry and windy spring, plants coming on for winter, such as chrysanthemums, geraniums, carnations, etc., are looking well.

NOTES.

Some of our most experienced florists, among others Chas. Mann of the Mahlon estate, advocate the discontinuance of snapdragons for at least two years on account of the numerous pests that have attacked these flowers during the recent winters. The outlook for concerted action, however, is not promising.

Oscar Tweed will be in active harness again soon. He has been quite ill since spring, and the continued hot and dry weather has delayed his recovery somewhat, but his many friends will be glad to hear of his rapid improvement.

G. Fleischer & Son have been enjoying a good trade. A new member has been added to this firm. He arrived at the Minnequa hospital a few days ago. This firm has its indoor chrysanthemums all in good shape.

While sweet peas and pansies have not done well in the open, Chas. Stuckwisch, florist at the Colorado State Hospital, boasts of some splendid pansy beds raised from the well-known "milo high" strain.

Jacob Pistorius, in charge of the floral-cultural features at the Thatcher estate, has some especially fine Nephrolepis bostoniensis that will make a fine showing this winter.

The Bolt Floral Co. report very satisfactory business. This firm has recently added a new auto to its delivery service.

LARGE SUPPLY BUT DEMAND DROPS.

During the early part of the week, business was very good, but it dropped off again toward the end. Of all seasonable flowers, there is a large supply. Ophelia is in heavy cut just now, as is Shawyer, which, by the way, is the best dark pink rose on the market. Ulrich Brunner is supplanting American Beauty largely just now. The outdoor cut of this rose is very fine. In white roses, Kaiserin is the best. There is an abundance of Cecile Brunners arriving, both from under glass and outside stock. A few Baby Doll are also coming in. Just now, Russell is not very plentiful, due to the fact that it is too early for the new crop to put in an appearance. There are great quantities of carnations on the market and good stock can be had very cheap. For some reason or other, the call for them is very limited and most of the supply finds its way to the street peddlers. Very few good sweet peas are to be had. Most of the stock is short stemmed and off color. One grower is sending in fine stock, which sells readily at $1.00 per dozen bunches. During the first part of the week, gardenias were very scarce, but the supply has shown a decided increase during the past few days. There are no cattleyas to be had, and only a few laelias. Lily of the valley is practically out of the market. The supply of Liliun auratum continues to be very fine and is in good demand. Some extra good rubrums are coming along. Both of these lilies are selling well and at remunerative figures to the growers. Gladioli can now be said to be at their best. America seems to be the most popular, although Francis King is also a good seller. The first chrysanthemums of the season appeared during the week. The variety was October Frost. They were very good quality on fairly long stems and sold out quickly. Dahlias are still coming in, but their keeping quality is not of the best during this season of the year. Zinnias are improving in quality daily and are in much demand for basket and decorative work. A few Marie Louise violets were noted during the week. The flowers are very fragrant, but inclined to be rather small. There is a large supply of outdoor garden flowers, such as scabiosa, stocks and pyrethrum. The quality of adonians is now at its height and is all of fine quality. Asparagus and greens of early description are plentiful.

NOTES.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee reports many inquiries from her eastern customers as to the prospects of getting shipments through in refrigerator cars this coming season, but as this question has not been disposed of by the railroad authorities, no definite assurance that they will go forward can be given as yet. Vast quantities of violets and chrysanthemums have been sent out of this city every season, and if this trade is to be curtailed to any extent this fall, it will mean quite a financial loss to many growers.

It is rumored that the J. B. Coryell greenhouses, at Menlo Park, will shortly be reopened, and a new stock of orchids established there. At one time this orchid range was a prominent factor in the orchid supply of this city and Los Angeles, but of late years, Mr. Coryell has not given them much attention. If true, the news will be received with much satisfaction by the trade.

Pete Ferrari is bringing in a fine cut of gardenias this week. They are coming in just right, for they were very scarce during the first part of the week. His large range is all in fine condition at the present time. Replanting has been finished, and all the young stock is making a fine growth. The orchid houses also give promise of a large supply of flowers this coming season.

MacRorie & McLaren, on Powell street, are making an interesting display of miniature conifers in their windows this week. They are also handling some grand delphiniums. Manager Edwin Hoff says July business was beyond expectations. Many fine decorative plants are being used here, all of which are also grown at the firm's greenhouses at San Mateo.

Enomoto Bros.' large plantings of chrysanthemums look to be in splendid shape for the coming season. The planting devoted to pompons is not quite as large as last season. They are all grown in frames and covered with cheese cloth. The greater part of the cut of this firm is shipped direct from the nurseries to eastern points.

F. W. Mohr, on Twenty-first street, says that business is keeping up very nicely this month, particularly funeral work. Besides the floral end of his business, Mr. Mohr has quite an extensive landscape trade. The latter he reports as being handicapped owing to the difficulty in securing competent help.

The Chinese growers along the peninsula are beginning to bring in asters in large quantities. They have also planted their usual acreage of chrysanthemums for fall trade. The flowers of the latter are usually small and late, owing to continual pinching back, and are largely used for funeral work.

WE GO THE LIMIT TO GIVE SATISFACTION.

Henry Maier, manager of the Hillsborough Nurseries, is putting his range in first-class condition for the coming season. He says landscape work has not been up to the standard of former years, owing to war conditions. He predicts a great boom in it, however, when hostilities are over.

It is expected that the city will raise the wages of all the laborers in Golden Gate park to $4 per day. The pay of foremen will be raised to $4.50 per day. The men asked this increase and the park commissioners have placed the matter in the hands of Superintendent John McLaren.

Richard Lohrmann, of San Rafael, says the demand for his new red dahlia, Pride of California, has exceeded his expectations. He has several other very promising varieties, of which he thinks very highly. These will all be shown at the exhibitions this fall.

At the J. B. Boland store, on Kearny street, Manager Chas. Shellgrain reports trade held up well for the month of July. Funeral work has been active here right along. A fine display is maintained at this store, the windows always being attractive.

P. Vincent Matraia, manager of the Art Floral Co., paid a visit to the different plant growers across the bay during the week, purchasing decorative stock for his Powell street store. They report brisk trade in funeral work during the past week.

At the Pacific Nurseries of D. Kempf, at Colma, we found the proprietor busily engaged planting out young stock of ornamentals of every description. Mr. Kempf specializes in ericas, and is very successful with this class of plants.

At Joseph's store, on Grant avenue, John Bianchini says trade is holding up in a very satisfactory manner. This firm makes a specialty of baskets and favours for steamer trade, and does a large business in that line.

F. T. Schlottzauer, of the Francis Floral & Decorating Co., has been featuring a splendid line of auratum and rubrum during the past few days. He reports decorative work to be above the average for July.

J. B. Pilkington, the prominent Portland nurseryman, is spending some time in this city calling on the trade. He will make a visit to all the prominent nurseries in the state before returning to the north.

Julius Epstein tells us that trade at his store in the St. Francis hotel is very good. He says the shortage of orchids is severely felt by him, as most of his clientele are large users of this flower.

Brown & Kennedy are handling large quantities of asters daily. This firm has built up a fine business in the Mission district, as they turn out nothing but first-class work.

Louis Lagier has received a large consignment of boxwood in various sizes at his nursery on Pierce street. He says landscape work is keeping him busy at all times.

Rosaia Bros. are bringing in a fine cut of long stemmed Ulrich Brunners and gladioli, which are meeting with ready sale, owing to their fine quality.

Visitors: Arthur Cann, of San Jose, and Martin Poss, of San Mateo.

Flowers Essential in the Home.

Seedsmen who handle flower seeds exclusively fear they will be put out of business by the decision of the coal administrator that flower seeds are non-essential. There are several establishments who deal exclusively in flower seeds, and one in particular has built up a large business, the result of many years of labor, in which considerable capital is invested. A widow is owner of half or more of this business. To discontinue the business of this particular establishment for a single year would mean loss and damage that it may be unable to recover from. No money is spent by this concern in advertising, and The Sun has no business dealings with it, so these remarks are from a purely disinterested source. Seedsmen handling vegetable and flower seeds will carry on their business as usual, but concerns handling flower seeds exclusively will be allowed no coal, and therefore will, they fear, be unable to heat their buildings. Let us hope some way may be found to overcome this difficulty.

In the introduction to his Floral Guide for 1882, when the writer was working night and day in horticulture, a profession with which no other seems so interesting and none more important, James Vick said:

"I have labored to teach the people to love and cultivate flowers, for it is one of the few pleasures that improves alike the mind and heart, and makes every true lover of these beautiful creations of Infinite Love wiser and purer and nobler. It teaches industry, patience, faith and hope. We plant and sow in hope, and patiently wait with faith in the rainbow promise that harvest shall never fail. It is a pleasure that brings no pain, a sweet without a snare. We gaze upon the beautiful plants and brilliant flowers with a delicious commingling of admiration and love. They are the offspring of our forethought, taste and care; a new, mysterious and glorious creation. They grew, truly, but very like stars and the rainbow. We created all this grace; moulded the earth, the sunshine and the rain into forms of matchless beauty, and crystallized the dewdrops into gems of loveliness.

"God doubtless could have made a world without a flower to gild the landscape, but God in His wisdom did not do so. . . . In all parts of the civilized world the refinement and innocence and happiness of the people may be measured by the flowers they cultivate. . . . If the father be grudge wife and little ones a few dollars and a little labor to make home pleasant, he need not be surprised if his children have no love for home.

"Wonderful changes have taken place in our country within the memory of most of our readers, and in no other country, in no age, has there been such rapid progress in moral taste. We are rapidly becoming acquainted with flowers and learning to appreciate them at their proper worth."

Most of the palatial homes in America have been built since that was written, the miles of beautiful homes along magnificent boulevards all over the country, and this splendid work is still advancing more rapidly than ever before, making the United States the country of attractive homes. Let no check be placed upon the love of the beautiful and the expansion of horticulture generally.

By what method of reasoning theatrical performances all over the country, necessitating the consumption of enormous quantities of coal in theatres, can be considered essential, and flowers, the production of which require no more coal than used by the theatres, are considered non-essential, is difficult to understand.—New York Sun.

St. Louis Ladies' Florist Club.

About a year ago a number of St. Louis ladies started to organize a ladies' club, and after some difficulties they succeeded in forming a good sized organization, calling themselves the Ladies' Florists' Club of St. Louis. For the coming convention in St. Louis they have prepared a very fine programme, in keeping with the spirit of the times, for the entertainment of visiting ladies. While the gentlemen are at the convention sessions the ladies intend to keep their visitors going so they will not have time hang heavily on their hands.

Among the various things arranged for are an auto ride, a luncheon at beautiful Bevo Mill, and a reception and dance. They have prepared for a large attendance of ladies, and it is hoped that all the Society of American Florist members who possibly can will bring their families with them.

The present officers of the ladies' Florists' Club of St. Louis are: Miss Bertha Meinhardt, president; Mrs. W. Boaz, first vice-president; Mrs. O. Koenig, second vice-president; Mrs. H. G. Berning, secretary; Mrs. F. C. Weber, Jr., treasurer, and a board of consultants consisting of Mesdames F. C. Weber, St. E. E. Windler, Theo. Miller, Fred Meinhardt, W. J. Pilcher, J. J. Benecke and F. W. Bruenig.

QUALITY FALLS BELOW NORMAL.

The feature of the past week has been the record-breaking weather. The oldest inhabitants have been compelled to say that they have never experienced such extreme heat. The highest recorded by the weather man was 106.4. Under these conditions not much was to be expected in the way of business, while the quality of the stock in nearly all lines fell far below normal. Roses were either very tight or wide open. Russells and Prima Donna were the best, and Victoria appeared in fairly good shape. The great flood of gladioli appears to be over for the time being, but there is still more than enough for the demand. Asters have been hard hit by the extreme heat, much of the stock coming in browned on the edges. There appears to be a ready demand for all the best of this stock that is offered, but fully half of the flowers sent in will hardly bring express charges. Easter lilies do not seem to mind the weather and are quite up to standard, selling better than most any other flowers. There were also plenty of rubrums of good quality. "The king is dead; long live the king!" The old carnations went out last week and this week ushered in the new—very good stock, indeed, under present weather conditions. They all sold readily at $3 per hundred. It is the general consensus of opinion that, under the trying conditions of the past week, business held up remarkably well.

EARLY CLOSING HOURS.

Early closing hours are now earnestly discussed, and an effort is being made to have all the trade close voluntarily at 6 p. m. This is reasonable for the central city stores, all of which close during the summer. With some it is an hour earlier and half-day Saturday. Those of the trade, however, whose stores are in the residence districts object to this early closing, particularly in the winter season, as much of their good trade is then at night, people coming out after supper to do their shopping. The Wanamaker store has announced that from August 12 their business hours would be from 10 a. m. to 4:30 p. m., which action, it is said, will be followed by all the other large retail establishments. This is done as a war measure, to save coal and light and better distribute the carrying capacity of the street cars during the early morning and late afternoon rush hours, so as to provide room for the workers in the various war industry plants of the government.

NOTES.

Mole street now boasts of a service flag containing 25 stars, arranged in the shape of the letters "U. S." The inscription at the top is "Our Boys of the Neighborhood." Four of the stars stand for Edward Riley, of the Wm. J. Baker force; Jos. Cousins; John Lodge, from the Jos. Heacock Co., and Wm. Sible, of John Welch Young, who made his headquarters with the Wm. J. Baker Co., all true blues who will give a good account of themselves.

EXCELLENT AUGUST DEMAND.

Business was surprisingly brisk last week, the demand showing an increase over any previous week since June. We have been laboring under the most difficult weather conditions, 102 degrees being registered August 6. Naturally the quality of all flowers has suffered considerably. Gladioli are showing the effects of the heat, as they are soft, and many of the buds do not open. However, they are standing the high temperatures better than many other flowers. Asters, so far, have suffered little, the flowers arriving on the market being large and of excellent quality. Roses are showing the results of the heat to quite an extent. Russell is off crop at present, and Shawyer presents a faded appearance. Other varieties have suffered greatly, with the result that there is a great scarcity of good roses. Lilies are also on the short side, and the demand for them has been very active. The carnations being offered by the wholesalers are of very poor quality and few of the retailers are handling them. Orchids are scarce.

NOTES.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey are cutting a fine crop of asters, which are of the best quality, and a good crop of summer roses. They report the demand excellent, greater even than the supply.

Lily plants and fine large vases and baskets of gladioli were featured at the store of A. J. Lanternier last week. This firm had a heavy run on funeral work.

Good summer roses, particularly in the Opheila and Sunburst varieties, are being cut in fine large quantities at the greenhouses of the Flick Floral Co.

A fine crop of gladioli and asters is being cut at the New Haven Floral Company's plant at New Haven, Ind.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y.—John Ralph's Greenhouses report having a busy spring, with a complete clean up, and present demand is holding up well in both cut flower orders and funeral work in addition to a number of large decorations. A few of the smaller houses will be closed during the winter as a means of fuel conservation.

BUSINESS VERY UNSATISFACTORY.

What happened in the wholesale district during the past week could hardly be called business. It was more like the barter, in which the poor Indians, the original owners of this little island, traded it off, if we remember correctly, for some beads and a few pounds of tobacco. There was this difference, however, that the Indians were satisfied with their bargain; the wholesalers were not. As similar weather conditions seem to have prevailed in all the territory east of the Rocky mountains, other flower markets were probably in the same condition. A full week, during which the day temperature ranges from 95 to 102 in the shade, is not conducive to business in cut flowers. It is true that there was considerable funeral work, but that was all, and it had little effect on the wholesale market. Gladioli and asters kept piling up; a few were sold, and many lost. It was even hard to move such gladioli as America, Panama and Mrs. Francis King at $1 per 100. The late and larger asters are now arriving, but they, also, if they move at all, go cheap. Such weather was particularly hard on roses, but there were more than enough fairly good ones to supply the demand. As the supply of orchids, lilies and lily of the valley was light, there was little change in prices. A considerable stock of dahlias and cut hydrangeas is now on the market. The best dahlias started at 25 cents per dozen, but with an increasing supply, it is hard to foresee prices even from day to day.

August 12.—The weather turned cooler on the night of August 9 and there is more comfort in doing what business there is, but no improvement worthy of note.

NOTES.

Lieutenant David Ward, of the anti-air craft heavy artillery, who was in France for 11 months, was recently recalled by the war department and is now stationed at Fort Hamilton, Brooklyn, which is one of the forts that commands the Narrows, the main ocean entrance to New York harbor. Since C. W. Ward relinquished his interest in the Cottage Gardens Co. of Queens, N. Y., to Lieutenant Ward, his son, the range has been conducted by the latter and R. T. Brown. It has, of course, been impossible for the lieutenant to actively participate in the management since he enlisted. On account of the cut in the coal supply and the uncertainty of getting even a part, and the dearth of suitable labor, they have decided to shut down the carnation range for the duration of the war. The nursery business will go on as usual.

The carnation growers of the Flatbush section of Brooklyn, have about finished planting and their stock looks well, though some of them were caught in the heat wave of the past week. If any part of the people think that growing flowers is a nice easy business, they should visit a carnation range in the playing time, when the thermometer, under shaded glass ranges from 100 to 120°. At the Hession range there is a large stock of fine plants, Alfred Demeusey planted early, and his stock has rooted well. G. Messeberg laughs at the "record breaking" hot weather. He says: "We hear something like that nearly every summer." Eugene Dailedouze has given up carnations, but has fine stocks of roses and chrysanthemums coming on.

Peter Gerlaid, the well known florist of the Coogan building, is now a grandpa. His only daughter, is the wife of George M. Cohan, II., a relative of the famous theatrical George M. Cohan, and also an actor. They have a son five weeks old. Peter is a young man to be a grandpa, but for that matter, a lot of us young fellows are having that honor thrust upon us.

Roman J. Irwin started for Boston, August 8. After a short stay in that city, he goes on to Montreal and will also attend the convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association at Ottawa, Ont., August 13-16. He expects to be absent about three weeks from his time of leaving home.

Eugene H. Moquin, who was manager of the "Heatherhome" greenhouses at Flushing, N. Y., for five years, is now manager of the Secaucus, N. J., Exotic Nurseries, of which Marius Muilod is proprietor. Mr. Moquin is related to Moquin, the well-known restaurateur, of this city.

John S. Nicholas, the Grand Central florist and fruiterer, has recently added another line. He has put in a handsome, unique and expensive stock of Chinese porcelain in figures of mandarins, birds, animals, etc. He has also a fine stock of fancy baskets and vases.

It was stated at the store of J. G. Leikens, August 10, that their Newport, R. I., store had recently arranged a number of fine dinner decorations at the home of General Cornelius Vanderbilt, who, with his son, is home on leave from the Western front.

Miss Mary Brophy, stenographer to J. S. Fenrich, the wholesaler, started August 10 on a two weeks' vacation, which she will spend at Bernardsville, N. J. Miss Brophy is justly popular with her business associates and all wish her a happy time.

Teddy Chiricos, one of the managers at the Fenrich store, 51 West 28th street, started a three weeks' vacation, August 10, which he will spend at White Lake, N. Y. Teddy is a hustler and has earned a rest.

Al Futterman, the wholesaler of 102 West 28th street, has received an invitation from B. Hammond Tracy and wife, of Wenham, Mass., to attend the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage, August 16.

Louis Schmutz, Jr.'s health is not as good as his friends would wish. He is under treatment in a hospital near his home, where it is convenient for Mrs. Schmutz to visit him every day.

In our notes of August 10, it was stated that A. F. Faulkner was present at President Schenck's luncheon. That was an error, typographical or otherwise, as he was not so honored.

Charles Schimmel, for many years with M. C. Ford, has just returned from a two weeks' vacation, which with his wife and two fine daughters he spent at various summer resorts.

Emil Schloss, of Schloss Brothers, dealers in ribbons, has just returned from a vacation spent at Tremble Beach, Conn. He will be represented at the St. Louis convention.

Matthew Sampson, Jr., manager of the Noe department of the New York Cut Flower Co., has gone on a vacation of two weeks, and is likely to visit the northern lakes.

George Stathes, the retailer of 889 Columbus avenue, now has three sons in the United States army, the fourth and only remaining boy being only 15 years old.

During the absence of H. H. Burns, of 500 Madison avenue, in the United States naval reserve, his store is being managed by Max Wicscuck.

The Flatbush growers are feeling reasonably cheerful over the coal situation, as they secured quantities near to their 50 per cent quota.

William Sampson, rose salesman for H. E. Froment, is enjoying his vacation, accompanied by Mrs. Sampson and their little daughter.

Miss Mary Bowen, bookkeeper at the C. A. Dards store, is on vacation. Manager Perry of this store is expected home this week.

Miss Edmonson, bookkeeper for M. C. Ford, is on a vacation of two weeks, and her cheerful presence is greatly missed in the store.

The canna beds in City Hall Square are of the same non-flowering types that have been used for more than 30 years.

President and Mrs. Totty and Miss Totty started for the St. Louis convention, August 13, in their touring car.

The Charles H. Totty Co. continues to send fine stock of the new rose, Columbia, to Joseph S. Fenrich.

The United Cut Flower Co., 111 West 28th street, is receiving a good stock of the dahlia, Elsie Burgess.

Daniel Sullivan, of the Pierson department of the New York Cut Flower Co., is on a vacation.

H. E. Froment is spending his vacation at Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

NOTES.

Quite a number of florists from this city and Council Bluffs will attend the S. A. F. convention at St. Louis, Mo., August 20-22, among others C. R. Wolf, city park florist; J. J. Hess, of Hess & Swoboda, treasurer of the national society; John Bath, O. H. Herman and Secretary Gardener, of the Omaha and Council Bluffs Florists' Club.

Tom Evans, long employed by Hess & Swoboda, in their retail store on Farnham street, is now in training at Jacksonville, Fla. He expects to get "over there" in the near future. He is a corporal in the quartermaster's department.

The local trade is contemplating an outing at Lake Manawa this month. It has been suggested, however, that the money raised for this purpose be donated to the Red Cross.

Lee Larmon expects to go to war and will leave as soon as he can secure competent help to take charge of his business.

Business in this city has been exceptionally good of late, due largely to funerals of a number of prominent persons.

Lewis Henderson has suffered another slight stroke of paralysis, but is able to be about again.

George H. Swoboda and family are taking a vacation, motoring through the mountains.

Chas. Eterer and family are enjoying an auto trip in the western part of the state.

J. J. Hess expects to drive his car to St. Louis and will take his family with him.

Ernest Sweet has established a flower shop in the Hamilton apartments.

A. Donahue now has a branch store in the Central market.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-seventh annual meeting will be held June, 1919.

CARLOAD shipments of fertilizer must be equal to car capacity.

NEW CROP Long Island grown Savoy spinach seed is quoted at 50 cents per pound wholesale.

BERMUDA steamer freight rates are now $1.40 per usual bulb case, against 27 cents last year.

SOME New York importers have received advice that Dutch bulbs are coming via England.

RUTABAGA seed, Long Island grown, of new crop, is quoted from first hands at $1.50 to $2.00 per pound.

CARL CROPE, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, left August 10, for California, where he will make a tour of the seed growers.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. J. Brown, of A. J. Brown Seed Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., returning from a three-weeks' tour of the western and California seed growing districts.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—I. Rosnosky, representing Vaughan's Seed Store, was in the city the past week, and incidentally made a trip to the firm's New York Barclay street house.

NEW YORK.—Vaughan's Seed Store is moving early American grown narcissus bulbs.—A. Hogewoning has been drafted, and after the busy season closes, will go to camp.

Onion Sets.

The harvesting of onion sets in the Chicago district has just commenced, and it is too early to tell what the final crop will be. From present indications, it is thought the crop will be considerably shorter than last year. On the south side, where about two-thirds of the sets in this district are grown, conditions are generally bad. The crop has been seriously injured by hail, maggots and disease. The average yield there is about three and one-half bushels to one pound of seed sown. On the north side conditions have been somewhat better, and it is estimated that the yield will be about five bushels per pound sown, which is about the normal yield. The average for the entire district appears to be about four bushels to one pound of seed sown. The sets apparently are of good quality and, if harvested under favorable conditions, should keep well. Because of thin stands, there is more than the usual percentage of sets that run too large for commercial use and that are sold ordinarily for pickling onions.

The crop of onion sets in Oregon this year is short. It is estimated that the crop of brown and yellow sets will be about 35 to 40 per cent of normal and the crop of white sets about 15 per cent of normal. The estimated total production of onion sets for Oregon this year is from 500,000 to 600,000 pounds.—Government Seed Reporter.

Hail in the Gallatin Valley.

One of our well informed correspondents writes as follows regarding the recent heavy hail storm in the famous Gallatin valley pea district:

"On the night of August 4, a most disastrous hail storm visited Bozeman, and, in fact, covered almost the entire Gallatin valley from one end to the other. This was the most severe hail storm the district has suffered for many years and the damage is extreme. The pea crop is affected from 50 to 75 per cent, many of the most promising prospects being entirely ruined. In addition to the peas, the grain is just about destroyed. Many lots of seed oats and barley will produce no grain at all, and if harvested, will be saved simply for fodder. It looks from reports received, as though there would be practically no harvesting in the entire Gallatin valley this year.

"It is not understood that this hail extended into other valleys than the Gallatin. The Ruby and Bitter Root valleys evidently were not caught by this storm, although earlier in the season, slighter storms have injured small sections in each district. The Montana pea crop, as a consequence of the early drought and the hail storm above mentioned, without doubt, will be the smallest in recent years. A yield even less than in 1917, unquestionably will be obtained."

Peas and Beans.

A. J. Brown, of the A. J. Brown Seed Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., who returned last week after an extended tour of the western and California pea and bean sections, says:

"I found the crops of peas in the state of Montana very disappointing, and now we have bad news of heavy damage done by hail in the Gallatin valley. This is going to cut quite a figure, as we had counted on Montana helping us out, since Washington had another very dry season, almost as bad as last year.

"Conditions at the last reports from northern Idaho were favorable for a fair yield of peas, but the southern part of the state and Utah will be very light. Michigan, on the other hand, is coming through with a fairly good crop, which will help some, but does not cut very much of a figure, as the acreage is comparatively small, compared to the large plantings in the west.

"The crops in California are very short, and in some sections were almost a complete failure. Beans, on the other hand, promise very well in that but it must be remembered that it will be four or five weeks before the crop is harvested, and much damage could happen during that time, such as hail or early frost, which might affect some of the late planted fields, many of which are now only just in bloom.

"There is a fair prospect for a good yield of beans in Colorado, except for the damage that has been done recently by hail. To what extent the crops in the vicinity of Greeley have suffered I cannot advise you at this moment, but hope to have early information as to the actual loss. "I have one report stating the loss by hail was so bad that the large crop of beans that was looked for was practically ruined, but I think this is somewhat exaggerated. The crop in Michigan up to the present time is looking quite good, and if we have favorable weather from now until harvest should come through with very fair returns.

"The intense hot weather early this week did not last long enough to do any particular damage to crops. Some showers throughout the state since the hot wave have improved conditions."

ONION SET harvesting in the Chicago district has been almost completed. The hot sun has caused some scald damage to the sets in crates, but on the whole the crop is generally satisfactory.

LATEST French bulb cables report crop of 60 per cent of normal and grading of stock smaller than usual because weather conditions have not been favorable to producing large bulbs. Growers maintain, however, that these smaller bulbs are developed to good flowering maturity.

MATTITUCK, N. Y.—J. M. Lupton & Co. say that farmers in Suffolk county are making big money growing spinach seed at 40 cents per pound which before the war was imported and docked at New York for six cents per pound. Cabbage seed has jumped to $1 per pound.

TOLEDO, O.—Clover was steady, August 13, at $17.10, closing 10 cents higher than on the previous day, and showing a drop of $1.50 during the week. Cash timothy gained 5 cents, selling at $4.45. September closed at $4.82½, October $4.75, December $4.77½, March $4.90 and April $4.90.

Pansies

VAUGHAN'S INTERNATIONAL MIXTURE. This is one of the specialties that has established the reputation of Vaughan's Flower Seeds and one which we maintain most carefully. Trade pkt., 50c.; $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., \$1.50; $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., \$5.00; oz., \$10.00.

VAUGHAN'S GIANT MIXTURE. This mixture includes the richest reds, coppers and bronzes, together with the most delicate rose and pink shadings, all the distinct colors of Trimardeau and the splendid Cassier strain. Trade pkt., 25c.; $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 75c.; oz., \$5.00; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$18.00.

VAUGHAN'S CUT FLOWER MIXTURE. This mixtures is put up by ourselves and contains all the colored sorts. We have sold this mixture for several seasons to some of our Chicago cut flower growers. Trade pkt., 25c.; $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 60c.; oz., \$4.00.

NEW EARLY-FLOWERING GIANT. The new strain produces its giant flowers about four weeks earlier than other types. In March, when the old type pansies hardly show any buds the plants of the new strain bear from three to five of their giant flowers. Early Flowering Giant White, Yellow, Light Blue, Dark Blue and Mixed. Trade pkt. (500 seeds), 25c.; $\frac{1}{4}$ oz. 80c.

CHICAGO PARKS BEDDING MIXTURE. This is a mixture made by ourselves from 20 different and distinct varieties of this type. While the flowers of this strain do not grow as large as those of the Giant Pansies they excel them by a much greater number of flowers to a plant. Trade pkt., 15c.; $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 35c.; oz., \$1.15; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$4.00.

VAUGHAN'S P. P. (Popular Price) MIXTURE. This mixture, like all "Vaughan" mixtures, is made up by ourselves from separate colors and strains of the Giant and Chicago Parks Bedding types and will furnish a large variety of colors with a good proportion of giant flowers. Trade pkt., 20c.; $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 35c.; oz., \$2.00; 4 ozs., \$7.00.

The annual convention of the Vegetable Growers' Association of America, to have been held at Detroit, Mich., September 10-13, has been abandoned. No meeting of the organization is scheduled for this year.

Fashions in Female Scarecrows.

Women in wartime have reached another point of utility. A truck farmer near Park Ridge, Ill., has a natty female scarecrow in his tomato patch. She wears a sailor hat, white sheer waist, and a black taffeta skirt. Chance for another fashion department: "What Our Scarecrows Are Wearing."—Chicago Tribune.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, August 13.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, 50 cents; celery, crate, 35 to 50 cents; head lettuce, 2-dozen, $1.50 to $2.50; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.50 to $3.00; tomatoes, 4 baskets, 50 cents to $1.00.

New York, Aug. 12.—Celery (state), per bunch, 15 to 40 cents; cucumbers, 75 cents to $1.75 per basket; mushrooms, $1.50 to $2.50 per basket; tomatoes, per pound, 3 to 7 cents; lettuce, per package, 75 cents to $2.25; radishes, per 100 bunches, 50 cents to $1.00.

Irrigation.

The term irrigation to the average gardener means mechanical or overhead watering, and reduced to still plainer terms, the Skinner system of watering. There are other systems, but we believe the Skinner system has come into more general use than the others, and gardeners as a class owe Mr. Skinner a great deal for the development of a practical watering device, such as it is. We would certainly hesitate to get along without the help of mechanical watering after having become accustomed to it. While we have heard criticisms and complaints, these are generally the result of faulty installation, faulty water supplies, or improper use. Under faulty installation we may mention those attempts where an ordinary hand force-pump is jacked to a gasoline engine of doubtful reliability, thus inviting breakdowns and delays. However, we have seen some of these make-shifts in the hands of careful men produce wonderful crops. Another feature of faulty installation may be small pipe diameter, either mains or distributing pipes. It is always poor policy to crowd water too much. Faulty water supply covers a variety of sins, the two main ones being dirty river or lake water and sandy well water.

As a general rule, we look with suspicion upon the average river water, as too often such streams carry water unfit for distribution through nozzles. A good well is best in the long run, provided sand is not present to clog the nozzles. Where fine sand is unavoidably present, some receiving tank should be used as a mud-dam to permit the sand to drop to the bottom before the water enters the mains.

Improper use, means the application of water in insufficient quantity, or at the wrong time. Now, in regard to the wrong time, there is in our mind, just one wrong time, and that is when water is not really needed. When it is needed, lose no time; 24 hours a day is right, and apply until the subsoil is saturated. With us, this means generally two days of continuous application. We allow the soil to dry up a little and then cultivate. For succession cropping, we soak before plowing—plow and fit when the moisture is right, and often raise a new crop without any further watering. In this connection, we wish to say that some of our lines are on the move all the time. They are suspended on low posts temporarily, and moved on as needed. There are many crops, such as sweet corn, tomatoes, and potatoes, that need a big lift only for a week or two, hence a permanent pipe is not needed.

Improved

Primula Malacoides

Every one knows what a wonderful little house plant the Original Baby Primrose is. But the old one must now take a back seat, for the New Improved Strain, with its beautiful rose pink color, fine graceful form, freedom of bloom, and keeping qualities, makes it far superior to the old type.

A sample shipment will convince you that there is nothing that will make a more elegant Holiday gift.

THEY SELL ON SIGHT.

4-inch pots $3.00 per dozen; $20.00 per 100. Packed in corrugated cartons, containing 33 to 35 plants each. Weight, about 50 lbs.

Myosotis (Forget-me-not). What could you grow that would pay you better than a bed of Myosotis? We are offering a limited quantity of the New Rohrer Strain this season. This strain cannot be excelled if properly grown in a temperature of 40 to 45 degrees. Price 2½ inch pots $12.00 per 100.

Good Attendance and Successful Meeting.

The thirty-fourth annual convention of the Society of American Florists was, considering the unsettled conditions due to the war, surprisingly successful, particularly in point of attendance, there being over three hundred delegates at the opening session, four-fifths of whom were from out of town points. Moolah Temple, while quite a distance from the center of the city, was an ideal building for the meeting, the auditorium being well planned and commodious, with good acoustic properties. The interior had been handsomely decorated with flags, hunting and plants, all of which, in addition to baskets and vases of gladioli on the platform, made very attractive displays. On account of the mayor being delayed the opening session was not called to order until 2:30, August 8. Hummert, vice-president of the St. Louis Florists' Club called the meeting to order, and after voicing his pleasure in seeing so many present, introduced Vice-President L. Jules Bourdet, who made a cordial address of welcome. He referred to the absence of a number of well-known members who were unable to attend on account of the existing conditions, and outlined the entertainment that awaited the visitors after the business sessions were over. Mayor Henry Kiel followed, and in a cordial manner extended the freedom of the city and voiced the pleasure of its citizens in having the convention held there. He spoke of the refining influence of flowers and plants, and what great pleasure they gave to all, particularly in the beautiful parks of the cities, which conditions were largely brought about by the efforts of the society. He added he was especially pleased to see so many ladies present. J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., on behalf of the society, thanked the mayor for his cordial welcome and good wishes, and called attention to the fact that this was the third time the society had honored St. Louis. He said that while the florist industry had been declared by some ill-advised individuals to be non-essential, and not counting in warfare, it was the greatest enterprise in the making of peace in the country, flowers bringing cheer through life in all its various stages and tempering the last sad blow. He added that in times of war we should prepare for peace and hoped that the victory which was sure to come would not be long delayed, that the men from east, west, north, south, and Canada, now fighting side by side, might enjoy the fruits of what they had sacrificed so much to win for all mankind.

President Totty was then introduced and was received with great enthusiasm and cheers, all standing. Before reading his address, he referred to war difficulties under which the trade had labored, but stated that these conditions were being nobly met, as all were Americans first, and florists afterwards. He proposed that a verse of America be sung and this was done with a will. J. F. Ammann leading. A telegram, placing the society behind the president of the United States in his great work, was endorsed with a silent prayer, all standing with bowed heads. A telegram of congratulations from the Canadian Horticultural Association was then read. The elaborate decorations were especially pleasing to President Totty who said he felt that everything in the surroundings was ideal and pre-saged a most successful convention. He then read his address which was a most carefully prepared review of the society's work during the year and full of suggestions for the future.

President Totty's Address.

We are assembled today for the thirty-fourth annual convention to greet each other as friends and fellow-horticulturists, and to derive mental and physical benefit from contact with associates, all engaged in the same business of growing and distributing plants and flowers; a business that is one of the finest on earth since its sole and only mission is to elevate and improve, not only its members, but the world at large. We are meeting today under the handicap of war; the old, happy, carefree note of previous conventions will be absent. Meeting facts, face to face, with an earnest endeavor to keep an even keel on the troubled "Sea of Business," demands at this time much thoughtful and careful consideration.

Let us, first of all, as good loyal Americans, reaffirm our faith in the leadership of our splendid president, Woodrow Wilson, and let the world know that we as florists, individually and collectively, are back of him so that "Government of the People, by the People and for the People" shall continue to flourish.

NATIONAL LEAGUE FOR WOMAN'S SERVICE.

The times through which we are passing are momentous ones for the florists. In the eyes of some people, since war has been declared, we have been regarded to a certain degree as "non-essential," since our product is not necessary to the winning of the war. Physically, flowers are not necessary, but their influence on the soul of the people has been and will be, of inestimable benefit, during the coming winter. In this connection, one of the finest illustrations is the work being done by the National League for Woman's Service, which works with and through the Red Cross. This movement was organized for the express purpose of presenting our wounded soldiers in the hospitals throughout the country with fresh flowers. Distributions have been effected on a large scale in the New York section for some months and will be spread throughout the entire country as base hospitals may be erected in the different states. Wherever the National League for Woman's Service establishes a branch, I trust the local florists will organize to keep that branch supplied with flowers. Could you hear, as I have, the stories told by Mrs. Curtin, president of the league, regarding the way the sick soldiers crave for fresh flowers, preferring them even to any delicacy in the line of food or drink, you would realize that here was a chance for the florists that are too old to fight, to do their share toward alleviating pain and helping out the country, and I trust this convention will go on record as officially endorsing this splendid movement.

LABOR QUESTION.

The question of help today is an important one. Possibly every florist establishment here represented has contributed by enlistment or through the draft some of their best men to our splendid army. In some cases, this will mean a radical curtailment, while others are endeavoring to help out by the use of other kinds of labor, but we will overcome this handicap and others much worse, if our government feels it will be necessary on our part in order to win the war.

COAL SITUATION.

In this connection, the coal question is the momentous one for the florist. The original government order limiting us to 50 per cent of our average annual consumption for the last three years, has since been modified to allow florists the use of wood and fuel, providing same does not have to be transported by rail. The small florist also is kept in business by permitting him to get his entire quota of coal, providing same does not exceed 40 tons, which convinces me the government is only too willing to keep us in business, if it is at all possible to do so. We have a coal expert here from Washington, who will speak to us on the coal situation later.

OUR WASHINGTON REPRESENTATIVE.

We were fortunate, indeed, to have in Washington during the past year such a representative man as Wm. F. Gude. His report, when you hear it, will be found to cover many points of close contact between the florists and government, notably on the questions of bulb importation from Japan and Bermuda, not to mention the importations from Europe to the seed stores, manetti and other products. Mr. Gude gave his time unselfishly and loyally to the S. A. F. Those of you who have been to Washington to interview the different boards, can testify to his work in this respect. Many organizations who have not succeeded in doing nearly as much in Washington as this society, maintain a highly paid organization in that city. Mr. Gude did this work without any recompense, his only satisfaction being it was work he could do and necessary for the well-being of the trade in general. I feel some more tangible recognition should be awarded him than a simple vote of thanks.

NAT'L PLANT, FLOWER AND FRUIT GUILD.

Another organization that has done, and will do, a great deal of good for our soldiers, is the National Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild, which has been operating in New York for 10 or 12 years previous to the war, largely among the crowded tenements of the East Side. This society has now undertaken to beautify with flowers and plants the cantonments and camps in the United States. While it is too late now to do much this summer, it is planning to make a big start for another year. It will undertake to provide the funds necessary to transport plants and shrubs contributed, to the different cantonments, and will see that same are properly taken care of and planted. Any of the members of this society who are in a position to contribute stock for this purpose will please get in touch with the organization at its New York office, 70 Fifth avenue, and help out as much as possible with donations of growing plants and flowers. By the aid of this guild and the National League for Woman's Service, florists get in direct contact with our troops. The government has no time to look after what is called "the sentimental side" of the war, but it is willing for other organizations to do this, where possible. Those of you who have been through the different cantonments in different states know what a wonderful improvement a few plants and shrubs judiciously placed would make in the appearance of the camp for the summer.

LIBERTY BONDS AND WAR SAVING STAMPS.

The florists as a body are not of war-like tendencies. The business they are engaged in tends to induce a philosophic state of mind, rather than a combative one, yet every florist can help his government, and I believe is doing it to the very fullest extent, by the purchase of Liberty Bonds and War Saving Stamps. Let us never forget our country is entitled to our all, and should the government fall, there certainly would be no need for florists, therefore, every dollar we can possibly spare must be used to help our government.

FLOWER SHOW.

It is a matter of regret we did not have the convention in the spring in conjunction with a national flower show, as originally planned. Circumstances, of course, rendered this impossible, but personally I would like to state to the florists of St. Louis that postponement of a flower show does not, to my mind, mean abandonment as some of you seem to think, and I look to see the next flower show in St. Louis just as soon as times are propitious.

PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Undoubtedly the greatest thing undertaken by this society during the last year is the publicity campaign, which was launched so auspiciously in New York at the last convention. The work of the publicity committees under the able leadership of Henry Penn and George Asmus has been, with the limited amount of funds at their disposal, simply phenomenal. It would be the greatest of pities if this work would be permitted to drop or drag at this season. Let us make plans at this convention for a vigorous fall offensive in advertising, so we may not lose the benefit of the work already done. One thing alone, the connection of the florists directly with the war, and the adoption of our publicity slogan, "Say it with Flowers," by the League for Woman's Service, is worth more money as a cash proposition to the florists than the whole of the publicity fund. This league will use over 20,000 signs in its work, and "Say it with Flowers," before another year has passed, will be a household word in every home in the country. You have all seen the good work done by this committee in the Saturday Evening Post and other national publications, and the report which these committees on publicity will make will be interesting.

NEW YORK OFFICE.

The New York office of the publicity committee seems to fill a long-felt want. Every member of the organization who drops into New York, steps into the office, to receive the latest news, to get mail, and if necessary, to have a conference with other fellow-members on business matters. It also furnishes a dignified place for committee members to hold committee meetings when conferring with other interests. It is being used also to an increasing extent by newspaper men for verifying reports relating to our business and for acquiring knowledge along horticultural lines. From individual personal contact, I can testify to the usefulness of this office. The joint publicity and finance committees, in session last March, decided that the secretary should travel around to see members personally. This necessitated the employment of an office manager in Mr. Young's absence, which office has been competently filled by J. H. Pepper. No one not personally acquainted with the New York office has any idea of the enormous amount of detail attached to the secretary's office, particularly since there has been added to it the work of the publicity bureau. In this connection the secretary's report will doubtless speak for itself.

CREDITS AND COLLECTIONS.

Another committee whose work is of special value at this time, is the committee on credits and collections. I trust this committee will be in shape to formulate some definite plans of credits and collections so that the florists' business may be put on the plane where it rightfully belongs. In this connection, I would like to call the attention of this committee to the system of trade acceptances, which, so far, seems to have gained very little headway in our business. It has been estimated there are four billion dollars annually tied up in credits, which could be released by the operation of trade acceptances. The other day, I noticed in the papers that fifty million dollars in credits would be released on that day, which were drafts drawn under that credit, by merchants in France on American banks, for goods purchased in America. It would have been impossible without the use of these credits to finance the war in its colossal proportions. Someone may ask, what is the difference between a trade acceptance and a note? It must be borne in mind that a trade acceptance is given in return for goods actually sold, whereas a note may represent money borrowed for any one of a thousand things. Trade acceptances are only given in exchange for merchandise. In the case of a trade acceptance, the local bank can rediscount that acceptance through its federal bank and thereby keep its funds liquid and relieve the congestion at all points. Beverly Harris, in a recent address in New York, said: "Here let me impress upon you the fact that in our open-account system, merchants, in borrowing to carry their credit customers, are usurping the functions of bankers and carrying an unnecessarily heavy load. Is there a means at hand to remedy the situation and transfer the load where it belongs—to the bankers, and through them, to the federal reserve bank? There is—the trade acceptance." I trust this convention will go on record as approving this method of financing.

FLORISTS' BANK.

Continuing on the subject of finance, the day should come when the florists should have a bank for themselves. The average bank little understands the florists' business, and sometimes applications for loans from worthy applicants are turned down where another application, not nearly so secure, goes by and is allowed by the bank to its future loss. If the florists had a bank of their own, with men high in office, thoroughly familiar themselves with florists' business, I am sure it would be a good thing for the trade in general. Some of the largest banks today have been built up in such a way, instancing the Chemical National, Shoe and Leather, Corn Exchange banks and others organized originally to take care of some particular line of business. I presume the charter of this society would not permit it to go into the banking business, but it is a matter that may well receive your earnest attention.

SOCIETY PUBLICITY ORGAN.

I am of the opinion that the time has come when the society should have a medium of its own for the publication and circulation among its members of such news, announcements and other matter, as may be of interest to them. Few organizations having as large a membership as the S. A. F., are without a publicity organ, or some medium or means by which the views of members may be circulated within the membership fold. We have for a number of years expended large sums of money on the publication in book form of the proceedings of our annual conventions, and our own organ could very well include these proceedings in its own columns and the numbers bound into a yearly volume. The publication could be made very useful to the society. Properly managed, it would be likely to increase our membership, for it certainly could be used for missionary work; and I am sure that the society's work would be constantly before the members and the other matters which could be carried in the columns, would tend to keep up individual interest in all our undertakings. The organ could be made of especial service to the F. T. D. and to our promotion bureau in its publicity work. We could have heart-to-heart talks through its columns every month, and it could be made a medium of communication between members. In making this recommendation, I am not belittling the very great service rendered the society by the trade papers who have always shown a willingness to publish anything that might be sent to them, but there is much that could be published for members alone, and not scattered broadcast to those who do not feel that they should support the society to the extent of taking out a membership, and there are many such. My own idea of such a publication would be a paper of convenient size, say 6x9 inches, something easily accommodated on an ordinary bookshelf. It need not, necessarily, carry any advertising, although I do not see why it might not include a few cards, provided they did not encroach too much upon the reading space. The income from such cards, with the money saved through running our proceedings through the publication, would go a very long way toward meeting the entire expense, and the management of the paper could, perhaps, be well placed with our promotion bureau. Such a publication could, I understand, be mailed to our members at regular newspaper rates, and it seems to me it will eventually become necessary to our publicity campaign.

MEMBERSHIP.

While the increase in membership is satisfactory perhaps, in comparison with recent years, it is nothing compared with what it should be, when one considers all the society has done for the florists generally. An organization to keep virile, must keep taking in new blood, and if we can devise some means of going out into the "highways and byways," to compel the florists who are not members to come in, it would be as much or more for their own benefit than it would be ours.

Meanwhile, let us all "pull together" and use every honorable endeavor to increase our business, to help each other, and stand shoulder to shoulder as florists and citizens in this great country, serene and confident that the present clouds will pass away, and the future of the florist is certain to be a glorious one.

Following the address of President Totty, the minutes of the executive committee, having been printed, and a copy of which was in the hands of delegates, same were, upon motion of George Asmus, Chicago, endorsed without reading. The president then appointed George Asmus, A. T. De La Mare, New York, and E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., a committee to report on recommendations on the president's address. Secretary Young then read his report, which showed the society to be in splendid condition with a very encouraging increase in membership. The report of Treasurer J. J. Hess showed that owing to heavy purchases of Liberty bonds it required some transferring of investments to active accounts to carry on the work of the society.

Secretary Young's Report.

In view of the many disturbing conditions which have confronted us since our last convention, some of which have peculiarly affected the florist industry, it is most gratifying to me to be able to report that our society has made very substantial progress; in fact, it is safe to say that the advancement made would be considered rather remarkable even in most normal times.

OUR MEMBERSHIP.

My report made at the convention in New York last August showed that, presuming all those members who were in good standing at the close of 1916 would qualify for 1917, the total membership of the society might be taken as covering 1,694 annual, 496 life and 25 pioneer members, a grand total of 2,215.

When it became necessary again, early this year, to record our membership in good standing, the number of lapses was found to be more than ordinarily large, so much so that, with the same presumption applied to the 1918 list, we have 31 life, 1,780 annual, and 24 pioneer members, a total of 2,335. Since last convention, we have taken in 568 new annual members and 35 life members, a rather remarkable influx, but sadly needed to make up the loss through lapses. As explained, our strength can only be reported year after year on a presumptive basis, and our increases must be shown in that way. A member is not in good standing unless he has paid the current year's dues, so we are obliged to assume that it is the intention of all in the list of members in good standing for the year previous to qualify for the current year.

While perhaps nearly half of the splendid addition to our membership was due to my across-country trip in the interests of the publicity campaign fund—which resulted in 225 new members—the increase otherwise has been highly satisfactory. Still, our roster represents only a small part of the trade in this vast country.

OUR WORK FOR ALL.

It is to be hoped that the work of the society in these trying times will sufficiently convince the small florist that its results are for his benefit, fully as much as for the florist with larger interests. I should not, perhaps, touch specifically upon details of this work, as they are better dealt with in the reports of our most eminent committees. But I cannot help pointing out the fact that, but for the action of the society in the interests of the whole trade, very many of the smaller florists would in the coming winter possibly find themselves forced to seek other means of livelihood because they would not be able to profitably operate their small areas of glass on the restricted fuel supply which the government originally ordered. Many of these craftsmen did not hesitate to invoke the aid of the secretary's office in a contingency which vitally concerned them, even though not members. With reference to this condition, I cannot, of course, suggest anything as to limitations, for the nature of our work precludes the drawing of any line, but I do think that many of our state vice-presidents could wield much influence in their respective territories—if they would only get into action—looking to a better appreciation of the objects and work of our society, and consequent endorsement of our efforts through membership.

I have made reference to our state vice-presidents and the influence which they could exert for the advancement of the society. I might go further, and say that from my own experience, I have found large numbers of florists through the country quite ready to join us when the advantages of the membership are fully explained; it is the little personal touch that counts, mere appeals by letter must not be depended upon. I do not mean by this that a state vice-president is expected to cover in person the wide territory of the average state, but in these days of automobile travel, anyone can easily during a year come in contact with his brother florists within a wide radius of his home town. It is strange that the great majority of our state vice-presidents use no part of the appropriations provided for this work.

OUR ADMINISTRATION OFFICES.

As may be judged from the reports presented at this convention the finances of the society are in excellent condition. While we have had unusual calls upon our treasury, in expenditures for our common benefit, our financial strength is practically unimpaired. One very necessary item of expense I may particularly refer to, is that covering the establishment of our administration offices in New York. For a long time the business of the society was conducted in quarters and under conditions which sadly hampered routine work, and made ineffective the plans of your administration for the greater usefulness of the society as a business organization. Your board of directors, therefore, at its January meeting was unanimous in a decision to establish permanent offices which should be adequate for the society's own and kindred interests. The launching of the publicity campaign, too, made larger business quarters absolutely essential, consequently, under the direction of the board, the present administration offices in the Johnston building, 1170 Broadway, New York, were leased and furnished, and now present not only all the required facilities for the transaction of the society's business affairs, but provide a place of meeting for its own committees and for committees of auxiliary bodies with whose work we are more or less identified. Any member visiting New York may use the society's offices as his business headquarters during his stay, being assured of a most cordial welcome and the extension of any courtesy which is within the scope of the office.

THE TRADE EXHIBITION.

It is obvious to all in attendance at this convention that our trade exhibition has suffered through conditions which are affecting all lines of industry. Very many concerns who have in the past, through their generous displays, been conspicuous at these exhibitions, were unable to put in an appearance this year. Lack of staff assistance and transportation conditions, necessitated or caused by the requirements of our government in the prosecution of the war now in progress, have been chief among the reasons for the smallness of the 1918 trade exhibition. Extraordinary effort was put forth from the secretary's office to build up an exhibition which should at least be representative, and it is gratifying to realize that the report covering the exhibition will contain the names of several concerns who evidence themselves as devotees to the policy "Business as usual," and who have enabled the society to continue an important feature of its conventions which many thought impossible under existing circumstances.

THE FUEL SITUATION.

I have referred indirectly to the society's activity in regard to the fuel situation, and while I do not wish to trespass upon the subject matter of the reports which, undoubtedly, our Washington representative and others will present, I feel that I should make some reference to the matter here. Never before in the history of the society has a situation of such momentous importance confronted us as that presented by the United States fuel administration in its efforts to conserve fuel.

Since the time when the first intimation was made that the florist business might be classed as nonessential the secretary's office has been besieged with inquiries and appeals for action by the society. It would seem that the value of our organization has been widely appreciated in this emergency, and the truth has gone home—that no line of industry today can stand before conditions it is likely to meet without organization. Individual effort counts for nothing. The Society of American Florists is strong as the representative organization of our trade, but its strength ought to be many times greater. When our delegations visited Washington to enter protests against what was felt to be unjust discrimination, the government recognized our organization as a body with whom it could treat in matters of this kind, and what we were able to accomplish will be detailed to you at the proper time. Our work was such as to carry the strong endorsement of every florist in the country, and should certainly be the means of increasing our membership very largely. None of us knows what we may be called upon to meet in the near future, therefore it behooves us to make our organization as strong as possible.

THE PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

As the work of the secretary's office in connection with our publicity campaign will be detailed in the report of your promotion bureau to be presented at the session of the convention set apart for the discussion of such matters, I need refer to it only briefly. The efforts of the society in the launching of a campaign looking to publicity for flowers, which should result in an increased demand for them, are appreciated by florists who give any thought at all to their individual interests. This appreciation is confined to no particular territory; it is general and widespread. North, south, east and west, I have found, by personal contact with the trade, that our work is valued at the full, and you have evidence of the sincerity of this statement in the published lists of subscriptions to the campaign fund. Taking this into consideration, it is safe to assume that when all the florists clearly understand our plans there should be little difficulty experienced in doubling the $50,000 now aimed for to be spent annually in this work. The unanimity of opinion that the movement is not worthy of all possible support is really marvelous.

THE NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

The preparatory work in connection with the fifth national flower show proposed to be held last spring in St. Louis was quite active until the project was, at the meeting of the executive board in January, indefinitely postponed. While the necessity for such action is to be deplored, the work was discontinued with a due regard to the possibility of its resumption in the near future.

MAINTENANCE OF MEMBERSHIP.

In determining, at the end of a year, the status of those on our membership roll, it is occasion for regret to be obliged to remove the names of many who through carelessness have allowed their membership to lapse. With first class mail at three cents per letter the matter of billing is expensive, and when repeated three or four times there is an obvious waste, which should not be countenanced by any who have the society's interests at heart. The annual dues are very small, therefore unnecessary postage should be eliminated, and many members can help in this by making prompt remittance upon the receipt of the first bill. In a great majority of cases, there surely can be no reason for withholding remittance.

THE TRADE PRESS.

I must again express my deep obligation to our trade papers for their very cordial co-operation with the secretary's office in the publication of notices and articles in connection with the society's work. During the past 12 months, they have been called upon to render services of more than ordinary value to the society and to the trade, and it is most fitting that I should here attest to the very great assistance they have given us in all our projects.

PLANT REGISTRATIONS.

Since the last convention the following new plants have been registered:

Development of American Products.

Owing to my time being employed to the utmost in pushing the Cottage Gardens Nurseries project in California, the most I can do is to record the progress made in developing the growth of American florists' products in California during the past year. I am also writing Jno. H. Dunlop, Wallace R. Pierson, Jos. H. Hill and F. R. Pierson, sending them each a copy of this report, and asking them to add as much as possible concerning the development of the same matter in their localities.

At present, we have in work on the various farms belonging to the Cottage Gardens Nurseries, the following comprehensive list of bulbs and plants: 15,000,000 Holland bulbs, 500,000 azaleas, 50,000 rhododendrons, 150,000 ericas, 75,000 boxwood, 50,000 hollies, 50,000 cottonasters, 50,000 lonicerias, 25,000 berberis, 25,000 lipostrumums, 25,000 hydrangeas, 2,000,000 miscellaneous florists' plants, totaling 3,000,000 florists' plants, 15,000,000 bulbs now being harvested; also 100,000 glass house bulbs, gloxinias, begonias, etc.

We have sold 5,000,000 Holland bulbs and all the glass house bulbs, also all azaleas and rhododendrons which are of saleable size. Sales for the coming year will amount to $160,000 to $175,000, and will nearly double in 1920. We own 800 acres of land and have sold 1,000,000 bulbs to neighboring growers, who will eventually plant 100 acres or 10,000,000 bulbs as soon as they can secure the planting stock.

Our stock of bulbs now being dug is the best quality we have ever grown and the yield is fine. No better bulbs have ever been grown. We have cut production costs down one-third and improved both quality and yield. We aim to import 10,000,000 bulbs from Holland this year and increase our plantings to 25,000,000, if possible, by purchasing more American grown stock. We are satisfied that we can produce better goods at less cost than any foreign growers, Belgian, Dutch, French or Japanese.

We have three acres under glass, 60 acres under the Skinner system of irrigation, and 200 acres of additional bulb land under preparation. Our dairy herd has increased to 120 head of pure bred Jerseys and is now on a paying basis. Sales are increasing steadily. We are increasing our capital stock to $600,000 and offering $200,000 at par. A dividend of 20 per cent was declared on all outstanding stock on July 1, 1918. Our surplus is $204,000. Inventory of saleable goods and in work amounts to $485,000. It has been a source of wonderment to me why the American florists and nurserymen do not invest more freely in Cottage Gardens shares. Here is an American concern, controlled by American capital and managed by Americans of unquestioned repute, yet American growers have so far invested in only one-tenth the number of shares that have been taken by Holland growers. Considering that this industry means the preservation of an important business that has been destroyed in Europe, and is insuring a supply of much needed articles, it would seem as if it should receive the hearty support of the American growers who will be most benefited by its continuation and enlargement.

Thus far, only the owners adjacent to the Cottage Gardens properties are taking hold of bulb culture, but these are beginning in a substantial way, and in a few years some 100 to 200 acres will be planted by these men.

The chamber of commerce of Bellingham, Wash., is desirous of securing the industry for their section and are negotiating with us with that in view. They claim to have 1,000 acres of the finest bulb land available, and if they succeed in interesting a sufficient number of their substantial citizens, no doubt the industry will be largely increased, and an output several times our aim in Humboldt county will be the result.

The coastal region of northern California, Oregon and Washington should produce all the bulbs and florists' plants required by the American trade. The conditions are right and all it needs is capital, managerial capacity and nerve, to bring this about, and the American growers should back this idea up to a finish and insure the early consummation of a result that will be of the utmost benefit to all engaged in the trade.

CHAS. W. WARD, Chairman.

Committee on Convention Garden Report.

Our committee on convention garden, regrets exceedingly not to be able to report satisfactory progress and results from its earnest efforts to create interest and secure support in the convention garden work, both for this and next year's conventions. Plans for a garden at this year's convention city were abandoned after careful consultation with the St. Louis representatives. As the convention was to be held in the early spring, in connection with the national flower show, it was generally agreed that it would be unwise to attempt any outdoor display and exhibit. When the date for the convention was changed, it was too late to prepare plans and solicit exhibits, and difficulties of transportation were such as to convince all of the futility of such an undertaking, even if the plans and grounds had been prepared.

For the Detroit convention of 1919, the committee secured through its local member, Philip Breitmeyer, the free use of all the land necessary for as large a garden as it might be possible to secure the necessary planting material for. In April, at the committee's request, the secretary sent out a circular letter to growers and dealers in all parts of the country, a copy of which is hereto attached, asking for support and information as to the class of plants they would wish to exhibit and the amount of space required. With that information on hand, the committee intended to prepare the necessary plans and allot the required space. The response to the secretary's letter was most unsatisfactory, and the answers received, with very few exceptions, were to the effect that for various reasons no exhibit would be made.

It is, therefore, quite evident to your committee that under the present disturbed general conditions of the country, it will be impossible to secure material enough to make a creditable and worthwhile exhibit, such as a convention garden of our national society should contain and display. Mr. Breitmeyer has expressed his opinion that it might be possible to secure sufficient planting material of perennials and annuals from the district within reasonable shipping distance of the convention city to make a creditable display, if the cost of planting and maintenance were defrayed from local sources. He has offered to work along those lines. The committee appreciates this generous offer of assistance, but feels that such a display would not properly represent the spirit of nationwide professional competition and participation which the society had in mind to create and to foster when the convention garden idea was worked out and adopted.

In view of these facts, your committee wishes to suggest that the Detroit authorities in charge of the arrangements for the 1919 convention be given free hand to arrange for such outdoor exhibits and floral decorations as they may be able to secure and arrange, and that they be in full and sole charge of the garden so produced and maintained; that the exhibits in such garden be judged by judges appointed by the proper authorities of the S. A. F., and that the usual awards be made by such judges for the society.

Your committee feels that the convention garden undertaking for future conventions should by no means be abandoned, and that when normal conditions are again established after the war, the response from the trade in general toward this instructive and progressive work will again manifest itself in such a manner as to insure its success as an undertaking worthy of the standing of our national society.

Your secretary, a little over a month ago, visited the convention garden of 1913, still in existence in Minneapolis, Minn., and he is able to testify that our national society, through the creation of that garden, built itself a memorial in that city of the northwest which is still greatly appreciated and valued by its citizens. That similar results can be achieved in the future is the sincere and strong belief of the members of the committee which you have intrusted with this, in their opinion, important work.

THEODORE WIRTH, Chairman.

School Gardens Committee Report.

Regarding school gardening and home gardening, from correspondence which has come to hand, it would seem as if it would be out of fashion not to engage in vegetable raising, but the home cry is, "Well, I want some flowers," and there is one thing certain, the love of flowers or the cultivation of flowers will not die out in the United States and Canada. The past year, in many places, has been a trying one for florists, but with an attention to home and school gardening, the department of agriculture at Washington and other institutions have strongly pushed this work. To every state department of education in the United States, the Society of American Florists has put itself on record, that the florists of the United States are the people whose training fits them to aid in this beneficial work. To every town, village or city where there is a member of the S. A. F., we sent the spring call to local school officials calling attention to this practical work, and the many replies which were received, scattered from east to west, and north to south, show unmistakably, the deep rooted interest taken in this work.

When Robert Farquhar brought this work before the society at its annual convention, in the city of Washington, in 1912, no general interest had been taken in it as a work for schools, but times have changed, and what was not thought of much account then, has developed far and wide: with this settled policy of home gardening, which has come to stay, it means local business to those florists who will pay a bit of attention, as far as they can, to furnishing plants and seeds for small gardens, and the grower of a small garden is, in nearly all cases, an admirer of flowers. To illustrate, for some years past, I have received through our congressman, packages of both vegetable and flower seeds, and distributed them annually to our school children, and rarely when a package of vegetable seeds was handed out but what came back the request, "Cannot we have some flower seeds too?" This is actual fact, noted and kept track of.

In Quebec, the department of children's gardening, under the direction of J. Charles Magnan, gives most interesting results, with all the havoc of war and stress of work; nevertheless do not imagine the faculty for appreciating nice things and beautiful things will die out of American character—far from it. In letters and cards sent from France by young soldiers, in three different cases, they have mentioned how nice the peasants kept their yards.

Florists are a class of tradespeople whose occupation tends to make every town or village where they are located the more desirable as a home town, and the effort to push the instruction of cultivation among children, backs up nature study with its broadening thought and action, and makes of a florist, a person to be looked up to. Your committee on school gardening has gone as far as means permitted in pushing the good work from ocean to ocean. This is a big country.

Smith Memorial Committee Report.

We have the honor to report that the fund in bank to date for the proposed William R. Smith memorial amounts to $1,894.10.

The committee regrets to report the death of one of its honored members, J. A. Valentine, of Denver, Colo., since our last meeting. He was a lifelong friend of the late William R. Smith and a member of this committee since its organization, and an ardent worker at all times.

As time goes on, the members of this society can more and more appreciate the splendid work accomplished by the father of our charter and the wonderful foresight of this noble man, which should inspire more contributions to this memorial fund. Anyone who has not subscribed may send remittance to the chairman of the William R. Smith Memorial Committee, Washington, D. C.

WM. F. GUDE, Chairman.

Mother of Society Honored.

Irwin Bertermann, Indianapolis, Ind., in a high tribute to womanhood, called the "mother of the society" in the person of Mrs. Richard Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md., to a seat on the stage. Mrs. William F. Gude, Washington, D. C., was similarly honored and they were then each presented with large baskets of flowers.

Wm. F. Gude, Washington representative of the society, gave a full and complete report covering action in the coal situation, matters pertaining to bulb importations and information regarding rose and other test garden work.

Amendments to Constitution.

The amendments to constitution and by-laws, as printed in the programme were presented and after being read and their purpose being explained by President Totty, were duly adopted. One was an amendment to Article II, Section 2 (b) Elections and appointments as affecting directorship on the board of directors of societies having 100 or more members in the S. A. F. The other, an amendment to Article VII, which simplified and helped to prevent duplication in the work of plant registration.

1920 Meeting at Cleveland.

The selection of the place for the 1920 convention being in order, a letter extending an invitation to come to that city was read and ably seconded by President Carl Hagenburger of that organization and by Robert Weeks, their claims being well presented. There being no other invitations, the secretary was, on motion, directed to cast one ballot in favor of Cleveland, after which the meeting adjourned and the members gathered in a group in front of the hall to be photographed.

President's Reception.

The president's reception, which was held in the large parlor of the Jefferson hotel, Tuesday evening, was most enjoyable. President and Mrs. Totty and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. F. Gude received the guests and extended greetings. After the more or less formal ceremony, there were refreshments and dancing.

Nomination of Officers.

At the Wednesday morning session, the following nominations for officers for 1919 were announced: J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., president; E. A. Fettes and Robert Rahaley, both of Detroit, Mich., vice-president; John Young, New York, secretary; and J. J. Hess, Omaha, Neb., treasurer. The following nominations were made for directors: Joseph H. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; John A. Evans, Richmond, Ind.; J. S. Wilson, Des Moines, Ia.; Chas. L. Baum, Knoxville, Tenn.; C. C. Pollworth, Milwaukee, Wis.

Following the nomination of officers, F. S. Webb, Chicago, read his very able paper on "National Credits and Collections," for which, on motion of Wm. F. Gude, he was given a rising vote of thanks. R. C. Kerr, chairman of the committee on national credits and collections, made an interesting report, which showed a careful study of the subject, and asked for the endorsement of the work of the committee and for affiliation with the Wholesale Florists' Credit Association of Chicago. He also requested that a committee of three be appointed to work with the association as a matter of policy. This was, after some debate, unanimously adopted.

A letter was received and read from Wm. J. Stewart, wishing the convention every success and Wm. F. Gude moved that through the Florists' Telegraph Delivery a bouquet of flowers be sent to Mr. Stewart conveying the best wishes of the society. This was unanimously adopted. A letter was also received from Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis, Minn., chairman of the committee on convention garden, asking for donations of new roses to be tried out in the test gardens in that city.

The morning session then adjourned.

The Trade Exhibition.

This important feature of the convention was held in the commodious basement hall of Moolah Temple, the cement-floored room being well suited for the purpose, abundantly ventilated and with good illumination from the ceiling. As was predicted and expected, war conditions had their effect on a portion, at least, of the rank and file of the exhibitors whose displays have always been an important feature of former conventions. A few of those of whom most was expected kept Secretary Young on the anxious bench for a while and, finally, when pressed for a decision, dropped out. Transportation and other difficulties due to shortage of labor and scarcity of supplies made it very difficult to transact business satisfactorily, and, as they had all the orders they could handle at present, they felt they did not care to exhibit until conditions became more settled. There were, however, a number of prominent firms, whose various displays embraced the entire line of plants, pottery, manufactured florists' supplies, ribbons, etc.

Florists' supplies, which are usually the best represented, had but five exhibits. The most elaborate was the display of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, who made a truly representative showing of everything required in a cut-flower shop. The space was against the wall, which was utilized with a well arranged velvet background on which was a center of novelty flower holders, representing various figures of bride, groom, butterfly, soldier, wings of Liberty supporting a service flag, and other fancy designs, all hand painted, and having at the rear a tin container for water. These ranged from six to 12 inches in height. Art panels of urbanis grass cloth, which were additionally featured with two immense sunflowers made of ribbon, with red, white and blue streamers, added to the pleasing effect. There was a large assortment of cut flower and plant baskets, some of which were tied with elaborate bows of ribbon. Lattice boxes, basket jardinières and wicker baskets in various shapes were prominent. On either side of the entrance to this exhibit were grouped well grown palms, crotons, dracenas and other foliage plants, while overhead was a replica of the Liberty Bell tied with tricolor ribbon. The entire display, in variety of stock and arrangement, was well worthy of this progressive firm. Those in charge were Miss M. Grothe, whose artistic ability brought out the ribbon effects, hand-painted panels and novelty holders; E. C. Pruner, who arranged and had charged of the plants; Gust Martial, who had supervision of the supplies; J. C. Nielsen in charge of the order book, while "Tim" Waters was "generalissimo" over all.

The Ove Gnatt Co., La Porte, Ind., staged a good line of florists' supplies, being particularly strong on artificial flowers and all kinds of prepared foliage. This firm also displayed a nice variety of baskets, some in large sizes, and many of the smaller ones were filled with its specialties. Christmas wreaths, Japanese chenille and prepared ground pine were also displayed. George Hussman and H. W. Miller were the representatives.

The Burlington Willow Ware Shops, Burlington, Ia., made a full showing of all kinds of florists' baskets and inside window boxes. These were very practical, the odd shaped handles and unique colorings giving them a very attractive appearance. A. F. Longren was in charge.

The A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, exhibited a nice line of florists' plant and cut flower baskets, all with metal containers. There were also wicker jardinières on stands and a large specimen of this character over which was suspended a wicker birdcage. Large figures of a soldier and a sailor, behind which were vases for long-stemmed flowers, were features. The representatives were Ed. Jacobs and H. O. Nichols.

The S. S. Pennock Co., Philadelphia, Pa., staged a full line of ribbons, corsage ties and pins, together with cut flower and plant baskets in variety. Jack Monshard was there with the glad hand.

There were two old, reliable ribbon houses who never miss. "Sprinkle-Proof" Sam Seligman represented Schloss Bros., 31-33 East 28th street, New York. His was a full display of all the standard, as well fancy, novelties in florists' requirements, together with a fine line of chiffons, a leader being in tricolors. All were arranged in Sam's best style. Wertheimer Bros., also of New York, had their usual fine assortment of ribbons, made especially for the florist trade; new lines suitable for baskets, corsages and spray decorations being prominent. Fancy chiffons were also a feature. Arthur S. Cohen and Samuel Eintrecht were in charge.

In the plant section, there were five exhibitors, all of whom made creditable displays. The Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, Pa., brought a very good line of foliage stock, prominent features being Ficus pandurata, Dracenas Massangeana and Warneckii, variegated pineapples, Norwood, Scottii and Teddy, Jr., ferns, Otaheite oranges, cyclamens and gardenias. As usual, there was a fine line of crotons, which were arranged decoratively in a large round bed. All of the stock showed a high state of cultivation, being particularly well grown. L. J. Seiger and C. Van welcomed the visitors.

The display of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., contained samples of most of their florists' stock in foliage plants and ferns, all the picture of health and vigor. Kentias, dracenas, crotons, cocos and others in variety, together with sample ferns in all sizes, were seen. Both of these exhibits were sold before they were staged, there being numerous bidders in both instances.

The Joseph Heacock Co., Wyncote, Pa., filled its space with superb kentias, splendidly grown, strong, vigorous stock that made a fine showing. There were a number of sizes, both in made-up and single specimens. Well done

Miss Bertha Meinhardt, St. Louis, Mo.
First Vice-Prest. Ladies' Society of Am. Florists.

cibotiums were also a feature. This exhibit also had a number of eager buyers on hand before the representatives, James Heacock, and Theodore Schober, arrived.

W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., had an interesting line of novelties, among them being tradescantias, Polypodium Mandiana, cut fronds of the same, and a crested form of Japanese nephrolepis. Dracenas and a new Begonia Rex were prominent. Mr. Manda was in charge.

J. A. Peterson & Sons, Cincinnati, O., had their usual line of fine, well grown Adiantum Farleyense, bird's nest ferns, Pandanus Veitchii, flowering begonias and cyclamens, all high-grade stock. J. A. Peterson looked after their welfare.

The Peters & Reed Pottery Co., Zanesville, O., made a display of its fancy moss Aztec jardinières, fern dishes, ornamental fern and bulb pans and cut flower vases. The designs and moss-green tones were rich and very pleasing. Florists' red pots were also a feature. D. W. Worthington had charge here.

Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago and New York, made the only extensive display of gladioli, filling a large space with seedlings and standard varieties. A large vase of 100 blooms of Chicago White, a good florists' flower, was conspicuous, as were other similar vases of America and Halley. A ruffled white seedling, raised on their Michigan farm, is a very promising variety. Another pure yellow seedling, called Owosso, is a winner. A number of Primulus seedlings were decidedly dainty and beautiful. American grown Paper White and Emperor narcissi, callas and freesias were also features. There was also a good collection of florists' foliage plants of the small varieties. T. D. Long, assisted by George Mohn, were the representatives.

The American Bulb Co., Chicago, exhibited bulbs of their improved freesia, Purity. There were medium to extra large bulbs, very plump and good looking stock. Several cases of large specimen cold-storage bulbs of Lilium mosaic appeared of a splendid quality. A. Miller was in charge here.

The J. A. Evans Co., Richmond, Ind., exhibited a section of its well known greenhouse construction and ventilating apparatus. In addition, an adjustable roller, steam-pipe carrier and detachable roller-bearing hanger, which can be placed over the main ventilator shaft pipe without taking it down, were interesting features. This display was presided over by John A. Evans.

The Missouri Pottery & Supply Co., St. Louis, Mo., had an excellent display of sample pots in all sizes, the exhibit being in charge of C. E. Mandeville. The Iowa Pottery Co. also showed samples in small sizes.

The Spokane Concrete Flower Pot Machine Co., Spokane, Wash., exploited pot making by the individual florist and distributed literature descriptive of their machines.

The Chicago Carton Co., Chicago, had a very attractive display of their flower boxes arranged against a velvet background. Julius Maas represented this firm.

The Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, had a good sized space with photographs and literature. Fred Lautenschlager welcomed the visitors here.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., with Martin Reukauf and I. Bayersdorfer in charge, distributed literature from their space.

The Duro Paper Products Co., Chicago, represented by Samuel Freund, exhibited florists' folding boxes.

Convention Notes.

Quite a number of the delegates motored to St. Louis, President Totty, with his wife and daughter, having the longest run from his home in Madison, N. J. Several days were spent in the run through New Jersey, Pennsylvania and at Wheeling, West Va. A day was spent at Richmond, Ind., where there was a reception at the Country Club. It was a very enjoyable trip with no mishaps.

Wm. F. Gude reported the sum of about $1,200 on hand for the William R. Smith memorial. He also told of the work done by the legislative committee in meeting various departments of the government throughout the year. The new questionnaire of the commerce commission was also read to prepare the members and help them in making their answers.

E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., called attention to the fact that he had said in the early days of the society, that it would never become a power until it had a financial backbone, but as he listened to the report of the treasurer, he realized it had come at last, and predicted a great future for the organization in its work.

F. R. Newbold, president of the Horticultural Society of New York, was voted $500 with which to assist in the maintenance of automobiles in hospital service in France. The autos had been given by the New York Florists' Club and the horticultural society, and are driven by chauffeurs from that city without pay.

The automobile ride for the ladies Wednesday afternoon was very enjoyable, the weather being delightful. There were 40 cars, which took a route through all of the parks and far out into the country, stopping at Sunset Inn, where luncheon was served. The return trip landed all at the Temple at five p. m.

Joseph H. Hill, Richmond, Ind., proposed a service flag to be displayed at all meetings showing the number of members now in the service of our country; also, that all dues of such be remitted during the period of the war. This met with instant approval.

W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., in sympathetic words, proposed a telegram be sent to Wm. J. Stewart, Boston, Mass., voicing the sentiment of the convention that he was sadly missed and hoping for his speedy recovery. This was heartily approved.

Secretary Esler, of the Florists' Hall Association, said he had attended many meetings of the S. A. F., but he never remembered one in which better attention was given to the proceedings, particularly at the opening session.

Matt Mann and Allie Zech, of Chicago, who started out to make the trip by auto, found the roads heavy and left their machine at Bloomington, arriving in St. Louis on the afternoon of the opening day.

J. A. Peterson and wife, of Cincinnati, O., motored to Detroit and through the western cities. They, however, had considerable motor trouble and bad roads, but survived it and arrived on time.

Many of the old familiar faces were missing, J. C. Vaughan, F. R. Pierson, Patrick Welch, W. J. Stewart, P. J. Foley, John Fotheringham, E. J. Fancourt, and others.

Several letters were read, one from Mrs. R. E. Darbee, San Francisco, Calif., who was among the others unable to be present.

A. F. Amling, Chicago, with wife, son and friends, made the trip by auto by way of Mammoth Cave, Ky., arriving Tuesday.

W. A. Kennedy, wife and party, of Milwaukee, Wis., came on by auto, reaching St. Louis Tuesday night after a hard trip.

An appropriation of $250 for the use of the committee on school gardens was also voted.

St. Louis hospitality has lost none of its old-time vigor in all the rigors of war.

Everybody attended the opening meeting and stayed to the close.

Cleveland had it all her own way as the convention of 1920.

The salesmen in the trade exhibition hall reported business good.

H. C. Irish was on hand to welcome his many old friends.

Florists' Telegraph Delivery.

The meeting of this live auxiliary of the S. A. F. was held in Moolah Temple, in one of the smaller halls, which had been handsomely decorated with flowers, pennants and flags. There was a splendid attendance of some 150 persons, members of the F. T. D. and others, who were all interested in the business. L. Jules Bourdet, vice-president of the S. A. F., welcomed the delegates and President A. H. Hummert, of the florists' club, also voiced the pleasure of the St. Louis brethren in having the convention come to St. Louis and promised the visitors the time of their lives. Irwin Bertermann, who was loudly applauded, spoke of the great and rapid improvement in the importance of the society, as evidenced by the large gathering in these troubled times. This, the greatest country in the world, he said, was strong enough to uphold its principles, and that there would be greater business after the war than ever, which, under the organization of growers, wholesale and retail men, would go forward wonderfully. A business of over $2,000,000 annually was now transacted and worked up entirely through the F. T. D., and still growing with a bright future.

President W. F. Gude then took the chair and amid cheers and applause

PRESIDENT GUDE'S ADDRESS.

This is not a time for an annual address, as that is scheduled for our annual meeting, which will be held at Cleveland, O., beginning at 10 o'clock on the morning of October 8, at which we hope to have the largest gathering of retail florists and the largest number of new ideas and practical thoughts to be worked out ever brought to a florist convention.

This meeting is called to give an opportunity to the local members, and those members from distant places who come to attend the meetings of the S. A. F. convention, our mother society, and who may not be able to attend the convention of the F. T. D. in October, and to that end we ask you to become thoroughly acquainted with one another, rub shoulder to shoulder with each other. Do not be afraid to ask questions, because there is a great deal to be learned. None of us know it all. Consider that we are almost 1,500 miles from either coast, and the north and south, east and west, the great difference in climate and the great difference in cultural production, and the comparative ease and troubleless times of the man in the south (where frost is practically unknown) as compared with the fellow who is fighting for his very existence with the thermometer far below zero, where, no matter how fine his flowers are, they may freeze before his customer gets them.

Rub shoulder to shoulder with the pessimist, if there are any present, and I want to assure you that the warm, hearty welcome of the St. Louis gentlemen accorded us on former occasions permits no pessimism for the present. No doubt you have met the so-called florist who knows that had he gone into any other business he would have been rich in dollars and cents today and instead of having to work so hard everything would have been serene and beautiful. The trouble in securing coal and getting good stock, trouble with his help, trouble with his customers, trouble with his collections, and everything seems to be wrong; anything would have been preferable to the business that he is pursuing.

Contrast that with the man who labors with the conviction that he who serves best, profits most, and by putting that into execution morning, noon and night he acquires a host of friends, a host of satisfied customers, and his business grows. He does not know how, but it just simply grows. He goes to bed at night and sleeps soundly, is able to pay his bills, while the pessimist never saw things so dull and does not see how they could be worse. Why, ladies and gentlemen, so far as the United States of America is concerned, to the best of my knowledge and belief, there never was, or is today, a more pleasant occupation than that of the retail florist, whose greatest desire should be to express sentiment in the most practical way, forming the connecting link between the finite and the infinite, and consequently, irrespective of dollars and cents, they are the happiest people on the face of the earth, conscious of the fact that each morning brings us a new duty, a new commission to extend sympathy for someone else and convey lovely greetings to others, and, in short, to deal with the great human family on a plane of higher ideals, which should tend to make us all better, morally, spiritually and mentally, if not financially.

The F. T. D., in the last three years, has made phenomenal strides and, thanks to the powers that be, the uncanny forebodings that flowers should be shut out as non-essentials in war-times proved to be a myth, because flowers, while this terrible war is going on, are really more essential than ever, and so considered by all the reasonable thinking, well meaning people, for flowers from time immemorial have been the power of carrying messages of love and sentiment such as no language up to date has been able to convey.

Our secretary has worked hard and long and secured for us a large increase in membership—maybe not as large as we had hoped for, but, with your assistance, the membership will continue to grow and our usefulness become more effective. Our finances are in fine shape, as shown by the treasurer's report and detailed statement of receipts and expenditures from August 1, 1917, to July 31, 1918. So, from present indications, we have nothing to complain about and everything to be thankful and happy for.

Our association has correspondents in all parts of the world, and, with the assistance of the individual members, it will be only a short while when it will be just as easy to have an order delivered by cable to Egypt, England, France or any other foreign country as it is now to telegraph to any part of the United States or Canada.

Going from this meeting, I wish to leave this thought with you: Individually, we can accomplish little; collectively, nothing is impossible. So feel that, no matter how small your business may seem, that you as an individual can find something to benefit your fellow florists and by doing that little, will greatly benefit yourself. Kindly remember this, and do something and you will all feel better for it. We hope to meet you on the convention floor, October 8 next, at the big get-together business meeting in the beautiful city of Cleveland, O. Bring all your ideas, suggestions and criticisms, and come prepared to exploit and substantiate them, and thereby help to make our association better for your being a member.

OTHER LIVE WIRES SPEAK.

Secretary Albert Pochelon said he wanted a plan to get more out of the selling plan through telegraph delivery and that there should be a way to encourage more notice that orders could be sent by mail and the business of the organization would be wonderfully increased. He also wanted the collection system improved so that the first delayed bills should be sent to the organization, paid by them, and the delinquent members automatically dropped. He added that every effort should be made by all members to get at least one live member in every community, which would greatly increase the efficiency of the organization. This live wire, as he was introduced by President Gude, describes the selection of the new design selected from 185 sketches as the best submitted. He said he looked forward to a great meeting in Cleveland in October.

Irwin Bertermann, who was asked to take a seat on the platform, again addressed the members and said their officers were the cream of the flower trade, the liveliest bunch of men in the business. He spoke of the great work or the late J. A. Valentine, and the members all arose and stood for a minute bowed in his memory. Treasurer Wm. L. Rock defended the Mercury emblem of the society which had become associated with its work, and said with some minor changes it would probably be the most efficient. President Gude impressed the importance of acknowledging orders as soon as received and paying bills promptly.

George Asmus praised the slogan, "Say It With Flowers," and that advertising men had said it is the best of any trade emblem in the land. He felt it should in some way be worked into the F. T. D. emblem. There would be a great field in furnishing flowers and plants for memorial services held for the heroes killed abroad in every community, he believed. They had felt the impetus in Chicago and florists everywhere should be alive to the opportunity these services presented. Robert C. Kerr spoke in the same vein, and said the Red Cross in his city, Houston, Tex., had undertaken to send flowers to all such bereaved families. The publicity movement had been greatly helped by John Young's appeal during his recent tour of the country, Mr. Kerr stated, but only two per cent of the whole trade had contributed, which he thought very unfair, as all were alike benefited.

Edward Green, San Antonio, Tex., urged that a limit be placed on orders of not less than $3.00, which was discouraged by President Gude and others. Secretary Pochelon said anybody would gladly take an order for $1.00 in his own store and should do the same for his other members. Max Schling, of New York, impressed the importance of doing small things well, as they often grew into matters of much importance. In giving the service at any cost on an order for even 25 cents, willingly filled, had grown a business of $10,000. He had secured subscriptions to the publicity fund, and was as glad to get one subscription of only $2 a year for four years, on account of the circumstances of the giver, as another of $200 for the same period. He said he felt sure it would not be long before florists everywhere would be begging to get into the organization, and thought the Mercury emblem a splendid design, as it represented flight and speed, a trade mark that stood for eficiency in the delivery of flowers. Secretary Pochelon decried codes which did not save much. He also suggested an associate membership for men in the business in allied lines. He thought the S. A. F. should should give $1,000 annually to the F. T. D. for its good work in increasing the membership of the parent society.

As an example of what can be done by working up F. T. D. business in one's own town, Chas. P. Muehler, Wichita, Kas., sent out 850 orders last year to be delivered by members of the trade in other cities.

President Gude, in adjourning the meeting, emphasized the importance of doing little things in a big way, which in turn would develop wonderfully. This was declared by members to have been a meeting full of enthusiasm and good for the future of the organization.

Ladies' Society of American Florists.

The Ladies' Society of American Florists, held its annual meeting in Moolah Temple, St. Louis, Mo., August 21. The attendance was excellent and the proceedings were entered into with much enthusiasm. Officers were elected as follows: Mrs. J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, O., president; Mrs. Philip Breitmeyer, Detroit, Mich., first vice-president; Mrs. W. A. Kennedy, Milwaukee, Wis., second vice-president; Mrs. H. G. Berning, St. Louis, Mo., secretary; Miss Bertha Meinhardt, St. Louis, Mo., treasurer.

SECRETARY MRS. A. M. HERR'S REPORT.

The death of our late secretary, Mrs. George W. Smith, came as a surprise and shock to the great majority of our members. This loss was keenly felt, and through it it became necessary to make some changes in the office. Having been closely connected with Mrs. Smith during her incumbency of the office, it was my privilege to render what assistance I could in the rearranging and straightening out of the dues, receipts, etc. In order that all moneys might be properly checked up, receipts were sent to all members whose dues were paid during February and March. Our president, Mrs. Julius Roehrs, asked me to continue the work until a secretary could be appointed. Later she appointed me to the office. As the new by-laws were in operation it was necessary for me to resign as treasurer, after having held the office for 10 years. Mrs. C. H. Totty was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation.

Since January 1 four members have resigned, three on account of closing out of business, and the other gave no excuse. Six new members have been added, and seven life memberships have been taken.

Three of our number have been called to the Great Beyond: Mrs. Geo. W. Smith, Mrs. J. W. Poehlmann and Miss Gertrude Page.

The report of the treasurer is evidence that we are not falling behind in our receipts, and we hope for a large addition to the membership at this convention.

Florists' Hall Association.

The Florists' Hall Association held an interesting and well attended meeting in one of the side halls of Moolah Temple, St. Louis, Mo., at 9:00 a. m., August 21. In the election of officers, James S. Wilson, of Des Moines, Ia., was chosen to fill the unexpired term of the late J. A. Valentine on the board of directors and James W. Heacock, Wyncote, Pa., was elected treasurer.

The other officers were continued as follows: E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., president; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., vice-president, and John G. Esler, Saddle River, N. J., secretary. The report of the secretary for the period ending August 1, 1918, showed the amount paid for losses during the previous year to be $29,652.21. The total receipts, with balance, for the year, were $58,101.96, the disbursements $38,715.90, leaving a balance on hand of $19,445.05. The total number of members on the date of closing the report was 1,589.

"In Hess' Garden."

The following with accompanying illustration, appeared recently in Concord "Con," an Omaha, Neb., publication devoted exclusively to winning the war. The gentleman referred to is, of course, none other than J. J. Hess.

Prof. A. C. Beal, Ithaca, N. Y.
Secretary American Gladiolus Society.

treasurer of the Society of American Florists and member of the firm of Hess & Swoboda, well-known florists of the Nebraska metropolis:

A little green bug and a cutworm and grub
And spotted the greenest of shoots,
To find a new garden with flowers and things
To be their legitimate prey.

The little green bug like an airship flew 'round
And spotted the greenest of shoots,
The cutworm attacked with his vicious trench knife.

While the grub subterranean for the roots.

The flowers and plants just wilted from fright,
And the trumpet vine twisted for aid;
And Hess was alarmed at the racket and fuss,
—He was working nearby with a spade.

A counter offensive he soon organized,

A squirt gun he used on the bug,
The cutworm he crushed 'neath the heel of his shoe.

And picked the grub in a jug.

And this is the reason, oh, Concorders all,
Why Hess was enabled today
To do all us all up like a June wedding feast
In his matchless and flowery way.

American Gladiolus Society.

GOOD ATTENDANCE AND EXHIBITION.

The ninth annual meeting and exhibition of the American Gladiolus Society, brief announcement of the opening of which was made in last week's issue, page 192, was held in the Iroquois hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., August 14-17, the attendance being very good and the displays of excellent quality, the local florists giving liberal assistance. At the close of the exhibition the flowers were donated to various hospitals. Considering wartime conditions, the purpose of the convention to encourage the growth and culture of this pretty flower and to assist the interest of the members of the society doubtless accomplished much.

At the business session, following the address of the president, A. E. Kunder, of Goshen, Ind., Professor A. C. Beal of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., was elected permanent secretary of the society, he having filled that office since the death of the late Henry Youell, who had been the secretary since the organization of the society.

PRESIDENT KUNDER'S ADDRESS.

Not being blessed with great oratorical ability it has been a matter of considerable concern to me as to how to address you on this pleasant occasion, for it is indeed pleasant to meet so many fine people, as one always does, at the annual convention of the American Gladiolus Society, and enjoy with them their wonderful display. We all know what is by common consent "The Queen of Flowers," and I am sure I need not tell you what flower is very rapidly becoming by common consent, "The King of the Garden." It is not necessary to tell the members of the American Gladiolus Society of the value and importance of our splendid flower, but I feel the importance of repeating on this occasion a few things which have already been better said by others. No class of citizens more keenly appreciate the value of conservation in everything these troublous times than do the members of our society, but many, who have not had the time to consider the subject, have not yet realized the vast importance of floriculture as the handmaid of the agriculturist and grower of the primary necessities for the table. As the musician is the great inspirer of the men who do more serious fighting, so is the grower of flowers equally or more the inspiration and cheer of those who do the patient and arduous labor of growing the products which furnish the food, and give the strength to those who do the fighting for the cause of our great nation.

In England, France and other nations, these great principles are fully appreciated, as witness the increasing culture of flowers among the common people; even on the battlefield, the soldier has his garden where flowers are grown, and soon in our own country the same need will be better understood. The soldier on the battle line can only use the weapon, but when wounded, his comfort is the nurse, and his greatest cheer are the flowers which are brought to his bedside. This is, in brief, our best reason for the growing and showing the people our favorite flower, and I would say to our members, "Do not be discouraged, be of good cheer, you will soon reap your reward in the appreciation of a grateful people."

Nothing is so restful to the busy man of affairs as his gardening, and who could bear to grow a garden without flowers. The essentials, so called, of the garden are the food of the body, but the flowers are the food of the soul. The essentials of the field were intended for food, but flowers to give us cheer; and when was man ever in such need of cheer as now? We all are hoping for early victory and honorable peace, when our loved ones shall return to their homes. Can you imagine a greater disappointment to a returned hero than to be taken by you to your gardens and he find therein no flowers?

I speak the sentiment of our members who love the gladiolus (and who does not?), in expressing their appreciation to the mayor and to the people of Buffalo for the many kindnesses shown us during our stay. To the press, our thanks for its presentation of our objects and aims. I am sure we cannot forget the great efforts for the success of our exhibition on the part of Professor A. C. Beal, our kindly secretary, and Madison Cooper of the Flower Grower, for his great enthusiasm and encouragement. Every grower appreciates fully the toil and sacrifice of all our exhibitors, for certain it is that in a financial way, there is only a loss. The greatest reward to our exhibitors in such times as these is in the knowledge of having contributed to the noble work well done. I hope I have made clear our principal aim in coming together during such trying times.

In conclusion, I desire to say a few words to our visitors, and the general public, and invite them to join in the work of our splendid society, and participate in its benefits. To those not yet so well acquainted with our organization, let us say, that our society was organized in Boston nine years ago. Its aims and objects are in part to promote the interest and welfare of its members, to encourage local exhibitions all over our beloved country, to the end that a greater interest may be cultivated, not only in the gladiolus, but for all that is beautiful in flowers, and in life in every way. Our official organ is the Flower Grower, of Calcium, N. Y., a very ably edited monthly devoted to the gladiolus, as well as to an interest in other beautiful flowers. Every grower of a garden should be a subscriber as, among its contributors, are many of the leading authorities of our own and other countries. Our membership consists of many people prominent in the best in floriculture from all over the world. It is for your benefit I ask you to join our society, and become an active member. Aid us for the good of our fellowmen in making it one of the most valuable and important floricultural societies in the world.

Our secretary, Professor A. C. Beal, of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., will be pleased to give anyone more detailed information. Much as I regret that we are holding this year's convention under the dark clouds of a sad war, I sincerely hope to be with you again next year under the happy skies of an honorable peace.

SECRETARY BEAL'S REPORT.

This is the ninth annual meeting of the American Gladiolus Society, and it is our hope that it will be productive of plans and measures for making the tenth year the most effective in results of any in the history of the society. Let us one and all lend our efforts in making the coming year yield great results in the advancement of the gladiolus. If we look back over the past 10 years, we can see the very considerable advance that has been made. There is a greater work for this society to do. We should do all we can to stimulate interest in the organization by offering our medals and certificates to the local shows. The question is sometimes raised, whether it is desirable to offer the medals without restrictions as is the case at present. If a local society could affiliate in some way with our organization, it should be helpful to both. We might also offer our medals through such state fairs as have a worthy flower exhibit. It would seem as if no award should be made unless the winning exhibitors are members of our society.

Supplying the Flower Grower to the members appears to meet the very apparent need of an official organ for the society. No doubt it can serve a very useful purpose in keeping in touch with our members. To accomplish this purpose, the advisability of having a column in the Flower Grower for the publication of items of special interest to the members is something that may appeal to you.

If the society had the financial support, it could do many things not possible to carry out now. A complete catalogue of all varieties with name of originator, introducer, year of introduction, with a brief, clear-cut description, would be very useful to our members. This is a work for the future.

The last annual meeting took action toward the appointment of a publicity committee, and J. J. Lane, who became chairman of this committee, conducted an active campaign for new members. Although operations were not started until too late to get much publicity for the society, through the catalogue circulation of the commercial growers, and notwithstanding war conditions, we have received 165 new members. Several of these are in Canada, New Zealand and Australia. The late secretary reported 10 new members last year. When I took over the secretary's office, I found 83 paid members on the roll. Since that time 16 old members have paid up. Some of those living abroad, have paid two years' dues. The total membership at present is 264. This is a very substantial gain, but it would seem that we ought to be able to have a society of at least 500 members, and I have faith to believe that when the war ends, it will be possible to build up the membership to that number. The credit for the increase in new members is largely due to the excellent work of the president, A. E. Kunder, J. J. Lane and Madison Cooper, editor of the Flower Grower. The society certainly owes them a debt of gratitude for their good work which brought such results in these difficult times. The fact that the society makes a return to its members by sending them the Flower Grower has been a material aid I am sure.

The American Gladiolus Society sustained a severe loss in the death of its late secretary, Henry Youell, who had been an officer in the society from its inception. His extensive knowledge of the gladiolus, gained during a lifetime made him an invaluable member in the councils of the organization. Another veteran in the gladiolus world, Matthew Crawford, passed away during the year. As a writer on horticultural subjects, as well as the pioneer grower of gladioli, he was favorably and widely known. These men did much to advance the interest in the gladiolus as a garden flower and as a florist's cut flower. Their passing leaves it to us to "carry on."

The members of the American Gladiolus Society owe it to themselves as well as to the society to rally against the foolish sentiment found in some quarters that flowers have no place in our lives during war time. We are organized to promote the interests of a flower suitable to every home garden, where it can send out its message of peace and hope and even joy to anxious hearts that long for loved ones far from the home scenes. Let us then, while doing our part in this struggle, seek the consolation and the joys of growing flowers.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The routine of the work in the flower shop is much the same one week as another these dull August days, and there will not be much change for the better in the demand for flowers until well into September. The thing to do now is to make the best use of this spare time. The wide-awake man sees to it that every day pays at least its of standing pieces. Growers of Easter lilies, with a good stock of bulbs on hand, would do well to ease up a bit now and come in later when they will command their own price, as the gladioli are a splendid substitute.

Asters are now a factor. These should be presented at their best, which is, of course, true of all flowers. To pack them closely together in jars in the case may be all right for storage, but it does not show the beautiful and graceful lines or feature them in any way. A flower that is worth while carrying in stock, should have its place to the front with others. All should be own expenses,—in very few shops is this possible with current business, but on the principle that every penny saved is a penny earned, he is now busy every spare moment in filling a large order which he obtained by going over his last year's Christmas business and duplicating and adding to the stock which is such a factor and indispensable at that busy time. He knows he will be short handed the coming season, and that all the magnolia and oak leaf wreaths and crosses, immortal and chenille that are put up at this time, will be on hand ready to be brought out and displayed, relieving the extra night work and strain of that busy period.

It will be very easy to earn the running expenses of the store these idle days, with work of this character, and while no money comes in, it is earned just the same, and is sure to come back with interest in the near future.

Hydrangea paniculata is now in one of the summer's flowering shrubs. A good, in fact, an apparent overstock should be kept constantly on hand throughout the season. As a decorative feature about the store or in the window, either by itself or in combination with gladioli, Golden Glow or other outside flowers, it is indispensable. For close set design work, there is nothing better, the white foundation making an admirable background for a decorative finish in any color.

Gladioli of the better varieties are well worth the dollar or two extra per hundred. It is the flower that is just a little better than the ordinary that attracts attention, which is half, if not all the way to the sale. Nothing could be more choice than the large pure white spikes of this flower for sprays or design work, particularly in the foot invitingly displayed, some perhaps more conspicuously than others. The fibre or galvanized iron jars are all right for storage, but fancy stone or glass vases and vase handle baskets are now used in the flower cases of most of the up-to-date shops to show their stock to the best advantage. Asters or roses are just as easily sold or handled in these baskets as in jars, while the decorative effect obtained adds considerably to the appearance and selling value, as frequently with a slight addition, the basket is included in the sale.

This is a good time to get up a picture or display frame of good size in which at various times, particularly during the winter months, there can be shown vases of choice flowers, the first of the season, or baskets or other artistic work. The frame can be covered with magnolia leaves, which if neatly placed and gilded present an appearance quite as effective as those of the gallery. A box 12 to 15 inches deep attached to the back with a movable top so that various colored backgrounds may be arranged, completes the frame. Concealed electric lights at top or sides inside the box are necessary to get the best effect. As a window ornament, particularly at night, when the store is closed, it is sure to attract and call attention to the store.

Juneau Florists, Juneau, Alaska.

The establishment of the Juneau Florists is, we believe, the only complete establishment of its kind in Alaska, and as can be readily seen by the accompanying illustration, their product is well handled. Included in their July offerings were carnations and dahlias of fine quality.

THE CARNATION.

Bringing in Field Plants.

The planting season for the field plants of carnations is now on, and every effort should be put forth in the work of transferring the plants from the field to the greenhouse benches as quickly as the quarters are in readiness and the weather conditions will permit. Before commencing the planting, be sure that every part of the work in the field has been properly taken care of, and do not let any other work interfere with the care of the plants until the last one has been brought inside, because every plant has got to count this year. It has been usually the habit, (particularly when there was a surplus of plants), to let up a little on the attention given the field plants. This ought not to be allowed this year when there is such a heavy demand for the plants.

The fuel restrictions and changed conditions will cause the growers to practice entirely different methods the coming winter in running their establishments so as to get the best results from every foot of space. This is the time, before the plants go into the benches, to figure on this; map out the plans, and be governed accordingly. As an example, take a house of plants intended to be run with a low temperature to conserve fuel during the winter months, and with the idea of obtaining the main crop of flowers in the spring, when it will not be necessary to use as much fuel to keep up the temperature, a house under this plan, can be selected. In the smaller plants also, should there be a surplus on hand, two can be planted together. The larger plants, depended upon to produce the main crop of flowers throughout the winter, can then be planted in a separate space by themselves. Another important consideration is that of color; the heavy demand in the spring is for white and the rose pink colors, such as Mrs. C. W. Ward and Rosette, while for Christmas, reds are most called for, very few of the reds or scarlets being in demand in the spring. Light pink, white and assorted colors should form the bulk of the plants for continuous cutting throughout the season.

If the planting field is very wet, it is best to wait a few days for the plants to dry out and harden up a bit before lifting. Carnation plants recover better, and become established quicker, if lifted when the ground is a little on the dry side; wet ground at this time of the year, quickly causes a soft growth, which is very hard to recover from in the transplanting. Lifting the plants in the field is one of the parts of the work that cannot be too carefully done so as to save as many of the roots as possible. Place a man in charge of the digging who understands his work and give him enough help to do the job properly. After the plants are lifted, a portion of the soil should be carefully shaken from the roots and the plants set upright in flats, the roots moistened and the flats carted to the greenhouse as soon as a load is ready. Do not allow them to remain out in the air any longer than is necessary to make the load. Allowing the plants to wilt from exposure at time of lifting gives them a severe check and causes much of the lower grass to shrivel and dry.

Every preparation on the inside should be complete before attempting to lift any plants, so as to enable the planters to keep steadily ahead of the diggers. Put a mud shade on the glass to break the full rays of the sun, and have the benches of each house filled up and levelled off in readiness to receive the plants. Be particular about the planting; the plants should not be set any deeper than they were growing in the field. Also, spread out the roots as much as possible and plant firm. Allow a little basin to remain directly at the base of each plant, so that they can be watered at the roots for the first two or three waterings without the rest of the soil in the bench becoming saturated. One of the secrets of a bench of carnations doing well from the start of the season, is due partly to allowing the roots to have plenty of fresh soil to work in.

Take pains to have the rows planted straight both ways, so that every part of the bench is working, and to make it easier to attach the wire supports as well as when the job is complete and you can be justified in being proud of your work. Water the plants as each bench is planted, then when the house is completed do not consider the job finished until all the walks have been cleaned up and all the rubbish removed from the house. After the first watering, the plants can be kept from wilting by syringing lightly two or three times a day, according to the weather, but do not allow any of the conditions in the houses to become extremely wet or dry. It takes about a week under favorable conditions for the roots to start out enough for some of the shade to be removed from the glass.

Do not let up in the care of the plants after the houses are filled, but be just as particular in attending to the general routine of the plants' care as ever.

Unselfish Leaders.

ARE YOU ON THE LIST?

"There is not a single selfish element, so far as I can see, in the cause we are fighting for. We are fighting for what we believe and wish to be the rights of mankind and for the future peace and security of the world. To do this great thing worthily, successfully, we must devote ourselves to the service without regard to profit or material advantage, and with an energy and intelligence that will rise to the level of the enterprise itself."

WOODROW WILSON.

President of the United States.

Note the comparison!

Does not this inspiring message of our president also express the sentiments of all those who have unselfishly contributed to our publicity campaign fund?

Those who have given will have the full knowledge and satisfaction that the cause is worthy, and that we are raising and elevating our own standards to such a high plane that they will not only reap the benefits but also the thanks of the entire floral craft for the beginning of what we hope in later years will be one of the best efforts since the origin of the S. A. F.—the publicity campaign.

Now, to those who have as yet not contributed: Can you afford to stay out of this unselfish movement which is for the general good of the entire trade? Send in your contribution now, so that our publicity finance committee, under so able a leadership as our good friend, Chairman George Asmus, will feel that the members of the S. A. F. are doing their full duty and appreciate the efforts given.

Greenhouse Management—II.

The first of this series of interesting articles by L. C. Corbett, Horticulturist, Bureau of Plant Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., was printed in our issue of August 10, pages 130-131. Another will appear at an early date.

During the summer months, the greenhouse heating plant should be thoroughly overhauled and put in condition to insure its operating at maximum efficiency during the firing period. There are several ways in which the efficiency of the plant may be increased, the first of which is by cleaning the boiler so that no heat will be lost through soot covered tubes or fireways in the boiler. This is especially necessary when bituminous coal is used. Records show that a very thin film of soot on the fireways or tubes of the boiler will, in the majority of cases, prevent the transmission of 25 to 35 per cent of the heat in the fuel. This means that this heat passes up the stack and is lost.

In locations where the water contains lime or other scale forming ingredients, it is wise to clean the boiler thoroughly with some scale removing compound, as a very thin film of scale is liable to cause undue loss of heat. Scale is not as liable to form in hot water boilers as in steam boilers, but if the water contains lime or some other ingredients, scale will be deposited in even the hot water heating boiler.

Good draft is essential to the economical consumption of fuel. The boiler should have sufficient draft so that the damper in the smoke pipe can be kept nearly closed most of the time. A boiler of such size that it can be operated without being forced, will, in most cases, be more economical than a boiler that must be forced continually, to do the work. The capacity, within certain limits, of any boiler depends very largely on the size and height of the stack. The accompanying table gives the size and height of stacks recommended for different size boilers.

Rating of hot water boiler in square feet	Size of stack in inches
	Round	Square

The height of the chimney, or stack, must be determined by the height of surrounding buildings or trees, whether the plant is located on a hill or in a valley, and by other factors. To insure good draft, it is necessary that the chimney extend several feet above any surrounding obstruction, otherwise poor draft is liable to result. If the present chimney is too small, it may be possible to increase the draft by increasing the height of the chimney. In many cases, a few feet increase in the height of the chimney, will provide the necessary extra draft. Of course, forced draft apparatus may be resorted to, but anything that depends upon motive power of any sort for its successful operation, is to be avoided if possible. As a rule, it will be far better policy to secure the needed draft through an increase in the height or size of the chimney than by the installation of forced draft apparatus. This is particularly true of hot water heating plants, as in this case, no steam is usually available to operate the engine or turbine to supply the draft. In the case of larger plants, a practice frequently followed is to have one boiler in the plant operated on a steam basis at high pressure, for the purpose of furnishing steam for the pumps and other uses. When this is the case, forced draft apparatus can be used to good advantage.

Hot water heating plants, depending upon gravity circulation, must, to insure economical results, be very carefully planned, and in addition to this, the pipes and radiation manifolds must be kept in perfect alignment if good circulation is to be insured. Greenhouses are liable to settle, allowing the heating pipes to get out of alignment, thus interfering with the rapid circulation of the water. The water in a hot water system is used merely as a medium for transferring the heat from the coal to the greenhouses themselves. For this reason, the faster the water circulates, the more efficient, as a rule, will the system be. Time spent in re-aligning the pipes so that they have a uniform grade, will be a material aid in economical operation of the plant. In many cases, the efficiency of a hot water heating plant may be very materially increased by re-locating the expansion tank. In most hot water heating systems, the expansion tank is located at the highest point in the system, which in the case of gravity systems, is as a rule, near the boiler. In former years, it was the custom to run the pipes up hill to the far end of the houses and back to the return inlet of the boiler. This necessitated the location of the expansion tank at the opposite end of the houses from the boiler. It has been found, however, that by taking the flow pipe from the boiler, and carrying it to a point as near the ridge of the houses as possible, and then allowing the pipes to drop gradually to the far end of the house and back to the boiler with the expansion tank immediately under the roof of the boiler room, gives better results.

The higher the expansion tank, the greater the pressure on the system, and the higher it is possible to carry the temperature of the water. Many plants utilize closed expansion tanks located at any convenient point in the boiler room, these tanks operating upon exactly the same principle as a pneumatic water supply system tank. The expansion line from the heating system enters the tank at the bottom, and as the water expands and enters the tank, the entrapped air is compressed, thus increasing the pressure on the entire system, and, of course, making it possible to carry the temperature of the water up to 240 to 250 degrees without trouble. This as a rule means a more efficient system. The same results may be secured by connecting the heating system to the city water works system, thus insuring that the system will always be filled and that the expansion will be taken care of in this manner. This places the same pressure on the heating system as is carried on the city water system, enabling the operator to carry the temperature up to 220 or 240 degrees, the temperature depending on the pressure carried on the city water system.

In many cases, it is impossible to make any extensive changes in the plan of the heating system, but the re-location of the expansion tank need involve but very little expense, and will, in many cases, improve the efficiency of the plant 15 or 20 per cent.

In systems where the pipes are not properly graded and where there is difficulty in getting the water to circulate, it is possible to install at moderate cost, a simple type of pump for aiding the circulation of the water. Several types of pumps are used for this purpose. A type of circulating generator, consisting of a propeller so arranged that it may be operated by a belt from a motor, is a simple piece of apparatus that can be made from pipe fittings at very slight cost. The parts are easily secured at any plumbing supply house, and the amount of power required to operate this device is very small indeed.

Centrifugal pumps, operated by electric motor, gasoline or steam engines, are in many cases, used to increase the rapidity of the circulation in the system. These pumps are very satisfactory, and are very widely used. The cost is comparatively low, and in many cases, they soon pay for themselves in fuel saved and in better results secured by more uniform heating of the houses.

Direct acting steam pumps are perhaps more widely used for increasing the circulation in hot water heating systems than any other type of pump. They have the advantage of extreme reliability, and are installed in some of the largest and most up-to-date hot water heating plants in the country. The steam used to operate these pumps is, as a rule, taken from one boiler of the plant, and after passing through the pumps, is discharged into a hot water heater connected with the main heating system so that no heat is lost by using the pumps.

Repacking and fitting of the valves of these pumps will increase their efficiency and be of considerable assistance in fuel economy and it should be the aim of every operator of hot water heating plants to put every single piece of equipment in the plant in first-class order so that it will operate to the maximum efficiency. The aggregate saving to be had through this attention, will, in many cases, save at least one-quarter to one-third of the fuel ordinarily used.

In steam heating systems, it is particularly desirable that the boilers be located lower than the system itself so as to insure the condensation returning to the boiler. Many plants are so constructed that the condensation must be pumped back to the boilers. This is an un-economical method, and it would often pay growers to turn their heating system right-side up, instead of leaving it upside down as it now is. While this would involve considerable re-arrangement of the piping system, and would of course mean moving the boiler room and boilers, yet from figures on file in this office, it is very apparent that this would, in many cases, pay. From a comparison of results secured from two plants of about the same size, one of which has the boiler room properly located, the other with the boiler room at the highest point on the uphill side of the houses, it has been shown that the plant with the boilers improperly located, uses almost twice as much fuel for the same area as the other plant.

Good draft is essential to economical burning of fuel, and the same factors hold true in the case of steam plants as in the case of hot water heating plants. This has been brought out in a previous paragraph.

One of the easiest ways of improving the efficiency of a steam heated plant, is to install automatic air valves in the lines wherever there is a possibility of a pocket of air forming. These air valves remove air from the system automatically and insure good circulation. The installation of these valves is very simple, it being necessary only to drill the pipe, tap it out and screw the air valve in place.

The most promising method of saving fuel is by practicing economy in the boiler room, by careful and intelligent firing, and by keeping the boilers clean and in good condition, and, as will be discussed in another article, by the substitution of cool crops wherever possible for crops demanding high temperatures. By following these suggestions, greenhouse men should be able to get through the coming season without suffering any material loss. In fact, they may be able to make the year as successful as any in the past.

The Truth About Merchandise.

There was a message from one of the big western cities the other day that was printed in a New York paper. Its heading ran, "No New Dresses for Loan Workers" and its sub-head announced "1,000,000 Women to Be Enrolled on Economy Basis." The text gave voice to the slogan of "No New Dresses," and included the statement from a woman prominent in the public eye that she had not had a new dress for the past three years. It was the voice of women who apparently know little of business conditions in the merchandise world today, for to kill business is to kill the goose that is consistently laying the golden egg. These women emphasized that thrift must become fashionable.

Let us assume for a moment that all the women in the United States would decide to abide by this form of thrift. The merchants might well close up all shops. The manufacturers would accordingly have to shut down their factories. The producers of raw materials would not be able to give employment to the thousands who count on the work entailed in such production. In short the American world of merchandise would come to a standstill, the world which produces the very money these kindly women would collect for liberty would be completely disabled, and the ability to secure money for our boys would be killed at its very inception.

In place of the slogan "No New Dresses" there should be the battle cry of "Help the American industries; buy whatever you need, but buy wisely." A fine spirit of co-operation with American producers would keep the big and little stores going, and would give employment to thousands and thousands of men, women, and children, workers who constitute the very backbone of our army's supply.

The elimination of thoughtless and useless shopping that many women have become addicted to would be an excellent step in the direction of facilitating the sale of the new Liberty Loan—but to begin a deliberate plan to stop the wheel of merchandise progress would be defeating the ends that are to win the war! There has never been a time in history when there was such a crying need for women to become "merchandise informed" as there is today.—New York Globe.

Canadian Horticultural Association.

Supplementing our account of the opening session of the Canadian Horticultural Association, held at Ottawa, Ont., August 13-16, mention of which was made in last week's issue, page 190, a lively interest was maintained throughout the deliberations at the following sessions. The papers presented all showed careful thought and brought out many interesting points in their discussion. The committee on president's address reported that he had covered the situation so thoroughly that it was hard for them to make any further recommendations. A letter of regret at being unable to attend was received from an old friend and member of the association, Harry Philpot, of Winnipeg, and the secretary was instructed to make acknowledgement of same and express the sympathy of the society in the death of Mrs. Philpot, which occurred a short time ago. The report of the judges of the trade exhibition indicated that while the number of displays was not as large as in former years, owing to wartime conditions and shortage of supplies in many lines, those staged were of the highest character. A committee on the coal situation was appointed. A pleasant feature of the convention was the receipt of a telegram from President Charles H. Totty of the Society of American Florists, extending the best wishes and congratulations of that organization and the feeling of assurance that both bodies would always work shoulder to shoulder in the interests of the gallant men fighting together in France that freedom may endure for all time.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: George Douglas, Toronto, president; E. B. Hamilton, London, first vice-president; J. McKee, Ottawa, second vice-president; H. J. Eddy, Westmount, secretary-treasurer. Executive committee: J. Groves, Hamilton; A. Walker, St. Anne de Bellevue; Chas. Craig, Ottawa; C. A. Smith, Lachine; S. Jordan, Peterboro; Wm. Hunt, Guelph; Luke Williams, Ottawa; C. J. Hay, Brockville, and Wm. Cotter, Montreal.

The social features, including a bowling tournament and sports at the home of R. H. Wright, at Aylmer, the annual banquet, and auto trips and trolley rides to nearby points of interest, made the occasion doubly enjoyable.

H. J. EDDY, Sec'y-Treas.

Lancaster County Florists' Association.

Fraternal feeling is on the increase among the members and there were only a few who used the street cars for the August meeting and the predictions are that there will be none for the September meeting. Instead, the yard of our president, Elmer Weaver, was filled with automobiles and the house and porch, with florists and their wives. A short trip of inspection was made before the meeting, and at Elmer's, we found the last of an immense crop of tomatoes ripening in the houses; vines eight feet high and tomato fruit by the ton was the record for these houses, which are now being cleaned out for sweet peas and carnations. The sweet peas are in paper pots, and it will only be a matter of replanting them to have the house ready at the usual time with the crop of flowers. Some one made the remark that you have to hand it to the Weavers for experimenting and planning to get the most out of their houses.

Charles M. Weaver, Elmer's brother and neighbor on the same farm, is primarily a sweet pea grower, but now has his immense houses filled with asters, thousands of them, and in the pink of condition with not a brown leaf and no red spider nor aster bugs to mar their beauty. One house is filled with pompon chrysanthemums, almost enough to supply the demands of one large city, and like everything on this place, they are just right. There are sweet peas waiting for the asters to come out to take their place. On the farm there are acres and acres of corn and tobacco, and incidentally, Chas. M. has about three acres of gladioli as an experiment, and this acreage will no doubt be increased another season. The tobacco growing is done by the men on the place, and helps to keep them contented with their place as a good deal of the work is done after hours and they get half the proceeds, which adds quite a sum to their year's income.

The meeting proper was held on the porch and without a set programme. The first matter up for discussion was an appliance to feed air into the fire box of return tubular boilers and get greater efficiency out of the coal; a number of appliances were named, but there seemed to be none in use by any of the members.

The Late Frank Danzer.

Vice-President John Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, Mich.

Arthur Niessen, who had motored up to the country for his quadrennial visit, was with us and gave a very interesting talk in which he complimented us on sticking together so closely in these trying times, and said that he considered the man who deserted his post right now, in the light of a slacker. He said that he believed the fuel ruling a blessing in disguise, as with curtailed help, we were better off with some houses closed down. He also said that we should be very grateful to the help who stick to us when higher salaries could be secured elsewhere, and wound up with a very optimistic picture of our future.

M. J. Brinton, who is on one of the draft boards gave some very good pointers as to where both we and our employees will stand with the change of the age limit for draftees and the evening was both enjoyable and educational.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Willis B. Girvin in Leola.

The recently formed ladies' auxiliary held a meeting at the same time and place with a good big attendance and formulated plans for the winter's work.

After the meeting, a social hour was spent, and the lineup of machines for Lancaster looked like an automobile parade going in the Lincoln highway about 10:30 p. m. ALBERT M. HERR.

FUNERAL DEMAND BRISK.

This has been a very good week among the florists in this city. Funeral trade has been quite brisk, nearly all stores reporting much activity in this line. In roses, there is some very fine stock being offered. We noted some extra good Hadley at the different stores. This is no doubt the standard red rose for summer. Ulrich Brunner, which is taking the place of American Beauty at present, is still of fine quality, and is bringing $2.50 a dozen at most stores for long stemmed stock. Shawyer is the best dark pink. Ophelia is still the most popular rose in the market, and the stock offered is excellent. There is an abundance of Cecile Brunners, but Irish Elegance and Baby Doll are not in over supply; in fact many more could be disposed of if they were obtainable. White roses are not in much demand. There is a very large supply of carnations of all grades. This stock has to be exceptionally good to find buyers. Very few good sweet peas are to be had. Good Spencers find quick sales. Gardenias are again very plentiful, with practically no demand. Some of the growers find it a rather difficult matter to dispose of them at anything like reasonable figures. There is a great scarcity of orchids; there are no cattleyas, and only a few laelias. Some growers promise an adequate supply about the middle of next month. The present week has seen the supply of gladiolus greatly increased. As a rule, they are not bringing good prices. Cut blooms of both blue and pink hydrangeas are in generous supply and move fairly well. Zinnias are beginning to improve greatly in quality and are much favored for basket and decorative work. The stock of rubrum and auratum being offered this season was never better. They are in splendid demand at good prices. Delphiniums are very popular, and some fine stock is arriving. Asters are rapidly becoming quite a feature in the market. There has been a sharp decline in price since last week, owing to the greatly increased supply. Scabiosa caucasica is still very popular, and is being handled in large quantities. Spanish broom or Spartium junceum is fine just now and brightens up the florist's windows in a very agreeable manner. Dahlias are very abundant, and consequently are cheap. In chrysanthemums, October Frost is the best, but it is a little too early for them to attract buyers.

NOTES.

Miss Ricardie Lee Murray, at Geary and Larkin streets, is making large displays of palms and ferns this week. She reports trade as satisfactory here and at her branch store in the Clift hotel. Both Miss Murray and her assistant manager, W. C. Murray, are strong advocates for the formation of the San Francisco Florists' Club. She points out that every large city in this country has its florists' club, and that they have proved of great mutual advantage to its members. The street peddler problem is becoming a serious one in this city and the sooner the florists take cognizance of this fact the better it will be for the trade. Nothing can come of individual efforts, however, and as she says, the first move in the solution of this question will have to come from the florists themselves—through a florists' club.

A visit to the conservatory at Golden Gate park showed the main dome of the greenhouse, which was recently destroyed by fire, to be nearly rebuilt. The loss of this building, with its fine collection of palms and foliage plants, was keenly felt. New stock has replaced that which was destroyed, and this greenhouse will shortly resume its former attractive appearance. The orchid houses are in fine condition. Cattleya Dowiana being especially attractive at present. We noted a fine batch of laelia-cattleya hybrids eight years old, of which great things are expected. Several of the hybrids bloomed last year for the first time and attracted much attention from orchid enthusiasts.

At the pretty store of the Francis Floral Co., at Powell and Sutter streets, we found Mr. Francis very enthusiastic over his new discovery in coloring reed baskets. He has devoted a long time to the study of this subject, and has at last evolved an exclusive process of his own, whereby he is coloring baskets in French pastel shades to bring out the colors of the various flowers to the best advantage. They are certainly very beautiful and sell rapidly. He is planning later on to manufacture these on a large scale, and intends to give the exclusive right to have them to the florist in each city.

Geo. C. Roeding, of the Fancher Creek Nurseries, is spending a vacation in the Sierra Nevada mountains. Mr. Roeding is president of the California state fair, which will be held in Sacramento in September, and is doing his utmost to induce the trade to have large horticultural exhibits this year.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co.'s store, on Powell street, is displaying two unusual standard trees this week in a pair of Eugenia myrtifolia. They are a perfect pair and have attracted much favorable comment from the trade. Manager Edwin Hoff reports a steady trade right along.

The Richmond Floral Co., at 534 Clement street, of which J. Varsi is manager, is making elaborate displays of dahlias this week. The Richmond district is noted for dahlias, and this firm always has something very fine to offer in this flower.

Stephen H. Cooper, manager of the Reno Florists, Reno, Nev., is visiting the growers in this locality. He motored to this city. He says trade is very good in his state, and he is now preparing for a heavy business this coming season.

Mr. Madvig, proprietor of the Pacific Florists' Supply Co., is kept very busy these days shipping freesia, but will cover the country. His trade in baskets, of which he carries a large stock, continues to be quite heavy.

During July and August, the store of the Misses Hannon, on Sutter street, will be closed on Sunday. They recently had the decorations for the De Young wedding, which was a very elaborate undertaking.

A. Picetti, for many years manager of the Chas. C. Navlet Co.'s store in the Emporium, is now serving Uncle Sam as a shipbuilder. The Navlet store here has been discontinued for the duration of the war.

E. Jacobsen, on Haight street, is receiving a fine cut of the gladioli, Mrs. Francis King and Panama, from his growers. He has a nicely arranged store and always carries the best stock obtainable.

The California Evergreen Nursery, at 202 Goettling street, is sending in a large cut of statice to this market. They are also large growers of Asparagus plumosus and are cutting heavily at present.

G. Podesta, proprietor of the San Bruno Nursery, is cutting heavily of perennials, such as Scabiosa caucasica, statice and delphiniums. His stock of zinnias is also good and in constant demand.

A. O. Stein had a large out-of-town wedding decoration during the week at San Mateo. His splendid store, which is one of the largest in the west, is always attractive.

Harvey Lindley, the prominent Seattle nurseryman, is in town. He is going to visit all the prominent nurserymen of the state before returning north.

P. B. Clark, manager of the Blossom Shop, on Haight street, tells us that business is very fair in his district. He notes a steady demand for funeral work.

The Pacific Coast Horticultural Society held its regular meeting August 3. There was quite a large attendance and much of interest was discussed.

R. W. Skinner, representing the Roseville Pottery Co., of Zanesville, O., is calling upon the trade.

G. N.

Providence, R. I.

BUSINESS AFFECTED BY HOT WEATHER.

With the extreme heat of the past week, trade has been very quiet and had it not been for funeral orders much stock would have gone to waste. Social affairs and weddings are rare and it is apparent that the public is practicing economy. Stock, especially outdoor flowers, is plentiful and a good supply of asters and gladioli received daily meet with good demand. Sweet peas are shortening up and the quality is poor. Snapdragons are seen in quantity but move slowly. Roses are falling off in quality and also in supply and there are few going to waste. Carnations are out of the market entirely. Local asparagus is good and the same is true of the southern grown stock that arrives here.

NOTE.

Wm. Wiley, of Macnair's force, has enlisted in the naval reserve and will be stationed at Newport, R. I. Wm. Blanding, of J. Kordman & Co.'s staff has also joined the reserve and will leave shortly for the same station.

SHORT SUPPLY AND FAIR BUSINESS.

The supply of stock in this market is much shorter than it has been for the past several weeks, although there is ample supply to meet all requirements. Business is fair, and as the end of the week approaches there is generally a cleanup. Roses are plentiful, among the best being Columbia, of which a few are offered. A limited number of carnations from the field are still coming in and meet with good sales. Gladioli are plentiful. Easter lilies are in good supply on an increasing market. Rubrums meet with fair sales. Asters are scarce. Other offerings include hardy hydrangeas, a few dahlias and cosmos.

NOTES.

William Mayhall was the first to reach Captain Fitzmorris, the British aviator ace, when he fell to his death in this city last week. With him, Edward Gillett, Charles Hoffmeister and Edward Bossmeyer took part in the military funeral accorded him, August 17.

Isaac Bayersdorfer, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., and Charles Baum, of Knoxville, Tenn., passed through this city on their way to the S. A. F. convention at St. Louis.

Charles Hoffmeister spent part of the present week in northwestern Ohio on business.

Gas Adrian and wife are at their summer cottage at Les Chenaux.

C. E. Critchell had a good demand for lilies during the week.

Al. Horning is visiting relatives at Toledo, O.

H.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Otis L. Bullock, of Elkhart, Ind., now with Training Detachment No. 2, Co. C, Chamber of Commerce, here, who expects to go overseas in the near future, is being visited by his mother, Mrs. E. M. Bullock, well-known florist of that city.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Anna Millang.

Mrs. Anna Millang died at her home in Bayside, N. Y., August 17, aged 57 years. She was the widow of Frank Millang, a pioneer florist and landscape gardener of Long Island, who planted many of the trees that are now attractive features of Bayside and vicinity. He died 32 years ago. Mrs. Millang, like her husband, was a native of the once independent province of Luxembourg, but came to this country 60 years ago. She lived for a time at Great Neck, L. I., but for the past 50 years has been a resident of Bayside. She is survived by four sons, Frank, Charles, Joseph A. and August, all being well-known florists, and by three daughters, Mrs. Breuer and Mrs. Kelly of Great Neck and Mrs. Bowerque of Bayside, and by 20 grandchildren.

A. F. F.

Miss Dora Wunker.

Miss Dora Wunker, of the firm of Fred Wunker & Sons, well-known Terre Haute, Ind., florists, died August 9, in her forty-ninth year, after a lingering illness. Miss Wunker was born at Cincinnati, O., but practically all of her lifetime had been spent in the Indiana city. She had been connected with the office at the greenhouses of the firm for the past 20 years, and the news of her death will be received with sincere regret by her many friends. She is survived by her mother, Mrs. Lucy Wunker, two sisters and two brothers, Fred and Henry Wunker. She was a past officer of Rebekah lodge, under whose auspices the funeral was held.

N. B. S.

Frank Danzer.

Frank Danzer, well known to the trade in the middle west, having been with John Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, Mich., for 18 years and of which firm he was vice-president, died suddenly of heart trouble in that city, August 20. The deceased was born in Munich, Germany about 50 years ago and the news of his passing in the prime of life will come as a severe shock to his many friends and business associates.

Flower Gardens Relieve Prosaic Vegetables

It is not desirable that the widespread enthusiasm in the matter of city war gardens should result in the entire neglect of the cultivation of flowers and ornamental shrubs in the grounds of summer homes. Rochester has gained an enviable reputation as the City of Flowers, and it is from many points of view desirable that this reputation should be preserved. This does not mean that the city-gardening efforts should be curtailed. There is, though, no reason why ornamental flowers should be entirely banished. A city garden is no less useful because pains are taken to brighten it with touches of color and add floral beauty as an offset to useful but less showy vegetable features. Besides, the presence of a few choice flowering plants and shrubs will to a degree relieve the more prosaic occupation of growing useful vegetables and conserving the country's sum total of food resources.—Rochester Chronicle.

CORYDON, IND.—The historical Constitutional elm is being attacked by the elm beetle and fears are entertained that it will be destroyed. The tree is being sprayed and every effort is being made to preserve it.

Damage To Closed Houses.

Henry Siebrecht, Sr., of New Rochelle, N. Y., who was in Washington, D. C., last week, in an interview with the fuel administrator, explained to him the very serious property damage which would result to glass and piping in greenhouses due to being closed down and was assured this phase of the situation would be reconsidered.

Greenhouses Under Federal Inquiry.

There have been insistent rumors to the effect that the government has been making inquiry with regard to the extent of the commercial greenhouses throughout the country with a view to taking over idle plants for some unknown kind of war work. The matter was submitted to W. F. Gude, Washington representative of the Society of American Florists, who writes as follows:

"With reference to commandeering greenhouses for war purposes, I beg to advise that I have interviewed 14 different heads of bureaus and each one denies any knowledge whatsoever of any contemplation of commandeering the greenhouses. The Department of Commerce, bureau of census, is, however, sending out an official communication for the following information:

"Total square feet of ground covered by glass.

"Number of males (18 years of age and over) continuously employed.

"Value of products.

"Fuel used.

"This is in keeping with the investigation of other lines of industry. The government wants to know just exactly what is going on in the United States, therefore, is inquiring for all manner of data for the War Industries Board."

Ice Restriction.

The bureau of education, United States fuel administration, under date of August 15, 1918, calls attention to the fact that 500 pounds of coal are required to make one ton of ice, and that instead of many plants operating at part capacity this fall, only such as operate to their full efficiency to satisfy the country's needs will be continued. Through a questionnaire being sent out by the administration, the data necessary to complete the programme will be soon be available.

Wasters of ice are wasters of coal, the greatest offenders in this respect as classified by the administration being the large users, including restaurants, hotels, saloons, clubs, dining cars of railroads, florists, soda fountains and ice cream makers, and such wastes must be stopped. Florists must be among the first to do their part in this respect, and the government offers the following aids to this end:

Keep warm air away from the ice. See that ice is put in refrigerator as soon as delivered.

Keep refrigerator in a cool place. Open the doors of the refrigerator less often.

Be quick about putting stock in and taking it out, and close doors tight as soon as possible.

Use natural ice where available.

Railroad Courtesy Required.

In a recent circular to all employees in the railroad service of the United States, W. G. McAadoo, director general of railroads, calls attention to complaints having reached that department that the traveling public is not being treated with consideration and courtesy, that nothing could be more hurtful to the railroad administration's success than what was formerly popularly believed to be the policy of "the public be damned," and that such policy would be tolerated under no circumstances.

In a statement to the public, Director McAadoo urges attention to the fact that the movement of troops and supplies and the attendant increase in demands upon track and terminal facilities has resulted in extraordinary demands upon the passenger car and sleeping car equipment of the country, and that it is among the patriotic duties of every man, woman and child to refrain from traveling unnecessarily. Not only will they thus liberate much needed equipment for war service, but they will save money, which they can invest in Liberty bonds and help themselves as well as their country.

Delivery Co-operation Louisville Plan.

At a meeting arranged by the Kentucky Society of Florists and held at the establishment of August R. Baumer, well known florist of Louisville, following the receipt of a bulletin from the commercial economy board of the state council of defense, stating that during the period of the war the government wants all business men to save as much labor as possible, in order that that the army may develop strength, representatives from different florists' establishments pointed out many difficult problems arising from the labor economy movement, and the suggestion was made that they pool all their delivery wagons and motor cars and establish a co-operative delivery system. In short, the plan calls for a district system on much the same order as the government collects and delivers mail in every city in America.

Before the meeting adjourned, resolutions which included the following rules were adopted:

"Resolved, That we make not more than one delivery per day over each route; limit the privilege of returning merchandise to three days; curtail special deliveries; require a deposit on C. O. D. purchases; discontinue the custom of sending goods on approval; use co-operative deliveries wherever possible."

After the meeting it was stated that the florists would make but one exception to the co-operative system—that of working day and night indefinitely to supply flowers for the kaiser's funeral.

Pay and You Will Enjoy.

"Keep waiting for a free pass, and you will never have a show." It is an old saying, but it portrays the attitude of many men in our business, who decry everything the other fellow is doing by holding aloof when the showdown comes along, by refraining to give, but who would welcome the other's efforts at someone else's expense. Of course, this unconscious attitude is changed when the proper show-me spirit is proven, as the efforts of our secretary, John Young, have shown in his recent travels throughout the country, in which he has demonstrated the possibilities of our publicity campaign for the benefit of everybody connected with our industry.

By encouraging the effort now being made by your publicity committee, you are creating new business, which eventually will make itself felt generally. Added energy seems to be the slogan in all lines, to help win the war, so that a little more energy in the way of appropriations to our campaign fund will also merit its own, and when you have paid for your pass you will enjoy the benefits derived, ten-fold of the expenditures.

MARKET CONDITIONS UNCHANGED.

While the reports regarding market conditions and business in general do not vary much from that published a week ago, still we have pleasant news to impart at this time. On August 14, the long and most severe drought on record in this vicinity for some years past was offset by a genuine rain, which went down deep enough to revive all vegetation which had not been put out of existence by that time. A few light showers since have been of great benefit.

NOTES.

On August 16, our local fuel administrator notified some of the growers that he had received official notice on that day from Washington, D. C., that florists in this state would be permitted to burn screenings, plus the 50 per cent allotment. This is the most pleasant news received by the boys for some time and will mean that more glass area will be used throughout the winter than had been anticipated.

Nic Zweifel and family, who have been spending their vacation in the extreme northern woods of Wisconsin, returned August 12. He is very much impressed with that vicinity, and says it's fine to be away from all noise, dirt and excitement in general. He made the trip via auto.

The secretary of the florists' club, upon the request of the United States government, is busy compiling a list of commercial greenhouses to help complete a census, which according to the request, is a war-emergency measure.

The following will again act as judges in the horticultural class at this year's state fair to be held the second week in September: James Mathewson, Sheboygan, Wis.; J. G. Heitman and Nic Zweifel, Milwaukee.

GLADIOLI LEADING STOCK.

Market conditions are not at their best, with a limited supply of local material of very poor quality, due to the continued dry period. Gladioli are the standard cut flowers, and with the exception of being burned a trifle, requiring a little care in trimming, are fairly good and can be used to good advantage. Roses are fair, as far as summer stock is concerned, but as a rule not very long, ranging from 12 to 22 inches in Russell and Ophelia. American Beauty is very good and goes well with the best trade. Growers here have done very little with carnation plants this year, due to poor express facilities and uncertainty of arrival in good condition.

creasing the capacity of the remaining houses, thus conserving fuel and solving the labor problem to a certain extent. In this way they will carry through just enough stock for spring.

Lewis Henderson at his store at Sixteenth and Farnum streets has an attractive window display arranged in tiers, which gives a clever banked effect. Attractive baskets and flowers in pots are used in profusion.

A. Donaghue not only has one of the classy shops of the city, but his new delivery motor with the slogan "Say It With Flowers" in gold letters attracts much attention.

Hess & Swoboda make a feature display in their windows twice each week, calling attention each time to some good reason for buying flowers.

Mrs. Inez Raber, in her Arnold the Florist shop always keeps her windows attractive and her show case is also well worth looking at.

War conditions make it impossible at the present time to get raw stock. On this account Cycas Leaves in the future will be very scarce, and the price must rise accordingly. While we have these leaves on hand we want our customers to take advantage of our offer. Nothing will take the place of Cycas where these leaves are needed to make your design beautiful.

MANILA BOXES

Manila Boxes like many other things will be higher in price. Why not place your order for boxes with us now? If you had placed your order with us only a few months ago, you would have saved some money on your boxes. Many of our customers have taken advantage of our offer. Why not you Mr. Florist?

BUSINESS IS IMPROVING.

Business is much better this week than it has been for some time and prices have stiffened considerably in almost all lines. Gladioli are in good supply but are cleaning up nicely every day especially in the better grades which command higher prices. Some very fine asters are obtainable compared to a week ago and are bringing very satisfactory figures. American Beauty roses are reaching the market in splendid condition and find ready buyers at the prevailing summer quotations. Roses in general are in fair supply but there is seldom a surplus when the stores close for the day. Mrs. Chas. Russell and Columbia are in exceedingly brisk demand and clean up early. My Maryland are in good supply but are disposed of quickly. Some fine Killarney Brillants are seen as well as Champ Weiland, Ophelia, Sunburst, Ward, Milady, Shawyer, Killarney and White Killarney. Lily of the valley is none too plentiful and the same holds true for orchids. Lilies are to be had in limited supply and are good property. Gypsophila is not as plentiful as it has been but there appears to be enough on hand to fill all the immediate orders. Snapdragons are included in the offerings and some fairly good carnations are obtainable. A few callendulas are seen. Tuberose are in fair supply. Outdoor miscellaneous stock is still a big item in the market and is used largely in window decorations and special sales. Golden Glow chrysanthemums are to be had and are moving better than they have for several weeks. Ferns do not appear to be any too plentiful and have been very scarce at times during the past week. Smilax is more plentiful. Business is better in the shipping line and the local demand

The sympathy of the trade is extended to the entire Wittbold family in the loss of their mother, Mrs. Emma Wittbold, widow of the late well-known florist, whose death occurred this week. She was 76 years old and had lived in this city since 1857 and was well and favorably known and highly respected by all who knew her. She is survived by four sons, Henry, Fred, Louis and Otto, and three daughters, Mrs. Mary James, Mrs. Sophia Neve and Helen Wittbold. The funeral was held Tuesday, August 20, at 2:30 p. m., from the late residence, 3319 North Halsted street, with interment at Graceland cemetery. The floral offerings were many and beautiful and show the high esteem in which the Wittbold family is held in this community.

Frank Stuppy, of the Stuppy Floral Co., St. Joseph, Mo., and Wm. J. Schafitzel, of the Springfield Seed Co.,

Springfield, Mo., spent several days here last week previous to their departure to the St. Louis convention with the local delegation. Mr. Schafitzel was favorably impressed with his first visit here and has promised to come often in the future.

Wietor Bros. are cutting a good supply of Killarney Brilliant roses in the shorter stemmed grades which are the height of perfection in regard to color. Their chrysanthemum and pompon plants are in top-notch shape which guarantees them a large supply of cut stock this season. Gust Alles of this firm is enjoying a well-earned vacation.

Chas. E. Barker, formerly on the office staff of THE AMERICAN FLORIST, now with the United States troops in France, is recovering from a bullet wound in one of the American base hospitals. He speaks highly of the hospital service.

Fritz Bahr of Highland Park has returned from a business trip to California. He brought back a present for E. F. Winterson in the shape of a couple of jelly-rolls and a stein of beer.

August Lange is electioneering for his friend, Harry R. Gibbons, who is a Democratic candidate for county treasurer at the primaries Wednesday, September 11.

Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., called on the trade here previous to his departure for the St. Louis convention.

J. A. Budlong is cutting quite heavily again in Golden Glow chrysanthemums which are moving nicely this week.

Robert Northam, manager of George Reinberg's wholesale establishment, is back from a most pleasant vacation.

George Wienhoeber had the entire order for the Miss Betty Hoyt-T. Philip Swift wedding, held in Winnetka, August 17, which was the largest and most brilliant of the season. The church was decorated with oak branches, gladioli, roses, daisies, lilies and many other seasonable flowers. The bridal bouquet consisted of lily of the valley and white orchids, and in addition there were 10 bouquets for the attendants and two for the flower girls. The order was one of the largest booked by Mr. Wienhoeber this season and will help considerably in making his total summer sales the best ever.

Joe Dlouhy, who was employed in the cut flower department of the A. L. Randall Co. up to last December, when he was taken sick, died Tuesday, August 20, at his home at 2635 Cortez street from tumor of the brain at the age of 21. The funeral will be held from the home Friday morning, August 23, at 9 o'clock. The late Mr. Dlouhy was a splendid young fellow and had a host of friends in the trade who extend their heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family in their hour of sorrow.

Mrs. E. C. Amling has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of her father, Henry J. Schroeder, whose death occurred last week at his home, 704 Forest avenue, Oak Park. He was 77 years old. The funeral was held from the late residence, August 19, at 2 p. m., with interment at Forest Home cemetery.

Foehlmann Bros. Co. is cutting a particularly fine supply of American Beauty roses, which are in brisk demand at $6 per dozen in the extra fancy grades. Some fine Hoosier Beauty and Richmond roses are seen at this establishment together with choice asters and gladioli.

R. C. Kerr, of Houston, Tex., and John Furrow, of Guthrie, Okla., were the guests of C. L. Wathburn and wife

One million laborers must be provided for war industries at once no matter what happens to private business, according to the daily press. This was the demand made in a telegram from Washington August 20 which led to an important conference at the office of Chairman Samuel Insull of the State Council of Defense. Three conclusions were reached at the conference. They are: 1. All idlers must be put to work. 2. Women must be used to release men for war work that women cannot do. 3. Nonessential industries must give up men to meet the deficiency in essential industries. And, boiled down to a sentence, the warning sounded by the conferees to manufacturers and producers of non-essentials was: "Begin war work or get out of business." The demand for immediate recruiting of unskilled labor on a big scale was sent by a representative of the United States employment service of the department of labor to its Illinois branch. The men in charge of the local campaign were urged to make it more emphatic than the campaign for men for the shipyards. It was the announcement of the big "labor jam" that has threatened for months. Based on its population, Illinois' quota necessary to meet the shortage was placed at 75,067 unskilled laborers, needed in its own plants and in those of other states. When the new army expansion increases the demand for supplies there will be a tremendous additional shortage. "And if it is not met," it was said, "our new army will face additional instances of lack of equipment, such as were apparent last winter."

The credit and collection committee of the S. A. F. met at the Hotel La Salle, August 17, with R. C. Kerr in the chair. The local wholesale trade was invited to attend a meeting in the afternoon which was devoted almost entirely to the need of a national credit and collection bureau. All those present expressed themselves in favor of such an organization affiliated with the S. A. F. and spoke most favorably of the Wholesale Florists' Credit Association of this city, which is rendering such efficient service under the personal supervision of F. S. Webb.

QUALITY SUPPLY LIMITED.

The market at this writing is in a rather precarious condition with good stock very scarce and roses entirely off crop. Heavy rains have destroyed all of the sweet peas and asters have been broken down by heavy storms. Gladioli, however, are flooding the market and selling at low figures. Summer carnations have arrived and are bringing $2 per 100. Easter lilies are seen in good numbers and move well at from $8 to $10.

NOTES.

The labor situation is getting tense. When the new draft becomes effective it is feared a number of the smaller establishments will be compelled to close. Women clerks are being employed in some instances and are making a creditable showing.

Manager Wm. McAlpine of the New England Rose Conservatories will start cutting from a new crop of Columbia, Ophelia, Exeter and Stanley roses in another week.

Wm. Elliott is cutting some of the best roses seen in this market, among his offerings being Ophelia, Christy Miller, Victory and Cecile Brunner.

J. M. Cohen, who returned from a five-weeks vacation, announces the arrival of a son at his home.

B. A. Snyder & Co. have gone ahead of last year's record and anticipate good fall business.

Welch Bros. Co., are having a fair season.

CLUB MEETING AND OUTING.

About 25 members of the florists' club journeyed to Henke Brothers' establishment at Newtonville, August 17, to attend the monthly meeting, which was held there by invitation of Frederick Henkes, formerly president of the club. The village of Newtonville is situated in one of the most healthful parts of the country, and the day the local florists had for their gathering was ideal. The host and several assistants, some from the club, prepared clam chowder, chicken fricassee, mashed potatoes, and a delicious sauce over a wood fire in the open. The courses were served on a long table spread under apple trees in an old orchard. There was very little club business transacted and the affair partook mostly of the character of an outing. President William Newport announced that Frederick A. Danker had extended an invitation to the club to meet at his place, 744 Central avenue, September 5.

NOTES.

The members of the trade were grieved to hear of the death of Mrs. Harriet Buchanan Hazeltime, who conducted a retail florist's shop at 25 Central avenue. The death of Mrs. Hazeltime occurred, August 18, after a short illness. The funeral was held August 20. Mrs. Hazeltine had been in the retail flower business for about 17 years, first at 32 Central avenue, and for the past few months at the above location. She was one of the founders of the King's Daughters at the West End Presbyterian church, a member of the Albany Woman's Club, the Tuesday Literary club, and of organizations engaged in floating the Liberty Loans, and other patriotic endeavors. She is survived by her sister, Mrs. E. F. Chaffee, of Syracuse, and an aunt, Mrs. H. K. Buchanan, with whom she lived.

At a recent meeting of the Albany Woman's Club, Mrs. J. Henry Johnson was appointed chairman of the garden committee, which has general oversight of the war gardens in the city. It was reported that this year there are about 2,000 of these, most of them devoted to the growing of vegetables.

According to a report of the state conservation commission, 3,600,000 trees, furnished at cost, have been planted along drainage areas of municipally, and privately owned water works of 21 cities in the state during the past nine years.

THE BOOK OF GLADIOLUS

THE first authoritative book on this bulb ever printed in America, or possibly the world, issued April 1, 1911. This 120-page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating, storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

DEMAND NORMAL FOR SEASON.

There is about the regular midsummer demand, quite as good, if not a trifle better than last year at this time. Those, however, who are favored with orders find it difficult to get stock with which to fill them. Asters, generally to be depended on at this time, are as a rule very poor. There are a few fair ostrich plume, or astermums, but not nearly enough. New York is even drawn upon, the market being better supplied there. Easter lilies are also included in the shipments. Roses are scarce, that is anything worth having, the best being Ophelia, Maryland and Victoria. Gladioli are to be had in almost any quantity, and are largely used by the store men in funeral work. Easter lilies are in good demand; they have never cleaned up better continuously at good prices, than for the past three months. Hydrangea paniculata is now to be had in abundance; it is a welcome addition to the summer stock. Tritomas are another outside flower offered this week, and are seen displayed in all the shops. Cattleyas are almost out of the market. There is a good supply of all kinds of green goods at fair prices.

COLD STORAGE LILIES.

While the present methods of regarding the growth of the Easter lily, by holding it in cold storage, may be said to be practical, and on the whole satisfactory, it is not by any means perfect. It is presumed that men whose business it is to handle the lily in quantity, have experimented with different temperatures and degrees of moisture which will longest retain the vigor and blooming qualities of the bulb. The fact remains, however, that bulbs from storage, planted after August 1, deteriorate rapidly with each successive planting, going from an average of two and a half to two to one and a half to one flower to a bulb. Those who force bulbs from cold storage from December on, will have their trouble for their pains, and get absolutely nothing out of them. This information comes from Alfred M. Campbell, who is one of the largest growers for this market. Those who do not shade their lily houses during the recent severe hot spell, found many imperfect flowers, while some of the well advanced buds came along. Those an inch long, and smaller, were cooked through and dried up on the plants.

WITH THE WHOLESALERS.

"We take it as it comes," was the comment of Leo Niessen in referring to the great variety of stock received at various seasons of the year, some of which can not be very profitable in the handling. A very fair summer business is the report. Asters, gladioli and Easter lilies were quantity stocks.

Edward Reid is handling a very good stock of summer roses. With his artful smile he said: "We have them when they are scarce, because our growers are on to their job. Ophelia, Maryland and Victoria were leading varieties.

Theodore Shober will have charge of the exhibit of the Jos. Heacock Co. at the S. A. F. trade exhibition. The kentias at Wyncote never looked better than at present.

"Billy" Stevens complained that good stock was scarce, and anything worth having did not last long.

Astermums, Easter lilies and gladioli were features of the Berger stock.

NOTES.

Edward Reid, who must have spent some of his time in Missouri, says that most people are too credulous. New things come out in carnations and roses, of which most wonderful things are promised. The new variety is claimed to be "a very strong grower, no weak stems, and roots easily; when cut, it will keep for a week without losing color and is also a wonderful producer." Most of the time this is just a lot of bull, but people do not find it out until they get their money up, then it is "never again." That is, until door flowers at Jenkintown on Tuesday last was a very creditable display. There are 325 war gardens in the vicinity of Jenkintown and the pick of these gardens caused some very keen competition.

Charles Edgar, of the Alpha Floral Co., Denver, Colo., spent a part of his vacation in good old Philly last week. Denver contains a lot of talent from the Quaker City. In addition to Mr. Edgar, there is Edward Nieman, of the Park Floral Co., who learned the business here with Robert Crawford. George H. Cooper, a graduate of H. H. Battles, is in business for himself and doing well, as is also Wm. Speth, for several years with Robert Kitt.

Herman Zimmer has for some time been making a specialty of woods foliage and other outside greens, for which he has found a ready and increasing sale. In every large community, there is room for such an industry, which can be had in the sale of flowers by any one who has the energy to take it up.

Charles Mecky, on whom so many depended for their supply of Easter plants, has, on account of scarcity of labor, been obliged to close down his greenhouses. His was a medium priced stock, especially hydrangeas and daisies, which small dealers will find it difficult to locate elsewhere.

Wm. Kochler, who in his greenhouses has been bothered with sow bugs, cleaned them out in one night, with a feeding of crushed oats, liberally mixed with Paris green. The tables were covered with them next morning, all turned over on their backs.

Martin Gannon, chief decorator for Albert M. Campbell, has camouflaged the inside of the store so that lilies are now bringing $2 per hundred more without the slightest protest. Martin is some painter.

D. T. Connor, superintendent of the work of erecting the Habermehl greenhouses at 22nd and Diamond streets, and has enough other greenhouse and heating work to keep him busy for some time.

Mrs. Edwin Lonsdale has sold her interest in Lompoc, Calif., and moved to Santa Barbara, where she expects to make her home.

SUPPLY DECREASES SOMEWHAT.

While there was little improvement in business conditions during the past week, there was a slowing up in the volume of stock that reached the market. The late and larger asters are now plentiful, prices ranging from $1.50 to $2.50 per 100. The small and early stock has fared so badly that what may now arrive will be of little account. Toward the last of the week, there was also a falling off in the supply of gladioli, but there is yet a surplus. The supply of roses is light, and good stock brings fair prices—for August. There is no surplus of lilies and lily of the valley and they keep moving. Orchids continue scarce and good cattleyas wholesale at the rate of $1 to $1.50 per flower. The supply of American Beauty roses is light and the best specials move fairly well at the rate of $25 and $30 per 100. There are sweet peas on the market, but they are short. Dahlias, marigolds, hydrangeas, a few chrysanthemums and various minor stocks attract a measure of attention.

August 19.—While business is necessarily quiet, the market is in a better condition than it has been for the past two weeks, the glut of stock having abated, and the weather being much cooler.

NOTES.

Calling recently on Anton Schultheis, of College Point, we found him busy. He is fortunate in being hale and hearty, as help is scarce and four of his sons are in the United States army. He has a few boys left, but they are young. He has his usual fine stock of plants coming on.

The following party left the Pennsylvania Terminal on the afternoon of August 18, for the St. Louis convention: Frank H. Traendly and wife, John G. Esler, Joseph A. Manda, A. T. De La Mare and A. L. Miller.

Tenants in the Grand Central Palace, formerly the home of the flower shows, have been notified that they must give up their leases and prepare to vacate by September 15. The government may take it for a hospital.

Workmen are just finishing a cleaning job at the main store of Malandre Brothers, Broadway and 72nd street. The walls of the interior of the store have been handsomely trimmed with white marble.

Frank Myers, of Chestnut Hill, Pa., was in this city August 15, calling on his friend, M. C. Ford. He takes a hopeful view of the situation relating to the florist business.

At the store of David Clarke's Sons, Broadway and 75th street, it was stated, August 17, that they had a fairly good week of weddings and funeral work.

One of the old timers says: "J. C. Vaughan is in the city, and is looking well and still has a vigorous handshake for his friends."

B. Rosens, who is well known in the supply business, has now an attractive stock of baskets, etc., in his new store, 112 West 28th street.

The receiver for the McNiff Horticultural Co. claims to have made $12,000 running the business for the creditors this spring.

C. W. Scott and W. Horewoning have been contributing gladiolus blooms to the Red Cross and to hospitals.

The United Cut Flower Co., 111 West 28th street, is receiving exceptionally fine stock of the late asters.

A severe windstorm on the evening of August 14 destroyed many trees in uptown parks.

L. B. Mason, the wholesaler of 116 West 28th street, has given up his business and joined the great army of ship-builders.

The Henshaw Floral Co., 127 West 28th street, is having their store finely decorated.

LABOR SHORTAGE AND ICE FAMINE.

A number of unfortunate situations occurring during the present month have had the effect of complicating business conditions to a very considerable extent. Poor express and mail service greatly delay incoming wholesale shipments and outgoing retail deliveries. Many of the stores are working very short-handed because of the drain upon greenhouse and store forces by the draft and, until recently, by the large number of enlistments. The trade generally is in a very unsettled condition, due to the pending 18-to-45 draft law. This will take a great many more men from the ranges and stores. Flowerers at this time are very plentiful. The demand has slackened considerably, although there is plenty of funeral work. The retailers were very much perplexed early in the month when it became impossible to get their boxes iced. One large store saw the iceman but once in nine days; all suffered. The ice and water situation in this city has been very acute. The manufacture of ice cream was prohibited for the period of one week and ice was denied to a great many undertakings, with a view to adequately supplying the households.

NOTES.

With the surplus of stock in the market, thousands of roses, asters and other flowers are finding their way to Walter Reed general hospital in the name of the local florists' club. Through the activities of the secretary of the club, co-operation is being had with the Washington Film Exchange managers and the National Press Club. The secretary, with representatives from one or the other organizations, has made four trips to the hospital during the past three weeks, going into the wards where there are, in all, about 2,000 invalids from "over there" and from the camps and cantonments in this country, and supervising the distribution of about 3,000 cut flowers, 1,000 postal cards bearing views of Washington for the boys to send home to their parents to keep them informed of their condition; 2,500 cigarettes, 50 packs of playing cards, dominoes and candy. The florists' club has undertaken to see to it that the wards receive fresh flowers each week. Those members thus far furnishing these are Geo. C. Shaffer, the Washington Floral Co. and Theodore Diedrich. These contributions are in addition to those made by individual florists direct. In announcing the work it is doing, the committee of the club states that it will be very glad to convey messages to individuals at the hospital upon request from any member of the florist trade who has a relative or friend there.

A great many florists of this city were noted as among those present on the

NOTABLE SCARCITY OF GOOD FLOWERS.

The feature of the past week has been the great scarcity of flowers, especially stock of quality, the extreme heat having affected practically all varieties. Gladioli have probably been the worst sufferers, as fields of them have dried up for want of rain. The drought is beginning to have a telling effect on asters, also, and other outdoor flowers. Sweet peas are entirely gone from the market. There are some fancy varieties of gladioli appearing on the market, and these bring good prices, but the general run is poor and scarce. Roses have weakened greatly within the past week, and only such varieties as Kaiserin, Ophelia and Russell are holding up under the terrible conditions. In carnations, the new crop is beginning to come in in small numbers, and they are of fairly good quality, considering the weather. Funeral work has not been so plentiful, but every available bit of stock was used up. The ice scarcity last week caused some of the florists to suffer, and private consumers were limited to only 25 pounds daily.

NOTES.

The Freese Floral Co. reports a good share of funeral work last week. This firm is receiving some good roses, fancy gladioli and asters from the greenhouses at New Haven, Ind.

Mrs. Doswell, of the Doswell Floral Co., is again at her post in the store, and states they are receiving a fair quantity of roses and new carnations from their greenhouses.

The Flick Floral Co. has several good wedding orders booked for next week. They are receiving some fine Gigantum lilies and gladioli from the greenhouses.

Ed. Wenninghoff has had a good demand for snapdragons and asters, the past week. He is showing some good aster and ceosia plants.

A. J. Lanterniers' new seedling fern, Anthony Wayne, continues to sell in large numbers.

H. K.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

MORE GOOD STOCK NEEDED.

Business continued good during the past week and would doubtless have been better had stock been more plentiful. Gladioli are crowding the market but the quality is poor and many are thrown away or sold very cheap. In fact, there has been no fancy stock of this flower available this year. Early asters are about over and the late varieties are beginning to arrive in limited numbers. Good roses are scarce at present, while a few carnations are to be seen, poor in quality and meet with little call. American Beauties are being received in small numbers and are rather high in price. Lilies have good sales but the receipts are small. Greens are plentiful.

NOTES.

Private Chas. Dunn, who formerly conducted a flower shop at McKeesport, who enlisted in the British army at the local recruiting station in August, 1917, is, from reports received, a MODERATE SUMMER SALES.

Business during the past week has been fair with an abundance of seasonable stock. Roses are the short item, it being difficult to get a supply sufficient to fill all orders. Gladioli are now flooding the market. Carnations are a minus proposition. Asters are to be had in quantity at fair prices. Hot weather and heavy rains have about finished the sweet peas. There has been a good demand for Boston ferns during the month.

NOTES.

C. W. Curtis is cutting excellent Comet asters and America gladioli.

Frank Mahoney is rusticating at Lake Canandaigua.

George T. Boucher is showing some handsome new awnings as an improvement to his store front.

Felix Alberts reports a good run of funeral work at the H. P. Neun store.

J. B. Keller Sons recently attracted attention by a striking window arrangement of pale pink gladioli in vases on plush draped pedestals. Low vases of zinnias in bronze, yellow and red occupied the foreground.

H. E. Wilson is disposing of large numbers of Boston ferns. At the greenhouses they are cutting hundreds of excellent America and Niagara gladioli.

E. C. Armbrust and wife are enjoying their vacation at Lake Canandaigua.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Boigiano, Washington, D. C., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kandel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-seventh annual meeting will be held June, 1919.

SALVIA seed prospects are reported good.

DUTCH bulbs are said to be coming by way of England.

GUERNSEY grown bulbs are of especially good quality this year.

HARRISS lily bulb demand will probably exceed the supply ten times.

VISITED CHICAGO: O. L. Coulter, representing C. C. Morse & Co., Santa Clara, Calif.

SEEDSMEN are wondering if the new "work or fight" government rule will effect a further reduction of their sales forces.

BERMUDA lily bulbs amounting to 723 packages, about 60 per cent of the consul's former estimate and less than half of a normal crop, have arrived at New York.

ATLANTA, GA.—H. G. Hastings, of H. G. Hastings & Co., as the head of the chamber of commerce of this city, is giving strong impetus to the gardening movement.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade August 28 were as follows: Timothy, $8.00 to $9.50 per 100 pounds. No change from last week.

MARINE underwriters have increased rates for coastwise and trans-oceanic routes, except for convoyed ships. U-boats having advanced war risks three or four per cent.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—F. H. Ebeling says beans will produce a fair crop, and the state will do its full share as to food supply, with something in the way of seed, especially white varieties.

CAPTAIN LANDRETH has, and merits, the sympathy of the seed trade, in the passing out of his hands the major part of his long held and fondly cherished Bloomsdale Farms, but they have gone to patriotic use.

WASHINGTON advices of August 15 state that 40 Dutch ships, totaling approximately 100,000 tons, now idle in the Dutch East Indies, will be released to carry commodities to the United States, but it is not known whether this will affect Rotterdam shipments.

LAWRENCE S. PAYN, formerly of Simon Louis Freres & Co., Bruyeres-le-Chatel, France, writes July 26 sending greetings to his many friends in the American seed trade. Mr. Payn is now gunner with the 105th French artillery, trained and waiting for the order to advance on the enemy.

VAUGHAN'S Seed Store, Chicago, will carry a gold star in its service flag hereafter in memory of Harry Dale, a former employee. Mr. Dale was an Englishman and heard his country calling in 1915, when he joined the British forces. The details of Mr. Dale's death have not come to hand.

French Bulbs Arrive.

A shipment of about 500 cases of French Paper Whites has arrived at New York, mostly medium sizes, with another consignment due in the near future. Mail advices indicate both large grades 50 per cent short of the normal crop, while half of the merchantable bulbs will be graded 12 centimeters and up. Drought is said to be the cause of the lower grading and scarcity of labor and rail trouble responsible for short filling of orders.

Washington Rulings and Regulations.

Applications for the exportation of all commodities to Sweden will now be considered by the war trade board, according to an announcement just made public. Exporters in this country, however, before filing applications for export licenses, must obtain from the prospective importer in Sweden advice that there has been issued by an appropriate importing association, or by the States Handels Kommission, a certificate covering the proposed consignment. The number of the certificate should be forwarded by the importer in Sweden to the American exporter. This number should be specified on Supplemental Information Sheet K-104, which must be duly executed and annexed to the application for an export license.

Applications for licenses to export to Sweden commodities for which a Handels Kommission certificate or an importing association certificate is required will be considered only in the event that said certificate has been issued subsequent to June 14, 1918. Certificates issued prior to that date will be treated as void.

B. F. L.

New York Seed Trade.

At the auction sale of the MacNiff Horticultural Co., by the receiver, after two sessions, and many lots had been sold to various purchasers and deposits made, the amounts totaling about $4,700, the auctioneer then offered the stock as a whole, for which he received a bid of $5,500 and knocked down the entirety. It is understood Mr. MacNiff made the purchase for himself and will continue the business to a going concern. The inventory should be well worth double the amount realized.

By order of the receiver, the lease, stock and fixtures of the insolvent MacNiff Horticultural Co., 56 Vesey street, were sold at public auction, August 19. The eight months' lease of the premises and some of the stock was bid in by Robert MacNiff in person.

C. B. Knickman, of McHutchison & Co., returned August 17, from a western trip, during which he visited California and other points. He says that at the Cottage Gardens Nurseries, Eureka, Calif., the azaleas, rhododendrons and bulb crops are looking fine.

Fred Cowperthwaite, recently with the MacNiff Horticultural Co., is now in charge of the horticultural department of Macy's department store, Broadway and 34th street.

John Wilk, the seedsman of Seventh avenue and 33d street, has gone with Mrs. Wilk for a two weeks' vacation in the Catskill mountains.

Burnett Brothers are now finely located in their own building, 92 Chambers street, between Broadway and Church streets.

Frank Woodruff, of S. D. Woodruff & Sons, has gone to California to look over the seed crops.

Nobody in the seed district seems to have any definite information about European bulbs.

The Misses Peek, of Vaughan's Seed Store, are on their vacation.

J. C. Vaughan continues busy at the Barclay street store.

Money for Farmers' Seed.

A Washington message to the Associated Press says: "President Wilson's indorsement of a plan to supply wheat to farmers of western Kansas and parts of Oklahoma and Nebraska, to insure a normal yield, throughout fall sowing was sought recently by the Kansas delegation in congress. They asked that individual farmers be advanced as much as $450 for the purchase of seed, or be supplied directly through the department of agriculture. In either case the government would hold a lien on the wheat until the loan was paid.

[Why not advance cash to seedsmen for seed stocks?—ED. THE AMERICAN FLORIST.]

Red Cross on Ear of Corn.

Dr. J. P. Cummins of Metropolis, Ill., brought to Chicago an ear of corn which he regards as an omen of the best. It was grown in Massac county and in the middle of the white ear there are grouped red kernels in a perfect red cross. The insignia so queerly displayed led the doctor to bring it to Chicago for exhibition.—Chicago Tribune.

Burpee's Sweet Peas

New Winter Flowering Spencers.

The coal problem is one of great concern to the commercial florist, and there appears to be no alternative, except to produce such crops as can be grown with the smallest amount of heat. Sweet Peas can be successfully grown under conditions that would not allow production of other popular flowers.

We recommend to our florist friends that they sow Sweet Peas under glass for a commercial winter crop. Sweet Peas are the logical paying crop for the coming winter. They may be grown with very little heat.

CREAM PINK

3382 Burpee's Early Daybreak. The color is a pleasing shade of rich rose-pink on cream ground, the color becoming deeper toward the edge of standard and wings. $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 75c; $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., \$1.25; oz., \$2.00.

3396a Burpee's Early Sunburst. The color is a pleasing shade of rich pink, becoming lighter toward the base of standard and wings. The entire flower is suffused with soft amber and salmon. $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 75c; oz., \$1.25; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$3.75; lb., \$12.50.

CRIMSON AND SCARLET

3386 Burpee's Early King. A glowing, rich, bright crimson. $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 75c; oz., \$1.25; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$3.75; lb., \$12.50.

3394 Burpee's Rosy Morn. The color is a pleasing shade of rose with crimson-scarlet standard, immense flowers. $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 50c; oz., 85c; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$2.50; lb., \$8.00.

ROSE

3393 Fordhook Rose. This lovely variety is a charming shade of rosy carmine. $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 50c; oz., 85c; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$2.50; lb., \$8.00.

LAVENDER

3389 Fordhook Pink. A distinct shade of pink suffused with lavender throughout. Under artificial light it is particularly pleasing. $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 50c; oz., 85c; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$2.50; lb., \$8.00.

3391a Burpee's Early Princess. Color a lovely shade of soft lavender attractively fluted or waved. $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., \$1.00; oz., \$1.75; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$6.00; lb., \$20.00.

3392 Burpee's Early Lavender King. A first-class lavender has been much wanted in this type, therefore we have great pleasure in offering the new Lavender King. This glorious new variety is a rich, true, deep lavender throughout. $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., \$1.00; oz., \$1.75; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$6.00; lb., \$20.00.

BLUE

3380 Burpee's Early Blue Bird. This is a charming shade of blue. Somewhat similar to Wedgwood. $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 75c; $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., \$1.25; oz., \$2.00.

MAUVE

3388 Burpee's Early Mauve Beauty. Color a pleasing shade of rosy mauve. Charming under artificial light. $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 75c; $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., \$1.25; oz., \$2.00.

BICOLOR

3398 Yarrowa. The color is a bright rose-pink with a clear, creamy base. Floradale-grown seed exclusively. Oz., \$0.75; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$2.40; lb., \$8.00.

3387 Fordhook Pink and White. This is the most popular color in early-flowering Sweet Peas. Having a bright, rosy-pink standard with creamy white wings, luxuriantly suffused rose. Oz., \$1.00; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$3.75; lb., \$12.00.

PICOTEE EDGED

3384a Burpee's Early Exquisite. The ground color is a soft shade of primrose, the edge of the standard and wings being beautifully "picotée" with deep rose-pink. A strong, robust grower, the large flowers are freely borne on long stiff stems usually in threes and fours. $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 75c; $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., \$1.25; oz., \$2.00.

ROLLINSON'S TELEGRAPH cucumber can be fruited in the open ground.

BULLETIN No. 447, entitled "Newer Varieties of Strawberries," has been issued by the New York agricultural experiment station, Geneva, containing 24 pages and numerous illustrations, covering interesting tests made with more than 60 varieties.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, August 20.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, 40 cents; celery, crate, 35 to 50 cents; head lettuce, 2-dozen, $2.25; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.00 to $3.00; tomatoes, 4 baskets, 40 cents to 50 cents.

New York, Aug. 19.—Celery (state), per bunch, 15 to 60 cents; cucumbers, $1.50 to $2.25 per basket; mushrooms, $1.50 to $3.50 per basket; tomatoes, per pound, 3 to 5 cents; lettuce per package, 50 cents to $2.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, 50 cents to $1.00.

Commercial Acreage of Melons.

The commercial acreage of water-melons in the following states is estimated to be as follows for 1918 and 1917, respectively: Georgia, 19,995, 31,133 acres; Florida, 16,653, 21,173 acres; Alabama, 3,739, 5,767 acres; Texas, 9,239, 14,695 acres; Arizona, 200, 150 acres; Central California, 1,400, 1,665 acres. Totals, 45,217, 73,493 acres, a decrease this year of 28,276 acres, or about 39 per cent.

The commercial acreage of cantaloupes in the following states is estimated to be as follows for 1918 and 1917, respectively: Georgia, 3,139, 7,980 acres; Florida, 784, 1,065 acres; Colorado, 4,595, 5,085 acres; New Mexico, 700, 700 acres; Arizona, 2,260, 3,020 acres; Nevada, 200, 500 acres; California, 15,141, 16,059 acres. Totals, 26,819, 34,409 acres, a decrease this year of 7,590 acres, or about 22 per cent.

Care of Manure.

In Farmers Bulletin 978 of the United States department of agriculture, attention is called to the fact that nearly all manure produced on the farm accumulates in the manure yard. The largest part of it comes from the stables and is distributed in the covered portion. All cornstalks, straw and other roughage not used as bedding are added as needed to take up excess liquids. In this way, the covered portion of the barnyard not only affords a dry and comfortable shelter for the live stock during the winter months, but it protects the manure so that no leaching occurs. In some instances, the corn fodder is run through a cutter, which increases its power of absorption and makes the manure easier to handle. The tramping of the stock packs the manure so that an even temperature is obtained, which seems to favor proper fermentation, as is evidenced partly by the strong odor of ammonia which pervades the atmosphere in the vicinity when the manure is being removed, and partly by absence of dry combustion, or "firefang," so common in manure piles exposed to the weather.

Occasionally a farmer is found who sprinkles land plaster on the manure at intervals, the amount ranging from one to two tons a year, applied at the rate of a bushel a week. Disintegrated feldspar rock, common in Pennsylvania, has been used with good effect, but as a general thing the manure is not treated with chemical fertilizers. Some farmers turn the manure several times, but the practice is not common, and is not recommended.

When the barnyard is only partly covered, manure is dropped in the open space or dragged out from under cover by the animals' feet, and this portion of it is subject to more or less deterioration through leaching and lack of proper bacterial action. Even in such cases, however, the percentage of loss is not large. An estimate made on 400 farms of all types in 1912 indicated that 68 per cent of all available manure was handled by the farmer. To this must be added that dropped in the fields or pasture during the summer months, which should raise the total saved to close to 90 per cent. Farms on which barnyards are completely covered save practically all of the manure except that dropped by the animals in waste places while going to and from the fields. One farmer whose yields are exceptionally high, keeps no cows, except for family use. He builds manure piles consisting of alternate layers of cornstalks, horse manure, and spent manure from the mushroom beds, and obtains excellent results.

Barr's Lancaster Nurseries Burned

About three a. m., August 17, the boiler house and adjoining greenhouses at the Keystone Nurseries, owned by B. F. Barr & Co., Lancaster, Pa., were destroyed by fire. The boiler house was burned to the ground, including quite a lot of supplies, pipe cutting and threading tools, also all of the sash from one of his big houses, all of which is a total loss. The big carnation house adjoining was burned in for about 25 feet, but the wind, fortunately blowing the fire away from this house, the carnations, which have just started nicely, were ruined only in that portion that was burned. The sweet pea house had about the same amount of damage, and a wide drive between the boiler house and the balance of the place saved all but the nearest greenhouse, which was a total wreck. All of the coal for the season was in and around this house and caught fire, but with the assistance of two fire companies, it was quickly drenched and the loss here is not heavy. Mr. Barr, who lives about two miles distant on his farm, was brought in, but too late to do anything, and considers himself lucky that it was not worse. There seems to be no known reason for the fire, nor whether it was accidental or incendiary.

ALBERT M. HERR.

Camperdown Elm.

For several years past I have noted a weeping elm in several gardens in a western suburb of London, and also in Berkshire, although I have failed to locate the source from which the trees were supplied. It forms a narrow, umbrella-headed tree, with the compactness of the Kilmarnock weeping willow. The tree is Ulmus montana Camperdownii, and may be easily distinguished from U. m. pendula, of Loudon, by its very broad leaves, lying above and hiding the branches, whereas those of U. m. pendula are narrower, and disposed beneath the branches, so that the latter are exposed all through the season while the tree is in full leaf. The Camperdown elm takes up much less space than the older weeping form, and is, therefore, suitable for planting in small gardens and on lawns of limited dimensions. I have seen trees planted on either side of a narrow gateway, meeting above, and just pruned at the ends of the branches to prevent their blocking the way to the front door of the villa. The variety originated at Camperdown House, Dundee, where it was of some age 40 years ago, and prostrate on the ground amongst other elms. I first saw the variety in a Forfarshire nursery in the nineties of last century, under the name of Lord Camperdown's elm.—J. F., in London Gardeners' Chronicle.

SEASONABLE BUSINESS REPORTED.

The demand during July and August has been quite good. A number of soldiers at Camp Taylor have been married and the wedding flowers furnished for these occasions helped out at this time. Gladioli are being received of poor quality due to the warm weather, but they sell well nevertheless.

NOTES.

C. B. Thompson & Co. and August Baumer were victims of a clever swindler who claimed to be an employee of the L. & N. R. R., who passed worthless checks in payment of designs and received cash in exchange for the balance of the amounts.

The F. Walker Co. is cutting excellent asters for which there is a ready demand. Kingsley Walker stepped on a rusty nail recently which threatened serious developments, but he has recovered after two weeks' treatment.

Five thousand Columbia rose plants planted in the benches are making remarkably strong growth at the establishment of Anders Rasmussen at New Albany.

Leo Zoeller is cutting some good carnations which are bringing $3 per 100 wholesale.

John Ruysmans of the J. Schulz Co.'s force is on his vacation.

Publicity Session Live Feature.

Henry Penn's report of the committee on publicity was read by Secretary Young, Mr. Penn not being able to be present. The report, which was full and complete and showed the work of the committee to have been arduous, and in spite of a general apathy, in the main successful. Mr. Penn was given a vote of thanks. Richard Vincent, Jr., then hauled the delegates over the coals for not advertising the business, by neglecting the wearing of flowers in their buttonholes, describing how it was the universal custom in England and could be made the same here if every florist would push it individually.
They must not be ashamed of their business but glory in it. His forcible remarks were loudly applauded.

George Asmus, chairman of the publicity finance committee, read an elaborate report showing in detail the progress of the movement since its inception. He spoke enthusiastically of the tour of Secretary Young through New England and the west, out to the coast, which had been successful beyond expectations. In securing so many members to the S. A. F. (over 250), he felt justified in asking that the society bear half of the expense of the trip.
Mr. Asmus was loudly applauded at the close. J. F. Ammann praised the work of the committee, as now was the time to push publicity, now was the time to prepare for peace. He fully endorsed the idea that the society pay half the expenses of Secretary Young's trip and work, and asked, as well, for a rising vote of appreciation, which was given amid great applause. Secretary Young then read his report of the promotion bureau. This was full of interest, describing the work in detail. The personal meeting of the secretary with members of the trade all over the country had been productive of the greatest good. He felt sure that it would be comparatively easy to raise the amount to $100,000 the coming year. Max Schling, of New York, addressed the convention, saying there should be no limit; there were over 20,000 florists in the country, which at $5.00 annually would be $100,000. The great strength of advertising was continuity, not just a flare up now and then. The oftener we knock the oftener we hear "Come in." He added, "Say it with flowers" is a great slogan, but the public do not as yet understand it, as one man had said to him, "I did not buy flowers because I could not get it in my mind what to say." He advised the growers to work with all their might now instead of hanging back, as there would be a big demand for flowers later on.

Robt. C. Kerr, Houston, Tex., then gave the publicity fund a boost in an earnest appeal which brought action and resulted in additional subscriptions to the amount of $965, which, with the exception of a few minor amounts, were to be repeated annually for four years. The following are the subscribers and amounts:

Albert Pochelon, Detroit, Mich., proposed that a triangle competition in the collection of funds for the publicity movement be started between growers, wholesalers, and retailers, which he thought would have the same effect as in the team competition in the selling of Liberty Bonds.

Secretary Young said he desired to thank publicly all those in the trade who had given so much of their time to assist him in this work, and that much of the credit for getting free reading notices across in the daily papers, which was the best kind of advertising, was due to Henry Pepper, his assistant in New York, who worked indefatigably along these lines.

The convention was then addressed by Major P. F. O'Keefe, of Boston, Mass., who has charge of the professional work of the campaign. In a lengthy but very interesting and enthusiastic talk, which was listened to with marked attention, he described in detail every phase of the work. How selections of mediums were made different in character so as not to duplicate the clientele of the readers. He said that to make a name for an article and associate it with its purpose was the object of advertising. "Say it with Flowers" was a slogan that should be given the greatest prominence by florists everywhere. It conveys a thought, an opportunity. He had seen it favorably commented on in a number of papers. Florists are selling a comparatively small proportion of the people of the country, when their product was available for so many purposes in conveying sentiment for every occasion in life. If every man in the trade could be induced to back up this movement, according to his means, the result would be phenomenal, opening up channels that are now unknown. He felt sure that 10 flowers would grow where one grew before. Advertising was not an expense, it was an investment, the one thing necessary to great success in any business. He mentioned a number of successes in advertising, the great profits of which made his hearers fairly gasp. He cited a Philadelphia paper, which had lost a large department store ad, and immediately its circulation fell off over 20,000 copies. He advised every one to tie up to the large publicity ads as they appeared and use the electros locally. They would, he felt sure, be much benefited. The standard of cost set by advertising men for newspapers and magazines, he explained, was 1/10 of one cent per line for newspapers per 1,000 circulation and $1.00 a page per thousand for the magazines. Large store advertisers set aside three to four per cent of their gross sales for their advertising fund. The advertising of this publicity movement costs the S. A. F. nothing except its preparation and space rates, as the advertising firm receives its pay in commissions from the papers which carry the advertisements.

The glass and metal sign, "Say it with flowers," he said, was the cheapest and best sign ever made for any business and should be in every flower store in the United States. The taking up of this slogan by the Red Cross, who had used over 12,000 of them in paper form, was a wonderful endorsement and great free advertisement. Major O'Keefe was given hearty applause and a vote of thanks.

W. F. Gude struck a popular cord when he proposed that in the name of the society, a box of flowers be sent to every bereaved home in St. Louis which had been announced in the daily press of the week as having lost their sons in battle. This was immediately passed.

The session then adjourned.

The meeting of the National Association of Gardeners was held in Moolah Temple, Wednesday, at 8 p. m. On the stage were seated President Totty of the S. A. F., E. G. Hill, W. F. Gude, Benjamin Hammond, Robert Weeks, Robert Kerr, and Prof. H. B. Dorner. L. P. Jensen presided and opened the meeting. Robert Weeks, president of the association, explained the nature of these conferences which were auxiliary to the national association. He referred to their success at Boston and New York, and said that every local board should take them up. Essays and literature from the national association would be sent out from time to time for discussion. He spoke of the work for the association by Wm. F. Gude at Washington, D. C.

President Totty spoke of the great work of M. C. Ebel, the secretary, and how he was trying to raise the standard of their work and salaries. Shaking carpets and milking cows was no longer in their line of duty. He was glad to see them affiliated with the S. A. F. They should make a fight to hold the choice plants in their employers' greenhouses as people were now getting over their first fright and hysteria.

Wm. F. Gude made an eloquent address in which he said he believed that all stock of almost every kind could be produced in this country. Lilies had been grown in three years by the governmental gardens near Washington that were as good as any that ever came from Japan. In this great country, with its 107,000,000 people, he thought there were brains enough and also variety of climate to grow anything to the greatest perfection.

E. G. Hill said he thought it a mistake to cut out our opportunity to get the new things of Europe, and in return ship the best of our nurseries. We should get busy here and grow new things that would best suit our climatic conditions. Dr. Van Fleet, he added, was doing wonders with roses, producing varieties to resist mildew. America is the country of homes, the home is the foundation of liberty, and we should do all we can to strengthen the home by beautifying it.

W. F. Gude then proposed in honor of Wm. R. Smith, who had presided at the S. A. F. convention in St. Louis in 1893, who was proud to be called a gardener, and who always tried to elevate the craft, a moment of standing and bowed meditation.

Professor H. B. Dorner made an earnest address in which he pleaded for a more general college education for men in the profession. The war and its demands came first, but where Uncle Sam gave the young men of the immediate future choice of an opportunity for college education or the army, he hoped influence would be brought to bear on the college side. He told of the great opportunity for the college men in the business after the war, speaking with much earnestness and force, and was heartily applauded.

Benjamin Hammond opening his remarks with the legend, "Where there is no vision, the people perish," said the florist and gardener must have vision, plan great things, and look forward to further achievements. Children, educated in school gardening, even in the most primitive way, became much better citizens, and when at first they stole flowers were, after they saw the light, their greatest protectors. Children who begin with vegetables soon want flowers and are not satisfied until they get them. Close attention was paid to all the speakers and much benefit resulted from the conference.

Thursday's Proceedings.

The Thursday morning session opened with the election of officers to serve for 1919. The new system of arranging the polls or ballot boxes into four sections with three watchers or clerks on guard at each was tried out for the first time. John G. Esler, the chief judge, said it did not work out as expeditiously as was hoped, and he thought a still better plan could be adopted. Mr. Esler reported a total of 144 votes cast, as follows: For president, J. Fred Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., 134; vice-president, E. A. Fetters, Detroit, Mich., 66; vice-president, Robert Rahaley, Detroit, Mich., 62; secretary, John Young, New York, 134; treasurer, J. J. Hess, Omaha, Neb., 131. Board of directors, two to be elected: Jos. H. Hill, Richmond, Ind., 87; C. C. Pollwirth, Milwaukee, Wis., 65; J. S. Wilson, Des Moines, Ia., 56; John A. Evans, Richmond, Ind., 40; Chas. L. Baum, Knoxville, Tenn., 31.

President-elect Ammann was then escorted to the platform amid cheering and applause. He thanked the members for the great honor they had conferred on him, as the president of this society, which was a work of esteem to be cherished by every man. He hoped that with the noble aid of his fellow officers and members of the board of directors, to so manage the affairs of the organization that it would be one of the strongest and most patriotic under the Stars and Stripes. The hearts of the people of the country have melted into one in the winning of the war, until it was a privilege to go into the ranks, a sacrifice to stay at home, and it was our duty to keep the home fires burning as the boys would come back better than they went away. He said, "We must back them up at the front with all sacrifice here and keep their positions open for their return. With your assistance I will do my utmost to carry out the duties of this great office and hope and pray that at the end I can say I have accomplished something." Secretary John Young also thanked the members for this endorsement of his work, and gave great credit to the president and other members of the executive board, who had done so much to further the work. He was not satisfied, but looked for much greater progress, and would give the best that was in him for the coming year. Treasurer J. J. Hess thanked the members for their confidence which gave him another opportunity to save money for them. He predicted a great future for the society. Joseph H. Hill and C. C. Pollworth, directors-elect, both expressed their appreciation of the confidence placed in them and assured they would do their utmost to advance the interests of the society. The memorial resolutions as presented by Chairman Michael Barker were then read and adopted, all standing with bowed heads. The report of the nomenclature committee was also received.

A telegram of thanks from F. R. Newbold, president of the Horticultural Society of New York, for the society's contribution of $500 towards the maintenance of the New York Florists' Club ambulance in France, was read.

Cost of Production Discussed.

President Totty then read his paper on "Present Day Cost of Production." He stated that the grower was the cornerstone of the business. The retailer gave too much time to working his competitors out of the business. Grower-retailers as a rule sell too cheaply, not taking into account the labor of themselves or families, and that the government income tax was going to be a blessing in disguise, as it would compel me to keep books and show them truths about their business they had never known. F. C. W. Brown, of Cleveland, O., stated that growers whom he knew kept accurate accounts, said, in one case, it cost $1.00 a plant to force roses and another found $1.35 to be the price. Irwin Bertermann said he hoped the society would take up this matter. He felt sure an accurate knowledge of costs would result in better prices and place the business on a higher plane. Make the competition not with each other, but with the public.

E. G. Hill said he hoped this would be gone into in detail with a large representative committee from all parts of the country. Many men do not keep books that can be balanced, but are satisfied after a long life of hard work, which netted but a bare living to sell their ground which had accrued in value and retire.

Coal Conservation.

The afternoon session was opened up at an address by representative Henry Martin of the local United States fuel administration. He was introduced by W. F. Gude, who also gave a short account of the fuel situation. The speaker reported the outlook was very serious. The question of the fuel shortage, its reality, and where to place the blame, if any, was constantly being presented. The situation is that a recent order to save 50,000,000 tons of coal had been changed to make it 101,000,000 tons. There were laws to enforce all the various conservation orders, which, although very stringent, amounting to great hardships and money losses in many cases, were all, he was glad to say, being complied with willingly from purely patriotic motives. The making and the sailing of the enormous shipping facilities necessary to carry on the war, accounted for the largest part of the consumption, to which was to be added the great number of factories engaged in other war work for the government. Speaking of the savings, due to efforts made by the commission, the skip stop of the street railways over the country, he said, had saved 1,000,000 tons of coal. The curtailment of electric light had saved enormously. All industries of whatever character that took measures to conserve coal, would have preference if further reductions were found necessary. Even the chalking down of the number of barrows of coal used daily, was an effort to help. Congested railroad conditions in the east were responsible for greater restriction there. Screenings were available, also run of mine coal, to those in Indiana and further west. Screenings could be safely stored to a depth of three feet, either inside or outdoors. More than this was likely to cause trouble, as it might heat up and take fire. Mr. Martin thought the time in which screenings might be secured, would be further extended to October.

C. L. Washburn, Chicago, said he thought the florists owed a great deal to the commission in fixing the price of screenings at $2.05 per ton. In speaking of the country's production of coal, Wm. F. Gude said that it was reported in Washington as high at times as 12,000,000 tons per week. At the close of his address, Mr. Martin was given a hearty vote of thanks.

Miss Lillian Stuart was here given the privilege of the platform to present the scheme of the "Arcadian Way," a Utopian dream of a wide tree-bordered highway to be laid out in a straight line 800 miles long, 120 feet in width, with tree-lined parks 600 feet in width on either side. This is to reach from the great lakes to the Gulf of Mexico. The lady was most enthusiastic and even offered to make President Totty a member of the commission. The matter was, on motion, referred to the board of directors for their consideration.

Letters from state vice-presidents were then read followed by the report of the judges on the trade exhibits. The report of the national flower show committee, Geo. Asmus, chairman, was then read by John Young. This was a very full and complete report, giving the various causes which had resulted in the postponement of this important work until after the war.

Membership Competition.

Awarding the prizes of President Totty's offer for the greatest number of new members brought in during the year by any one member, Jos. Manda, chairman of the committee, reported that after going over the books carefully they found Frank Friedley, Cleveland, O., to be the winner with a list of 63, his competitor, W. J. Pilcher, being a close second with 61. The prizes were Liberty Bonds to the amount of $100 and $50. On motion of Irwin Bertermann of the committee, it was agreed that the society add $50 and present to each gentleman a like amount for their good work, which was heartily agreed to. The secretary here voiced his thanks to all the St. Louis brethren who had made his stay preparatory to the convention so pleasant, and particularly he desired to thank Fred H. Meinhardt, who had been of the greatest assistance, giving freely of his personal services.

The question of the correct amount to mark off in depreciation of greenhouses in reporting the government income tax was discussed, the general consensus of opinion settling on 10 per cent per annum. C. L. Washburn stated that in taking down greenhouses 15 years old the material could not be sold and the boilers costing $30,000 brought $900 as old iron. Frequent painting, it was stated, added long years to the life of all such structures.

The great work of John Young as secretary of the society, in securing so many new members, together with his promotion and activity in securing funds and pushing the publicity campaign, was heartily endorsed amid great applause by a rising vote, which the secretary gratefully acknowledged, and promised the best in him for next year.

The convention then adjourned.

Publicity Committee Report.

The first half of our national advertising campaign came to a close in June, so that I believe it is now time to review the work of the past six months and also consider what future action is deemed most expedient. Our original plan called for an expenditure of $50,000 for the first year, $40,000 to be applied to national magazine advertising (omitting the months of July, August and September) and $10,000 to cover the cost of the promotion bureau and other incidental expenses in connection with the campaign. As we did not have $50,000 on hand, or promised at the time, it was not deemed wise to make any plans beyond June, and we instructed our advertising agency accordingly. John Young, our secretary, will submit, or probably has submitted, a report showing the expenditures up to date, and the balance we now have on hand to carry on future publicity plans. A brief survey of the advertising which has been done, will perhaps not be out of place, although I believe most of our members are more or less familiar with our efforts.

The campaign, as you know, started in February with a full page Valentine advertisement in the Saturday Evening Post, and although it had to be considerably rushed to catch the issue, I am sure the advertisement was admirable in every way. That the results were extremely gratifying we all know. The next most notable advertisement was the color page in the Metropolitan Magazine for July. Some doubt was expressed by some of our members as to the advisability of using this publication, but I am sure the secretary will bear me out that the replies received from this particular advertisement was overwhelming proof that it was carefully read by the public and that we got our first really inspirational message on flowers across. On Mothers' day, we all experienced another phenomenal demand for flowers—I used the word "phenomenal" in a most conservative sense, for we must consider the abnormal times we are living in, times when many people are dispensing with so-called luxuries, and who erroneously consider flowers a luxury. Again, at Easter, we saw the public respond to our appeals as never before in the history of our business—members in all sections of the country reported record-breaking sales. These three special occasions are conclusive proof to me that if we pursue our publicity plans consistently, we can have an Easter, Valentine, Mothers' day and other occasions when flowers should be purchased, firmly entrenched in the hearts and minds of the American people.

But these were not the only times that the increased use of flowers was suggested to the American public. Smaller advertisements were used in the Saturday Evening Post, Metropolitan, Literary Digest, Good Housekeeping, Woman's Home Companion, Delinator, Garden Magazine, House & Garden, American Florist, Florist's Review, Horticulture and Florist's Exchange. Each time we published an insertion in this combined list of publications, we reached six million people, and with all of the insertions we had from February to June, we reached over 13,000,000 readers of these publications, impressing upon them in every case the importance of purchasing flowers for birthdays, weddings and other occasions, when ordinarily many people send as gifts or tokens of congratulations or sympathy other gifts when flowers would be more appropriate. So much for our appeal to the public. I wish I could speak as encouragingly about our appeal to our members for supporting this great movement, but alas, I cannot.

In the early stages of the campaign that is, before the Valentine page appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, a call for cooperation was sent broadcast, both to our members and non-members, one urging subscriptions to the publicity fund, and the other urging florists to join our society. About two months later, another "broadside" appeal was put in the mails, but again our efforts did not receive the support they surely deserved. It is somewhat discouraging to think that so few of our members have subscribed to the publicity fund. If ever there was a time when our business needed publicity it is right now, in view of the tremendous increase in wages among the class of people who are prolific spenders, when educated as to what they should buy.

Our slogan, "Say it with Flowers," has taken hold in great shape, and I feel confident that its persistent use in national and local florist advertising is going to sell the American people more flowers. I have had an opportunity to discuss the general result of our six months' advertising with florists from different parts of the country, and I have yet to find a man who did not say that he has benefited—benefited materially—from the publicity thus far undertaken.

What of the future? We are in the midst of a business crisis which is going to put men to the test—a test that will show the survival of the fittest, and deal ruthlessly with those who hesitate or display pessimism.

I realize that the government has placed certain restrictions on our industry, but that does not mean we are going out of business. I submit that the more you educate the general public to the value of flowers, as to the necessity of flowers, in every day life, the greater our business is going to be. Our tendency to restrict its development will lessen that much. The notion of a great part of the public which maintains that flowers come under the head of luxuries is misguided, and is due solely to lack of education on our part.

I believe we can accept it as the general policy of our government to interfere just as little as possible with any industry—even when it comes under the heading of a luxury. Our lawmakers realize that the successful prosecution of the war, and the raising of great loans toward that end, depends absolutely on the general prosperity of our people or their uninterrupted employment at high wages. We are beginning to discount the many wild rumors which flaring newspaper headlines heralded regarding taxation and confiscation of industries. Canada passed through the same experience in the early stages of the war, so did England, but as soon as our economists began to analyze this and that business, they very soon found out that the wiping out of one business, apparently needless in itself, affected a long string of other industries, with the result that the most minimum restrictions were desirable. So I say that many of us have been unduly pessimistic regarding the future of our business.

We have shown what America, speeded up, can do in everything it undertakes, and just as we have solved the shipbuilding problem, the ammunition problem, the raising of a great army, and so on, so I am confident that we will solve the coal problem, which is the one that most vitally affects us.

Goodness only knows we have enough sadness and cruel war news in our daily press. The people need stimulating influences now more than ever, and flowers surely come first in that category. Sell them flowers now, and not only keep our business going, but give it a tremendous boost later.

I would like to see our society show the same spirit as the Washburn-Crosby Co., who, in a $10,000 color page on the back of the Saturday Evening Post, had the courage to run that famous slogan, "Eventually—Why not Now?" when they had not a barrel of Gold Medal flour to sell the public. This is only one of the many courageous examples that are now appearing in our national press.

True, our contributions have not materialized as we expected, despite the hard work of our secretary, John Young, George Asmus, chairman of the finance committee, and several other broad-minded members who undertook the thankless task of collections, but I am sure if you could see the opportunity that is before us through the medium of publicity, that every member would subscribe to the limit of his resources as a business investment.

Let us show the American public that the florists of this country are far from being "quitters," that once they put their hand to the plow, there is going to be no turning back, that we intend to stick to our guns despite restrictions and that we intend to talk to them on flowers frequently during and after the war, and keep our business going as best within us lies.

I like to look upon this publicity work in a much broader way than as a means for selling flowers, though we have proved the tremendous value of national advertising in this connection, but we have not scratched the surface in our efforts to interest the American people in our business. We will need public good will in large measure after the war, and this is the time of all times, when we should be laying the foundation for that good will which will teach the American people the importance of the florist business, with all the money, energy and labor that is invested in the industry.

Buying habits of the public are changing fast. A few years ago it was only the well-to-do who ever came into a florist's, but now the masses are patronizing us more and more, and if we stick to our publicity persistently, we will have the masses with us solidly, and every branch of our business will see a still more tremendous growth after the war.

But we must get in our hard work now while the general public is prosperous, open to conviction, and ready to buy more merchandise than the country is able to produce. The production of flowers and plants, of course, is costing much more today, but my belief is that national advertising will create such a demand for flowers, that we can adjust our prices to meet the increased costs of production, and decrease in volume of goods available for market due to governmental restriction. Let us spend every penny we can possibly raise this fall in national advertising so to keep up the demand for flowers, and build up a prestige for the future which is bound to benefit every member of our society.

HENRY PENN, Chairman.

Credits and Collections Committee.

Your committee on credits and collections has worked most diligently on this perplexing question. The work covered the investigation of many commercial agencies and credit rating bureaus. The one fact that stands out above all others, and is the consensus of opinion of our members, is that the Society of American Florists should establish a credit rating bureau.

On thorough investigation by your committee regarding the operation of such a bureau, we find it impracticable and conflicting with our charter. The only feasible plan to carry on a bureau of this kind is to incorporate as a separate organization for this purpose. This plan has also been thoroughly investigated, and we find that such a movement should be deferred for the present. This brings us down to the next best practical step; that is, to endorse and affiliate with an established credit bureau. After covering the field thoroughly as to the best organization to affiliate with, your committee is unanimously of the opinion and does hereby recommend that the Society of American Florists endorse the Wholesale Florists' Credit Association conducted by F. S. Webb of Chicago.

We have thoroughly investigated this bureau and find same entirely adequate to the needs, and we have strong recommendation from the subscribers, who endorse Mr. Webb's service as thoroughly satisfactory. We further recommend that, if this report is accepted, a committee of three be appointed to co-operate with the bureau on matters of policy.

We submit below Mr. Webb's proposal, which we offer for your consideration.

R. C. KERR, Chairman.
C. L. WASHBURN.
FRANK X. STUPPY.
F. LAUTENSCHLAGER.

Chicago, August 19, 1918.

R. C. Kerr, Chairman,
Credits and Collections Committee, Society of American Florists.

The Society of American Florists, in national convention assembled, in New York last year, authorized the appointment of a committee of which you are the chairman to make investigation and report on the possibility and desirability of either establishing a national credit and collection bureau or of affiliating with some credit organization already in existence, for the purpose of furnishing the S. A. F. with a credit and collection service applicable to the various lines interested and at a price within the reach of all for the service they require; and, having spent six years as manager of the Wholesale Florists' Credit Association, and having organized and handled that association during all that time, I take the liberty of presenting to you, herewith, for the consideration of your committee a proposition which I hope may meet with your favorable consideration, and I request the privilege of being heard up on this matter before your committee and any members of the S. A. F. who may wish further information.

For your information, I wish to state that I organized the Wholesale Florists' Credit Association in November, 1912, and reorganized it in February, 1914. I am personally responsible for the organization and for getting these men together and keeping them together. I have served them continuously during all these years, and the best evidence of the success of this organization and the best evidence as to whether or not this service is satisfactory to its subscribers has been demonstrated to you by these people personally during your investigation of the service rendered, and is further demonstrated by the fact that I have kept them together year after year and constantly increased the membership, both in and out of Chicago.

This association furnishes the subscriber with credit information on retailers all over the United States and Canada. We also handle collections, legal matters, adjustment and bankruptcy cases for our subscribers and are collecting a larger percentage of their accounts than ever has been collected before or can be collected in any other way.

In placing my proposition before you, I am not unmindful of the interests of the S. A. F. I believe that every retailer, grower and wholesaler in this country engaged in the cut flower and kindred lines of business can well afford to belong to the society, and if the Wholesale Florists' Credit Association is made an affiliated organization with the S. A. F., or if the society in convention assembled recognizes the Wholesale Florists' Credit Association as the official credit, rating and collection agency or bureau, I am inclined to believe that some special consideration or concession in the matter of rates should be made to your society for such recognition, and of which I have the honor to be a member.

Therefore, I am quoting you a rate far below that which I have ever quoted. I am offering you a service at a price which service cannot be duplicated anywhere at any price, and for which service I have been charging wholesalers $100 a year in Chicago and $75 a year to all of those outside of Chicago, and in addition to this price the wholesalers have been paying me for their special reports and for extra services rendered; but in consideration of recognition by your society, making this the official, recognized credit and collection bureau of the S. A. F., and in consideration of the help promised me by your committee that each and all of you will assist in increasing the membership of this credit and collection bureau, I make you the following proposition:

The present standard of service and rates shall continue until such time as the membership or subscription to the service of this association has reached 100, and when the number of subscribers to the service of the credit bureau has reached 100, we will immediately publish a credit rating book or credit guide which shall contain the names and addresses and ratings of a complete list of retail florists in the United States and Canada, so far as we are able to complete it from information received from our subscribers and other sources from which it is obtainable, and this rating book will be provided with blank monthly spaces for each month of the year, which shall be used as follows:

Each month a change of rating bulletin will be sent out from this office, or as often as is necessary, containing information concerning the financial status of retailers, and the information contained in this bulletin can be transferred in cipher code to your rating book, so that your book will be kept up to date from month to month by reason of these change of rating bulletins received; and our charge to our subscribers for the rating guide and the monthly change of rating bulletins or other special bulletins that may be sent out shall be based upon the number of subscribers as follows:

Jos. H. Hill, Richmond, Ind.
Director-Elect Society of American Florists.

After the number of annual contracts or subscribers to the service has reached 100 we will reduce the price of the service to $50 a year, which will continue until such time as the number of annual contracts or subscribers to the service reaches 200, when the rate will be reduced to $40 a year, and will continue until such time as the number of annual contracts or subscribers to the service reaches 400, when the rate will be reduced to $35 a year.

Only members of the S. A. F. shall be entitled to the above rates. Those not members of the society shall pay for service in accordance with their requirements, and not less than $75 a year.

In case of cancellations taking place, which reduces the number of subscribers, the rate charged shall be in accordance with this schedule for the number of actual annual contracts in force.

This association retains the right to issue or refuse to issue a contract or to cancel a contract for any good and sufficient reason.

In connection with this service, we will furnish to our subscribers special financial reports at regular rates charged by regular reporting agencies for similar service rendered, which reports may be contracted for in quantities in accordance with the subscribers' requirements.

The Wholesale Florists' Credit Association will conduct in the future, as in the past, a regular collection and adjustment department, which will take care of your legal, bankruptcy and collection matters, anywhere in the United States or Canada, at regular rates provided for on our rate cards.

Each subscriber, when becoming a member of this association, will be expected to furnish a list of all past due accounts owing him for a period longer than 60 days, and if sold on terms longer than 60 days the terms shall be stated, also the amount owing, and if the subscriber has accepted notes in payment of accounts he must report these notes, stating date account became due, giving the date of note and time of maturity, in accordance with the provisions of the contract of this association.

Each subscriber must report all payments made on past due accounts or notes immediately upon receipt of payment, in accordance with the provisions of the contract.

WHOLESALE FLORISTS' CREDIT ASSN.,

National Flower Show Committee Report.

The report I am submitting to the convention today is quite different from that which I expected to submit when I reported to the society in New York last August. At that time, our committee was fairly well satisfied with all conditions pertaining to what we expected would be a successful fifth national flower show. You all know that to carry out and exploit properly a national flower show, it is necessary to start two or three years in advance. Following this custom, we arranged for the leasing of property adjoining this beautiful building, in which we are now convening, for the erection of a temporary building which would take care of the plant exhibits. It was the idea of our committee too, if possible, to have various departments that go to make up a national flower show separated, having supplies and accessories in one part, the cut flowers and decorative novelties and displays by retail men in another part, and the beautiful rose gardens and exhibits of plants in another.

Those in attendance at this convention, to carry and effect this arrangement. The location of this building being in the center of the most beautiful residential part of St. Louis, and practically in the center of the city and adjacent to three of the most prominent car lines, and being on the principal boulevard drive, we thought we were especially fortunate in the location. Our committee also felt confident that we need have no worry about attendance, because our merchandise is such that at all times appeals to the public, but particularly so at the present time when the nation needs something to cheer them and their thoughts. This was proven by the attendance at the spring show in New York.

However, circumstances developed rapidly that made the prospects of the exhibition look very dubious. First, the government's order to cut down on the use of fuel in our greenhouses. This was followed up by the trade doing all they could to meet that demand of our government, the result being that the exhibition plants were the first to be "tabooed," and then too all of the large private greenhouses owned by wealthy men were closed and the exhibits from them were lost. Then the freight and express conditions loomed up in such a discouraging manner as to render it almost impossible to figure on getting displays through to the exhibition in good condition or on time.

It was with much reluctance that our committee met and decided for the best interests of all, we must abandon the show during the war period, and while we felt that the financial obligations we had assumed in the monies that was spent would be a total loss, we believed that the members of the society and guarantors would feel better towards the position we took, than had we tried to go through with a national flower show that was not national and not in keeping with the intentions of these wonderful exhibitions, such as we have had in the past.

It is to such men as C. W. Ward, who was striving so hard to prove to the trade in this country that we can produce in our beautiful climates a great many of the plants and bulbs we have been importing from foreign countries, and at a considerable expense to his company, they had a large exhibit of plants which were being grown for the contemplated exhibition. I know of a number of other large growers, private greenhouses and state experimental greenhouses that were also preparing to display. It is to these that our committee wishes to offer thanks for their support, and I wish also to mention at this time the loyalty of the local florists and allied tradesmen, who had rallied to the support of our committee to such an extent as we have never known before in any other city.

We have every reason to think that in normal times St. Louis would be an ideal place for a national flower show, and it is my sincere hope that I will live to see the day that St. Louis has a national flower show, if not the next one.

It was a beautiful dream that our committee had, and those of you in attendance can look out at the wonderful piece of property next to this building and realize what it would have been to see the sunken gardens, rose gardens, tropical plant gardens, all with natural sod and beautifully laid out walks with every facility for the watering and care that the plants would have in any greenhouse.

I do not wish to forget to mention the support given us and promised for the exhibition by the Missouri Botanical Gardens. Dr. Moore and his staff had promised us their assistance, and this meant very much to our committee, and those of you who will or have visited this wonderful institution, can realize what an asset it would be to a national flower show.

I will not trouble the convention at this time by reading off items of expense that were incurred by the advance work for the show, but I will state that the sum of money that was expended which we must figure as being a loss was $5,423.28. I believe that the city of St. Louis might have received some benefit through the publicity, given the show, and I feel sure that it is better to have wasted a few thousand dollars than to take a chance and make a failure of what has always been a success in the history of our society.

Then, too, I know that the members of our society are patriotic to the highest degree, and the government's wishes are first in all matters. Therefore, our society had no alternative but to do as all the country is doing at present—put aside every thought but the one, that is, "To win the war."

GEO. ASMUS, Chairman.

Report on President's Address.

Your committee on president's address respectfully reports that we believe the address to be of more than ordinary importance, and that the adoption of our recommendations thereon will be beneficial to the society and its members.

We recommend as follows:

That the society, through its president, appoint committees out of its membership in localities wherever possible to assist the National League for Women's Service, which, through its

C. C. Pollworth, Milwaukee, Wis.
Director-Elect Society of American Florists.

members, is striving to cheer the life of the invalid soldier by gifts of beautiful flowers.

We wish, further, to concur in the president's remarks upon the unselfish work done for the benefit of our society and all members of the profession by the Washington representative, William F. Gude, who has sacrificed his time to do this work, and therefore we offer and ask your adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the board of directors of the S. A. F. are empowered to recompense the Washington representative in their discretion.

We think the recommendation of the president to have our membership assist in the beautifying of encampments and parks throughout the country to be of especial value and importance, so that our cantonments may not have that barren and desolate appearance that many of them now have, and that measures should be taken to make them more homelike and cheerful, thus tending to increase the morale of our soldier boys and send them forth in better fighting trim after having been in their cantonments sometimes for long periods of time while undergoing training, and we believe that if work was done such as has been done at Camp Mills, where shade trees and flowers and ornamental shrubbery have been planted profusely it would be a great and beneficial work for our society to pride itself upon both now and hereafter; and we therefore recommend that the president of this society issue an appeal to the craft throughout the country to assist the various committees whom we recommend that he appoint in every locality where cantonments are located, and urge upon them the necessity of getting active at once so that shrubbery, etc., can be planted this fall.

In reference to trade acceptances, which have been so common for years in foreign countries, and are now being endorsed and recommended to be used by the prominent business man and organizations of this country as an emergency collateral which is strongly fostered by our government, we recommend that the florist trade adopt this method of conserving credits and enlarging the circulating medium, thus stimulating sales of our products.

In reference to the establishing of a florists' bank as recommended by the president, we find that in most cities, and in fact even in the smaller ones there are florists or those engaged in some of our allied trades, who are directors or officers of banks, and we believe that they would be able to pass upon credits, and we do not think it advisable or feasible to have a bank established solely for the florist interests, as the location would have to be too far removed from some of the craft and therefore not of use to the trade in general. We do not, therefore, concur in this recommendation and would recommend that it be not acted upon.

In reference to the establishment of a society publicity organ, we wish to recommend that such bulletin be issued not oftener than once a month to the society membership, such bulletin to contain a record of the work of the society and matters of general interest pertaining to our own and our affiliated organizations and to positively carry no paid advertisements; that the expense of such publication can be, we believe, largely offset by the cutting down of our elaborate book of proceedings which in the past has been unnecessarily voluminous and we believe the same purpose can be better served by retaining in the secretary's office a full record for reference of the convention proceedings, but the published matter to be carefully edited and condensed. We believe, also, that much money can be saved through the elimination of sending out by mail of notices and announcements which now can be included in the official bulletin reaching the membership with much less office labor and postage expense. Such official bulletin would also greatly assist the publicity campaign which cannot wait for yearly volumes but must be constantly looked to and kept up to date.

It is, therefore.

Resolved, That we, members of the Society of American Florists, brought together at this, the thirty-fourth annual meeting of the society, feel most keenly the heavy loss sustained in the departure of so many of our well beloved brothers whose wise counsel and unceasing industry in the best interests of the trade remain as enduring monuments to help us ever onward. Their constancy and devotion to the cause of floriculture have been an inspiration to all of us, their blameless lives a benediction. It is further

Resolved, That we extend to their sorrowing relatives our great appreciation of their splendid qualities, together with our sincere sympathy in their bereavement, and that a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to them, and also entered upon the records of the society, with sketches of their lives and accomplishments.

Minneapolis Rose Test Garden.

The following is a copy of a communication from Theodore Wirth, superintendent of the Minneapolis, Minn., park system, read at the convention, brief mention of which was made in our report of the proceedings in last week's issue, page 247:

"We have in Minneapolis a municipal rose garden which has been the pride of the city during its existence, or for the past 10 years. It has convinced the people of the northwest that roses can be grown successfully in our climate, and roses are now grown in thousands of home gardens where formerly they were not accorded space. I want to offer the use of our garden for trial purposes to every grower in the country. Anyone who has a new variety that he wishes to try out is invited to send us six plants. We will plant, protect and cultivate them with all possible care, keep an accurate record of their behavior, good and bad qualities, during a period of three years, and report annually to the owner of the plants.

"Our object is to keep in touch with progressive work in outdoor rose culture and to help the grower and introducer of new roses to try out and disseminate his products. We have a standing committee of three judges, professional men appointed by the American Rose Society, to judge such exhibits. We are willing to pay the express charges on plants sent, if demanded—all for the sake of keeping to the front and helping outdoor rose culture in every possible way.

"We now have approximately 2,500 roses, in about 200 varieties, and have set aside trial beds to accommodate 50 varieties, or 300 plants, and can give still more space if necessary. I earnestly ask for the co-operation of everyone interested in this work and hope to receive applications from all parts of the country for space in our garden.

"Regretting that I cannot be with you at this convention, but with cordial greetings to one and all, I beg to remain,

Report of Judges on Trade Exhibition.

The judges appointed by your honorable body to examine the various exhibits at the thirty-fourth annual convention of your society desire to report as follows:

Committee on Final Resolutions Report.

Whereas, the Society of American Florists is now about to adjourn a most successful and profitable meeting held in thirty-fourth annual convention in the city of St. Louis, Mo., and

Whereas, the society has entered upon a new career of usefulness through recognition of a broader conception of our duty to the public whom we serve and to ourselves through cooperation and fraternity, and

Whereas, at this convention the accomplishments of the past year have been fully evidenced by the splendid reports of the committee on credits and collection bureau, the finance publicity committee and committee on publicity, and the promotion bureau which not only will benefit us as members of this society, but will benefit the entire craft and should enroll them rapidly in our list of membership as all will wish to help this cause, and

Whereas, we realize that the holding of this fruitful convention at St. Louis was upon the invitation of our St. Louis members who have shown by their hospitality that our choice of St. Louis was an excellent one, therefore, be it

Resolved, That being now about to depart to our several homes and being mindful of the courtesies and attention shown here to ourselves, our ladies and guests, we desire to tender and place upon our permanent records and appreciation of thanks and grateful recognition of courtesies to the following: His Honor Henry Kiel, mayor of St. Louis; to the St. Louis Florists' Club, its officers and committees, for carrying out so well all measures looking to our comfort, convenience and pleasure while in session and after our adjournment; to the St. Louis Ladies' Florists'

CANADIAN HORTICULTURAL ASSOCIATION AT OTTAWA AUGUST 13-16.

Club for special attention to our ladies, automobile ride, luncheon, etc.; to the St. Louis park department for hall decorations and courtesies; to the Missouri Botanical Garden for reception and luncheon; to the officials of Moolah Temple, where we have been so handsomely housed; to the management of the Jefferson hotel, and finally, to the daily and technical press for accounts of our proceedings.

C. C. POLLWORTH, Chairman.
F. LAUTENSCHLAGER,
H. B. HOWARD.

The Entertainment Features.

In addition to the social features already described in last week's issue, there was a reception tendered the visiting ladies at Moolah Temple by the St. Louis Ladies' Florists' Society. This was much enjoyed. There was singing, dancing and refreshments, altogether a delightful evening.

There were a number of personally conducted auto side trips to the various greenhouse establishments, the cars of the members of the local craft seeming to be always in service.

The reception to members and ladies of the S. A. F. at the Missouri Botanic Garden on Thursday, was an occasion long to be remembered by all present. The visitors were taken by autos from Moolah Temple shortly after the close of the convention to the Garden, where they were grouped in front of the large conservatory and another picture taken. They were then shown over the extensive grounds, which bore evidence of splendid cultivation, although having suffered from the protracted drouth prevalent here for the past month. The formal garden, in the rear of the main conservatory, was beautifully laid out and planted, and presented, with its many hued colors, a most gorgeous display. The various greenhouses were filled with rare and valuable plants. The orchid houses contained one collection recently donated valued at $60,000. Rare pitcher plants and a valuable collection of amaryllis were also features. After an extended tour of the grounds, the refreshment tables with their loads of good things were a most agreeable sight.

Presentation to President Totty.

After the ice cream, cigars and coffee, the company was called to order, and the presentation to President Chas. H. Totty of a magnificent chest of silver was made by President-elect J. Fred Ammann, who referred to the efficient administration of Mr. Totty which was already written in the records of the society, and who had endeared himself to all, and to show their appreciation the members desired to give him, in this token, something more personal, which would be with him every day and always remind him of their esteem. Mr. Totty said this was to him a fitting end of a perfect day and that he did not know what to say except that he thanked the members from the bottom of his heart. He also referred to the boundless hospitality of the St. Louis brethren, and of the generous reception which they had enjoyed at the hands of Dr. Moore, to whom he asked a vote of thanks be tendered, which was given with a will. The final resolutions were then read and adopted which brought to a close the thirty-fourth meeting of the society.

An illumination of the water lily ponds in Tower Grove Park adjoining the Missouri Botanical Gardens was a beautiful sight. These ponds contain many night blooming varieties and the novelty of seeing them so brought out was a delightful sight. The full moon rising just above the tree tops, added not a little to the picture.

The auto ride and dinner on Friday was a delightful event. Auto cars to the number of 55, all decorated with flags and gladioli, were drawn up around Library Square in the rear of the Jefferson hotel, where all embarked at 1:30. Printed itineraries with the route and scheduled time for various points of interest were placed in each car. This route was through the several parks and over the fine boulevards for which this city is famous. The first stop was made at the Anhaeuser-Busch brewery, through which the party was conducted and initiated into the intricacies of making and bottling beer and Bevo, both of which fluids were dispensed to the visitors at the end of the inspection. The drive was then continued through Forest park and the old exposition grounds. A stop was made at "Rest House," a high point overlooking a plateau at the foot of which were the old exposition lagoons. There were beautiful examples of carpet bedding in this plateau, with a greensward to set them off. Herbaceous beds were also a feature. Ice cream, lemonade, soft drinks and sandwiches were served here. After another enjoyable tour, the Crescent Boat Club was reached, where high above the banks of the great Mississippi was presented a beautiful view. After a bountiful dinner, during which after first singing a verse of the National anthem, the diners also sang many patriotic songs, there were informal speeches by President Totty, President-elect Ammann, W. F. Gude, President Lautenschlager of the Chicago Florists' Club, and others, all of whom referred to the bounteous hospitality of the St. Louis florists. All agreed that the convention, while it was not the largest, was one of the most successful in point of business in the annals of the society.

Convention Echoes.

Library Square, back of the Jefferson hotel, contained a depressed plateau, in which a festooned design was carried out on all four sides of the sloping banks. In the center was a large fountain with an intermittent fanlike spray, which was very effective. The elaborate bedding of like character on the plateau in front of the rest house in Forest Park was very elaborate.

While the attendance at the convention was confined almost entirely to members of the middle west, there was at every meeting a large majority of the delegates present, and great interest shown in the proceedings. It was distinctly a business convention.

Treasurer J. J. Hess raised considerable hilarity when coming into the meeting while nomination of officers was proceeding and happening to ascend the platform just as President Totty announced that "nominations for treasurer are now in order."

Nearly all who attended the convention used the straight and narrow path across the convention garden site. That flowers would have done well there was evidenced by the vigorous growing sunflowers, which were quite conspicuous.

John G. Esler was delighted at the attendance of the meeting of the Florists' Hall Association, saying there were more present and greater interest shown than at all the meetings of the past 10 or 12 years combined.

There were many examples of fine carpet bedding in the various squares of the city. One of the best was in the plot in front of Moolah Temple, which contained several beds of graceful pattern.

The weather was delightful throughout the week, winding up with heavy showers at the finish of the auto ride on Friday, when nearly all were safe in the shelter of the Crescent Boat Club.

President Totty made an admirable presiding officer, everything moving along with clocklike precision from the opening to the close of the convention.

The beautiful service flag in honor of those of the society in the service, stood out prominently on the platform from Wednesday on.

Results of the Trade Exhibition.

Exhibitors were almost unanimous in their report of good business obtained. There was quite a scramble for all the plant exhibits, which could have been sold several times over on the first day. W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., reported a better business than at any they would have to pay if they did not own it, as it would be part of their expense account.

"If there are any members of the society who have records of expense of cost-production, I think it would be an excellent idea if they could or would get together and work out something along these lines. One thing is certain—many florists who never kept a record in their lives will be compelled to keep one this year on account of the income tax regulations, which require that all persons engaged in commercial pursuits, including florists, must keep a record of all their transactions. With this as a basis, and the exercise of common-sense, many growers will be in a much better position after this year to know definitely whether or not they have made any money.

"There is another type of grower-florist who does the business a great deal of harm. I refer to the man who uses all of his family in his business, thereby employing very little outside labor. He pays his own children a minimum wage, in many cases gives them nothing but board and lodging, and is thereby enabled to operate cheaply and sell at a price another man, trying to bring up his family as any American family should be brought up, is unable to compete with. This kind of grower must be educated to the possibilities of his business before we can hope to have the florists' business attain its proper dignity.

"These remarks contain nothing about actual cost production, but they may perhaps start a discussion so we may hear from someone who may have proceeded farther along with this subject than I have.

Concrete Flower Pots.

To be able to make one's own pots is now possible. The concrete flower pots as exhibited at the St. Louis convention of the Society of American Florists by the Spokane Concrete Flower Pot Machine Co., of Spokane, Wash., looked very practical. They were smooth, well finished, strong, yet scarcely any thicker than those of ordinary clay. Their gray neutral tint will combine well with plants of any color.

The machine, as pictured and described, looked very practical, taking but a ½ horse power electric motor to operate. The concrete mixture can be made to furnish pots of any desired porosity, and in all sizes from two up to twelve inches in width. The machine, once installed, is always ready for use at any available spare time.

Potash From Seaweed.

A species of seaweed growing profusely in the waters of South Africa, known as the sea bamboo, is expected to become an important source of the world's supply of potash.

VALLEY FALLS, R. I.—Walter S. Sword, a well known florist and landscape gardener in this vicinity, died August 12, aged 62 years.

BARABOO, WIS.—The summer meeting of the Wisconsin State Horticultural Society was held in this city August 21-22. Many interesting topics were discussed.

GOSHEN, IND.—The Indiana State Horticultural Society held its annual meeting in this city, August 20-21, about 50 members being in attendance from various parts of the state.

PLANT NOTES.

Roman Hyacinths.

The first bulbs to arrive will be the Roman hyacinths, and everything should be in readiness to properly care for them as soon as received. When the cases arrive the bulbs should be placed in a cool, dry place; if packed in bags they should be spread out either in flats or shallow boxes and placed where they will neither be too moist nor yet in too dry and warm a location. While it is too early to plant for the winter blooming, still a succession of plantings may be made every week until cool weather, when the balance can be planted up. Almost any soil will grow bulbs successfully but fine results are obtained with soil that has been thrown out from the carnation or rose benches and has lain out over winter to allow it to sweeten a little. When a fall pot plant is wanted a few of the hyacinth bulbs can be planted in bulb pots, but in growing for cut flowers flats are to be preferred for they are much more economically handled and do not require as much care. In planting the bulbs cover the bottom of the flats with about an inch of soil, placing the bulbs on this quite closely together, yet not touching, as can be done with other bulbs. The flat should then be filled with soil, which should be packed between the bulbs with the ends of the fingers. They should then be given a good watering, enough to wet the soil all the way through and settle it around the bulb. The flats should be placed outside and covered to a depth of about three inches with sand or coal ashes or something that will lie close enough to prevent drying out. A label should be placed at the end with the date of planting, so that the several plantings will be kept separate and can be readily moved into the houses. In four to six weeks they should be well enough rooted to bring them into the house, where they can be placed under a bench until they begin to throw up their flowering spikes.

Paper White Narcissi.

The Paper White narcissi are now being received and as soon as delivered should be unpacked and spread out in flats, or on shelves in a cool, dry place. If they remain in the original cases, they are apt to become moist or heated when packed closely. They should be handled carefully and not thrown around so that they become bruised or the outer covering torn off. This covering is a great protection for the bulb, preventing it from drying. Plan how the bulbs are to be flowered, that is, how many are to be brought forward each week, and start at once to box up the first lot and then continue the plantings at the desired intervals. The flats or boxes should be prepared at once, not only for these but for the other bulbs. It is the general custom to use any old box that can be obtained, and they are, therefore, of different sizes and different depths. They do not pack closely when placed outside, neither do they seem to fit on the bench in an economical manner. Our experience has been, rather than to buy a mixed lot of boxes of different sizes, it is better and cheaper to purchase stock at the lumber mill and saw it into the proper length. Get one-half inch stock, three inches wide, for the sides and bottom and one-inch stock the same width for the ends. Saw the ends 12 inches long and the sides 24 inches. This will make a flat 13x24 inches by using four pieces for the bottom, and will allow proper drainage. A flat of these dimensions will hold about 50 Paper White narcissi or 60 to 70 tulips, and will cost but little more in the price of the box and can be made with much less labor, and when the boxes are all of one size they can be placed upon the benches with much saving of room. As soon as the bulbs are planted in the flats they should be placed in a dark, cool place and covered with soil or ashes until rooted, when they can be brought into the houses. The early planted bulbs will require good heat to bloom them successfully, much warmer temperature than the later planted bulbs.

Sweet Peas.

The early snow sweet peas will soon need some support, and the plan most generally adopted by growers with peas inside is to pass strings around the plants fastened to stakes at each end of the row. If the rows are lengthwise of the bench stakes to which the strings may be fastened will have to be arranged about every 10 feet. As soon as the plants have attained a height of six inches the first string should be tied on and strings should be added every six to eight inches as the plants grow taller. The plants must be kept growing straight throughout their culture, so they must have strings quite close together for their twining arms to catch upon, and if when the plants are in bloom they are not kept tied up a large number of the flowers will have crooked stems. Care must yet be taken with the watering and until the plants show active growth they should receive but little water, being kept on the dry side. If allowed to be too wet, stem rot will result and the plant will die. If sweet peas are to follow the early chrysanthemums the seed can now be sown. Three or four seeds in a 4-inch pot will be right for this time, for they will have to grow in the pots about six weeks, the middle of November being about as early as the chrysanthemums can be cleaned out and the beds made ready. Careful watering will be the watchword for the young seeds and do not thin out too early. Wait until the plants are in good growing condition, when they can be thinned out to one plant in a pot.

Violets.

The single violets should be planted in the houses now as soon as the beds are ready. In lifting the plants in the field try to get a good ball of earth with the roots and avoid as much as possible the roots becoming dry. These roots are very soft and succulent and if they become too dry new roots will have to form and it will take some time for the plants to become established in their new quarters. The better way is not to try to handle too many plants at a time, but to lift a few and plant them out at once. When the plants are lifted all the runners should be removed and the plants as soon as set should be well watered. They should then be shaded during the warm days, the length of time necessarily depending upon how quickly they will take hold in the new soil. Give the plants all the air possible but avoid draughts if possible until they begin to show growth.

Anemones and Ranunculus.

The grower desirous of having something out of the ordinary in early spring should grow a few anemones and ranunculus. The bulbs are inexpensive and will help to increase the variety at a time when the flower users are looking for something that they have not seen all winter. No doubt failure in starting these bulbs has caused many growers to give up the attempt of their culture, but if once understood they are as easily grown as any other of the bulbous flowers. The bulbs should be planted in flats close together and covered with about half an inch of soil and then placed under a bench in a cool house. Under no circumstances water the soil or place them where water will drip upon them, for if they become wet they will surely rot. Place papers over the flats to prevent evaporation and in about three weeks the bulbs will throw out roots and the tops start. They can then be placed in pans or in the benches and grown as any other bulbs are handled.

Pansies.

The pansies for early spring trade should be placed in the frames that they may become established before freezing weather commences. Make the soil good and rich. It is the plants with large flowers in the spring that find the quick sales and these cannot be obtained in poor soil. Set the plants about five inches apart and water well after planting. Keep those of a kind together and plant all the mixed lots adjoining. There is more time wasted in the retail selling of pansies than any other flower, traveling back and forth over a mixed bed trying to pick out a nice assortment. This is especially so with some customers, and in setting out the plants try to prevent this as much as possible. When freezing weather comes cover the frames with sashes which will prevent the snow from lying too heavily upon the plants and also much freezing and thawing. If frozen for months and covered with sash no harm will be done, but if a warm spell should come on, the sashes should be raised to allow ventilation.

Fall Propagation.

There are many of the plants used for bedding purposes that are better propagated in the fall, for cuttings are more readily obtained, root easily and allow time for the growing of good stock. Ivy geraniums, to have fine plants in the spring, are much better propagated at that time. Vincas for the spring sales propagated in September make fine plants by the first of May. The long shoots can be cut up to two eyes each and they will root in three or four weeks, then potted in 2½-inch pots and kept cool until February, when they should be potted into 4-inch pots and grown along the sides of the beds or benches. Abutilons should be handled in a similar manner. The tender tips should be used for the cuttings, and these should be kept well watered and shaded until roots are formed, when they can be potted and kept cool until towards spring. The pelargoniums that were cut back and dried off in August should now be made into cuttings and should be taken and placed in the cutting bench. There are also many plants that the stock should be looked out for at this time and a few plants lifted and housed before frost. Many growers prefer to raise their salvias from cuttings and in this case a few plants can be potted and grown on. Any extra good double petunias should be lifted. Pyrethrum or feverfew, coleus and the other soft wooded plants should be selected and potted that they may become established before cool weather.

Cyclamens.

In order to have nice large plants of cyclamens for another year, now is the time to sow the seed. This can be deferred until later and the seed planted at any time until the first of the year, yet it is much better to start them early and obtain a nice well-foliated plant full of bloom in a 6-inch or 7-inch pot than a smaller plant with but a few blooms and flowers, which is sure to be the result with the later sown seed. Soak the seed for about 24 hours in tepid water and place the receptacle in a warm place, and plant in flats about one-half to three-quarters of an inch apart and there will be need for but little further labor until later in the winter. Be sure and have a light porous soil with a good proportion of leaf mold. The plants that are to be in bloom for Christmas should now be making good growth and be in the blooming pots. Any buds that show up at this time should be removed. Give the plants plenty of room and leave them from now on in full sunlight and in a cool, well-ventilated house. A sharp lookout for aphids must be kept up and regular fumigation continued. The plants for late winter and spring blooming can be kept out in the frames as long as safe from frost and then placed in cool quarters until time to give them more heat, which will depend upon the time they are wanted in bloom.

German Goods Given Away.

The Crocker & Ogden Hardware Co., Binghamton, N. Y., recently filled a window with a large consignment of German-made pocket knives, with the announcement that they would keep no goods made in that country in stock, and offering them free to anyone who would carry them away. This was quickly taken advantage of by small boys. Other stores in that city are following this firm's example.

Burbank's Burbank.

The action of the Prussian representatives at Brest-Litovsk discloses that the Prussians have thrown Luther Burbank into the shade. Luther Burbank is almost a wizard, an assistant secretary to nature, but the Prussian representatives at Brest-Litovsk were able to make a large crop of lemons grow on the olive branch.—Senator Ashurst.

LITTLE SILVER, N. J.—At the funeral of an aviator from Camp Vail Field recently, aeroplanes followed the funeral train scattering gladiolus flowers.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.—F. S. Craig has some excellent gladioli which have bloomed throughout July, relying entirely upon the natural rainfall. He finds best results are received from soil a trifle heavy, and commercial fertilizers such as used for vegetable crops. T. H. Fuller has also been very successful with three acres, his stock running from small bulbets to 3-year-old producing stock.

WITH THE GROWERS

A. Harvey & Son, Brandywine Summit, Pa.

Some 25 years ago Alvin Harvey, at Brandywine Summit, Pa., was a dairyman with a large herd of fine cattle and a good sized farm. When the farmers in that neighborhood, which grew to be christened the carnation belt, took up the culture of the "divine flower," Mr. Harvey put up several small houses, which place has grown to about 75,000 feet of glass. Several large Lord & Burnham houses of the latest type are wonderfully efficient, being filled with Ophelia and Hadley roses that are growing and producing very high grade stock. Hadley is especially fine. Beds of first year old plants are breaking at the bottom; in many plants, some such shoots measure four feet in height. Ophelia is also very vigorous. All the stock is in ground beds. A large house, 40x250 feet, is planted with sweet peas in ground beds. The vines were up to the glass, eight to 10 feet in height and a mass of flowers. These will be followed with tomatoes as a summer crop. A good sized house in an older range was planted with sweet peas on raised benches. The rows were crossways of the benches so as to get the sun on both sides. These had been blooming since fall and had paid more per square foot than any other crop on the place.

Several houses of carnations looked very well. After Easter, every third row across the table is taken out and planted with tomatoes, which are finally given the whole room and make a good summer crop, July being a good month after the southern crops are done. Mushrooms are grown under the benches where a very good crop was now about ready. Carnations were rooted in coal ashes apparently as good as sand, as they could not look better. From here they are set out on benches, two inches in row and three inches between. Here they are pinched and grown on until put out in the field. This saves pots and labor.

A 100 horse-power boiler, return tubular, bricked in, furnishes heat for the large range. Permanite had been spread over the brick work about one-eighth of an inch thick and it was found a lot of heat was conserved in this way. Another important heat saving device was a series of steam pipes inside the front end of the casing of the boiler. When the full pressure of 75 pounds was on in the late afternoon, by turning a valve a steam jet opposite each tube forced out all soot and dirt, thoroughly cleansing the tubes and sending the same out of the chimney.

A correct record is kept here of each house and crop so that only things that are found to pay get any lengthy stay. Fuel had to be used very carefully here as elsewhere. Rose temperatures had been 52°—54° at night.

In speaking of sweet peas, Mr. Harvey thought the orchid types were retrograding, not being as large flowered as at first with them. Dropping the buds during cloudy weather was caused by too rich soil and excess of water. They seemed bound to drop the first crop of buds in early winter.

George Schubert, North Bergen, N. J.

Calling recently on George Schubert, who specializes in palms and table ferns, we found a large stock, all in fine condition. He has 200,000 young palms in pots, most of which are Kentia Belmoreana, and as many more coming on in the seed beds. Several houses are devoted to the table ferns. He has a fern, a sport of Whitmanii, which originated in his ranges. All his stock is in fine condition. He has a large New York trade and also ships to various sections of this country. Visitors to the New York spring flower show will be interested in inspecting his stock.

Planting Herbaceous Peonies.

E. M. writes: "My experience with herbaceous peonies is that it does not matter whether they are planted in October or March provided the work is done properly." Let me say at once that, so far as affecting the immediate future welfare of the plant the two following seasons, the planting of the peony in March cannot be "properly done." There is no question of soil preparation—everybody knows that the peony requires generous treatment and the best soil cultivation. It is all a question of root production and root activity, and the thing that matters is that the planting be done at, or in advance of, basal, or primary root formation. No gardener, measuring the results of March planting with those of the commercial grower who plants in September or October and has in part to depend upon his flower crop for rent and other things, could for a moment claim that March is equal to the other months named. March planting of the peony in the past has been responsible for many failures; the slow recovery of the plants following such work causing many to regard them as "impatient of disturbance." March planting, too, is directly responsible for reduced root activity, which, weakening the crown buds, throws the whole plant into a debilitated condition from which recovery is slow. To those who study the plant the reason is clear. Disturbed at that time, the roots are practically powerless to retake to the soil, and the plant, thrown on its own resources for weeks or months, is materially weakened. For those who would have the object-lesson at first hand let me recommend the lifting of a few plants in March, when leaf growth is active, re-planting them instantly. In that instant, root activity and development is virtually suspended for the season, with all the ills that follow in its train, and of this the moved plants will prove an unerring guide; they will need no searching out. E. M. refers to three dozen sorts planted 25 years ago, and their "uninterrupted success" since. At what season these were planted we are not told. Planting a few dozen once in a while, however, does not afford the operator great opportunities for observation. Far better circumstanced is the grower of acres of plants, whose very business, compelling him to deal with his plants annually, also insures an intimacy with the subject not gained in any other way. It was my dealings with the peony on a very large scale 35 or so years ago that opened my eyes to the special value of autumn planting, and subsequent experiments, conducted for the sake of information, fully endorsed the conclusion at which I had arrived. Hence I can recommend my system of planting to all who would have the peony give of its best, and give it in the shortest possible time after planting. In fine, the test of correct work in this connection is best gauged by the quick return to a representative flowering of the plants, and following autumn planting, the cultivator has not long to wait before witnessing this recovery.—E. H. Jenkins, in London Gardeners' Chronicle.

The Late Frank Danzer.

The passing of Frank Danzer, who died August 20, brief mention of which was made in last week's issue, page 257, was a distinct shock to the local trade and his many other friends who were unaware of the affliction he bore, but which permitted him to be almost constantly at his duties with John Breitmeyer & Sons, well-known florists of Detroit, Mich. He had several attacks of heart failure recently, none of which, however, indicated serious results, and no apprehension was felt by either his family or business associates. August 19, while at work, he suffered a fainting spell and was taken home. He recovered fairly well, but was very weak, and early the following day had another and more severe heart attack which resulted fatally.

Mr. Danzer was closely identified with the Detroit trade, was highly esteemed, and had a popularity enjoyed by few. He was for two years president of the florists' club, an office which he filled with conspicuous ability, and his refusal of the honor for a third term was much regretted by the members. He took much interest in the development of the school gardens, and his assistance so freely rendered to The Twentieth Century Club of that city, having this work in charge, was much appreciated by that society, which was, with the florists' club, Knights of Columbus, C. M. B. A. Society, St. Vincent de Paul Society, represented at the funeral which was held from his late residence, 1489 15th street, Friday morning, August 23.

Services were held at St. Agnes church. Here, its pastor paid a high tribute to the deceased, saying that he was an ideal father and devoted husband, whose good work in the parish was highly appreciated, and could but merit in the next life, a rich reward commensurate with his good deeds in life. Interment was in Mt. Elliot cemetery. The pallbearers were Walter Tæpke, John Klang, Robert Rahaley, Henry Rahaley, E. A. Feters, and Norman Sullivan.

In his unusual activity, Mr. Danzer found time to contribute much to the trade papers, and his great interest in civic affairs led him to present his views frequently in the columns of the daily press, and these contributions displayed the versatility of his mind, which seemed with equal ability to analyze and treat either political subjects, municipal or national questions with rare acumen.

He is survived by a widow, a son, Aloysius Frank, now serving the colors in France, three daughters, Evelyn, Louise, and Catherine, the latter two being twins. The floral tributes were many and beautiful. Conspicuous among them was a large wreath sent by the florists' club, and an elaborate design by the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange.

J. F. S.

Ullenbruchs American.

Matt Ullenbruch, the well known florist of Port Huron, Mich., has three sons of whom he is justly proud. Each has won the chevrons of a sergeant. Carl is in the aero service; Norbert is a member of an ammunition train, and Verner is attached to a base hospital. Norbert and Verner are already overseas. Matt Ullenbruch, although born in Germany, is 100 per cent American. He came to America 45 years ago and became a citizen as soon as he could get his papers. He is proud of the fact that he has three sons fighting for Uncle Sam against autocracy. The following editorial from the Times-Herald, Port Huron, Mich., applies not only to this loyal family but to hundreds of thousands of other American citizens of German origin, who are backing up the government with all they possess and are proud to offer their sons to fight in this war to set all men free:

THE KAISER'S MISTAKE.

We would like to be able to send William Hohenzollern, emperor of Germany and fend incarnate, a copy of The Times-Herald of Monday night, with a blue pencil mark around the photographs of the three Ullenbruch brothers, which appeared on the first page of that issue. We would like to write underneath something like this:

"To the Chief of the Baby Killers:

"We are mailing you this marked copy of The Times-Herald so as to give you some idea of what you started when you dragged America into this war. The father of these three American soldier boys came from your country to the United States nearly half a century ago and he became a citizen just as soon as he could get his papers. He settled in Port Huron, Mich., where he raised a family of Americans. He taught them American ideals. He made them understand that right was greater than might. He let them know that America was his country, as well as their country.

"When the war broke out the father of these boys was visiting in Germany. He saw your soldiers. Among them were 27 of his first cousins. Naturally he loved his relatives. He had been visiting them. He came home and he hoped and prayed that we would not be dragged into this war. But when you, William Hohenzollern, sent your submarines to murder our innocent women and children, when you forced us to protect the rights of our citizens, this man was squarely on the side of America, first, last and all the time.

"That's where you made your great mistake, William Hohenzollern. You thought America wouldn't fight. You thought men with German names and of German birth and descent, like Matt Ullenbruch, would forget their allegiance to the country of their adoption. You thought, in your thick-headed Prussian way, that you could scare us. You thought there would be riots and bloodshed in America, led by men with German names. You thought this was a country of money-grabbers and scoundrels. What a mistake you have made, William Hohenzollern!

"Take another look at the pictures of the three Ullenbruch boys Kaiser Bill. Take a good look. We've got hundreds and hundreds of thousands just like them and they are after you, and they're going to get you, too. You will find them fighting in the front lines. They're fighting for the greatest cause in the history of the world. They're fighting for democracy and for humanity. Why, Kaiser Bill, they're even fighting for their cousins right in your army. They're going to try to set them free along with the rest of the world.

"Hard on you, Kaiser Bill. Doesn't easily percolate through the Prussian skull, does it? Can't see why anybody with a German name should fight for liberty long as he and Gott's' hold forth? But you'll know more about it one of these days, you inhuman destroyer of hospital ships and their cargoes of helpless, wounded and Red Cross nurses. Yes, you'll know more about it and boys with German names and American spirit and patriotism are doing their part in the glorious struggle to deliver you and your God. But there's William Hohenzollern, when they get going.

Yes, there are a lot of things we'd like to say, if we could get a marked copy into the hands of the Prussian lord. But there's a much more effective way of reaching him with this message and the Ullenbruch boys are among the millions of brave soldiers who are going to deliver it by shooting it to Berlin. That's the only way to make the Hun understand why civilization is solidly arrayed against him.

The last rose of summer is blooming alone—
A mere non-essential which no one will own.

CLIMBING BROTHERS, the well known landscape gardeners of Brookline, Mass., are now engaged with the government, laying out new towns in Connecticut, where operations are large and the housing of employees necessary.

Florist's Telegraph Delivery Contest.

Suggestions for improving the work of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, that ever increasing body of up-to-date retailers, who have put such life into the business within the past two years, is after still greater results and offers a prize of $50 to the one sending in the best ideas along these lines.

Here is a good opportunity to present that new scheme which you have thought out in filling or obtaining future orders to be delivered by mail, so as to be able to include the customer's personal card and in other ways bring up the standard to modern requirements.

Suggestions are to be typewritten on sheets of plain paper, one copy to be forwarded to F. C. W. Brown, care of the J. M. Gasser Co., Cleveland, O., second copy to W. F. Gude, president of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, Washington, D. C. These to be sent before September 30, 1918.

The best suggestion and winner's name will be published in all trade papers, and the winner who can send in the original copy will immediately receive a check for $50.

A Successful Convention.

The thirty-fourth annual convention of the Society of American Florists has passed into history as one of the most successful in the amount of business transacted and large attendance at its various sessions. Considering war conditions, the attendance of over 200 members, in addition to those who reside in St. Louis, was most gratifying. All committees presented carefully prepared reports, showing great progress in the work of the society. This was especially noticeable in the publicity, and promotion campaigns, in which the secretary has taken such an active part the past year.

Costs of production, which it is thought will be of immense benefit to all of the craft, is to be determined the coming year from statistics obtained by a large committee, the membership of which will reach to every part of the country.

The trade exhibits, while not extensive, produced results that were quite satisfactory to the various firms represented.

The visitors were royally entertained by the local craft with social features every day, none of which, however, interfered with the meetings of the society.

National Publicity for Flowers.

At the St. Louis convention of the society held last week, the work of the committees having the campaign in charge was approved and endorsed, and the enthusiasm shown augurs well for a speedy completion of the fund projected, $50,000 a year for four years.

The results already secured and the lines of action determined upon and in process of carrying out, as they appeared in the different reports, were sufficient to show that the objects of the campaign were being attained and that the fund was being expended in the interests of everybody in the trade.

And, right here, we may reflect upon one feature of the campaign which is most prominent—the fund is used as it is collected in so far as the requirements of the first year are concerned. The committees have not waited for the point of completion; they have done the best that was possible with the money available. This is not one of those funds of fable which reached fabulous amounts, only the interest upon their investment being used for their prime objects. Every dollar of the florists' fund is being used in its entirety for the objects of the campaign, and in the main these objects center upon the individual benefit of every florist in the land. Therefore, whatever a florist contributes is given for his own benefit, and the amount should be considered as so applied.

The $50,000 fund required to cover the publicity plans for 1918 is not yet fully subscribed, but just a little more enthusiasm on the part of those who have not yet given the importance of the campaign their full consideration should suffice to insure its completion at a very early date, and the committees most earnestly appeal for this final help. Let it be forthcoming.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Flower Shop Men and War Work.

Owing to the great demand for labor in all the various war industries, the labor board of the District of Columbia has classified managers and employees of florists' shops among 40 other industries as non-essential. This decree was issued August 23 and applied directly to those within the District of Columbia, but this action is expected to set a precedent for other labor boards throughout the nation. It is directed that voluntary releases be given to all employees in the non-essential industries, so that they may at once engage in war work.

At the conference of field agents of the United States employment service of the department of labor, in Washington, Nathan A. Smyth, assistant director, stated: "The time has come for the entire nation to realize that business as usual is no longer possible. It is a question of winning the war quickly, and finally, or having it drag on indefinitely to an indefinite end. We are faced with a condition which means a great lesson to the American people. When the people know the facts, they will rise to the situation."

State Fairs.

The following is a list of coming state fairs with the names and addresses of the superintendents of the horticultural and horticultural departments as far as obtainable:

TRADE GAINS THROUGH FUNERAL WORK.

Business showed a slight improvement last week over the week previous, with two or three days when the florists were really rushed with funeral work, besides a good demand for plants and baskets of flowers for the hospital and sick-room. There has not been any improvement in the supply, however, due to no change in the extremely hot, dry weather conditions. All flowers of good quality are exceptionally scarce. Roses have tightened in supply, Russell and Ophelia being the two dependable varieties. A fair supply of carnations from the young plants is coming in, and they are of passable quality, although of very short stems. Orchids are on the short side, and no cattleyas are available at present.

NOTES.

A. J. Lanternier & Co. had a good demand for basket work and bouquets. They are handling some excellent lily plants. This firm had an accident at the greenhouses last week, when a long bench, planted with Bonaffon chrysanthemums, collapsed, but, very fortunately, few of the plants were damaged.

Miss Marguerite Flick, secretary of the florists' club, upon request of the government, is compiling a list of commercial greenhouses, including those who grow vegetables as well as flowers, to help complete a census which is being taken all over the country, as a war measure.

An auction for the Red Cross will be held in this city, on a very large scale, during the second week of September. Those florists who have pledged themselves to give are Edgar Wenninghoff, The Doswell Floral Co., A. J. Lanternier, Flick Floral Co., and Freese Floral Co.

The Flick Floral Co. is showing some attractive arrangements of a combination of Ophelia roses and snapdragon in baskets. This firm's roses are of very good quality. Some fine aster plants were also noted here.

Some very good Golden Glow chrysanthemums are being cut by the Doswell Floral Co. This firm also reports a 'good cut of Ophelia, Richmond and Killarney roses. Trade was brisk here, especially in pot plants.

Lieut. W. J. Vesey, Jr., writes that his unit, which is now stationed at Little Rock, Ark., expects to leave within a week for an eastern port. Aster plants and pot Auratum lilies met with a good call at the flower shop of Edgar Wenninghoff. The sale of baskets was also good.

Mrs. Edmund Lanternier has been named one of the lieutenants in charge of the large Red Cross auction.

LABOR SHORTAGE FELT.

A feature of the market is the scarcity of outdoor flowers. Dahlias have been badly burned, and asters are in short crop and of poor quality. Florists, who depend on their own greenhouses alone, are experiencing a scarcity of stock, largely because of labor famine, but those who have connections with a number of private growers, find offerings equal to demand. Long-stemmed roses are not available in any quantity, as there has been a lack of skilled help in developing. The choicest flower just now is the indoor grown aster, which is very popular with the public. It is taking the place of the gladioli, whose reign is about over for the season. The first chrysanthemums are now on display. They are confined to Golden Glow, and are small in size. The price to the consumer is $3 a dozen. Prospects are for an immense crop. Greenhouse owners have given extra space to chrysanthemums, with the idea of abandoning it after the crop is gathered, until there are improved fuel conditions in sight. Imported ornamental stock, such as bay trees and boxwood has grown very scarce with the local trade, causing embarrassment in realizing usual greenery effects for large social functions.

NOTES.

Abe Newland, until recently florist at the Ohio Institution for Feeble-Minded Youth, has taken the position as manager of the Fifth Avenue Floral Company's retail store. In addition to being a florist of long experience, he is an expert landscape gardener, and it is proposed by the company to make planting a new department of their business. Beginning with this fall, they will go into the line extensively. Edgard Hedges, whom Mr. Newland succeeds, is now on his way to France, after brief military training. Frank Lytle, another young man in the employ of the company, leaves this week to enter Camp Taylor, at Louisville, Ky.

GLADIOLI RULE THE MARKET.

Outdoor flowers for decoration now have their mainstay in gladioli, which are now doing better than ever, while asters and snapdragons are of fine quality and come in very handy. They help to make up for roses and carnations, which are now practically unseen. The former, however, with chrysanthemums are planted for winter and are showing fine condition. Carnations for potting in the field are also in excellent form everywhere.

NOTE.

Fleischer, the Florist, is showing some excellent gladioli, referring to them at this time as his "orchids." J. P.

GLADIOLI ARE IN GOOD SUPPLY.

Business has been quite good so far this month compared to the same period of other years, which is surprising, considering existing conditions. Gladioli are in good supply and are selling well, especially in the better grades. Some particularly fine stock is available in this line now compared to what has already been offered in this market this season. Particularly noticeable among the gladioli offerings are Pendleton, Autumn Queen, America, Augusta and Mrs. Frances King. Asters are in fair supply, and the shipments include some of the finest stock cut to date this year. American Beauty roses are having a satisfactory call and clean up regularly right along at top summer prices. Mrs. Charles Russell and Columbia are holding their own and are always among the first to clean up. There are some choice Milady reaching the market this week as well as Champ Weiland, My Maryland, Mrs. George Shawyer and Killarney Brilliant. The supply of carnations is steadily increasing, and what stock is arriving is hard to move. Lilies continue to be good property and probably have never averaged so well all through the season as this year. Golden Glow chrysanthemums are becoming quite a factor in this market and are having a good call. Tuberose, calendulas, gypsophila, lily of the valley and orchids are on the bill of fare together with quite a list of other indoor and outdoor stock not already mentioned in this report.

NOTES.

The United States fuel administration issued a report, August 27, directed to all cities and states east of the Mississippi river to cease the operation of all pleasure automobiles or automobiles operated for hire on Sundays until the request is rescinded. The reason for the request is that a gasoline shortage is threatened among the fighting armies in France. Since this time of the year is the time of the greatest use of gasoline by pleasure cars it is expected the request will save sufficient motor fuel in a few Sundays to restore conditions to normal. If the request is not complied with voluntarily a mandatory order forbidding the use of gasoline on Sundays will be issued, it is stated.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is supplying its trade with a choice grade of American Beauty roses in addition to fancy Mrs. Chas. Russell and a complete line of gladioli. The shipping trade is keeping up remarkably well here which evidently means that summer business at out-of-town points is good.

A prominent retail florist suggests that the wholesalers keep open for a few hours next Sunday, September 1, so as to give the buyers a chance to replenish their supply for Labor Day when he considers it will be impossible to reach or leave the market without a great deal of trouble owing to the big parade scheduled for this occasion.

Jack Jacobs and Art McGrugo of the E. C. Amling Co. force left this week to join the colors at Camp Wadsworth, S. C. Bert Cole took up a collection at the store amounting to $25 to buy them a remembrance before they went away.

Percy Jones, Inc., continues to have a brisk demand for fancy asters which are being handled in large supply and are equal to the best offered in the market.

Miss Nelda Wolf is back on duty at Zech & Mann's store after enjoying a most pleasant two weeks' vacation.

Tony Then has accepted a position with A. T. Pyfer & Co., entering upon his duties August 26.

Joe Pfeffer is on deck again at the Weiland-Reich Co.'s store after a most delightful vacation.

Albert LeRock, of Vaughan's Seed Store flower seed department, joins the colors August 31.

The funeral of Chief of Police Herman F. Schuettler, which was held on the afternoon of August 26, was one of the largest in this city in many years. The floral tributes, in number, greater than ever seen at any previous funeral in this city, and in many cases very handsome, attested the high esteem in which the late chief was held by the public he had served faithfully for nearly 35 years, two exceptionally large motor trucks being required to carry the flowers from the church to the cemetery. Chief Schuettler had for a number of years been indirectly interested in the florist business in the vicinity of Chicago, and at one time owned the Pyfer & Olsem range at Wilmette, Ill.

The Florists' Club will meet at the Hotel Randolph, next Thursday evening, September 5, at 8 p. m. This meeting has been designated as "Retailer's Night" and several of the prominent dealers have promised to read papers. Everyone in the retail business is invited to be present whether a member of the club or not. This is a good opportunity for the members of the retail trade to show the unbelievers that they can turn out in large numbers if they only want to.

The man-power bill, extending the draft ages 18 to 45, both inclusive, passed the senate August 27 without a dissenting vote. A large number in the trade here will have to register under the new draft including many prominent wholesalers, seedsmen and retail florists.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. report a good demand for gladioli, which they are handling in large quantities. Mr. Vaughan has no complaint to make in regard to business so far this month, for the sales are running considerably ahead of the same period of 1917.

John F. Hauser, the well known florist of Bayfield, Wis., called on his friends here last week, returning from Baraboo, Wis., where he attended a very pleasant summer meeting of the Wisconsin State Horticultural Society, August 21-22.

Zech & Mann's rose offerings include a liberal supply of Mrs. Chas. Russell and Columbia, which are recognized as the two best summer varieties. Asters of splendid quality are seen here in large numbers.

Philip J. Schupp, efficient manager of J. A. Budlong's wholesale establishment, is spending his vacation with his family at Lake Geneva, Wis. The Budlongs have a summer home there.

Kyle & Foerster's sales so far during August show a substantial increase over the same period of 1917. This house is featuring a good supply of Mrs. Chas. Russell roses.

At Vaughan's Seed Store their new gladioli, Owosso, clear yellow, attracts much attention. It is purer in color than Schwaben, and does not burn.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is disposing of a splendid cut of Milady roses in addition to a large steady supply of fancy Mrs. Chas. Russell.

The John Kruchten Co. is handling as large a supply of fancy asters as any other house in this market and report a good demand for same.

Wietor Bros. are cutting from a nice crop of roses particularly Killarney Brilliant, which is showing unusually fine color at this period.

Peter Reinberg is cutting quite heavily in roses at present including a large percentage of Ophelia, My Maryland and Champ Weiland.

L. A. Coles, of Kokomo, Ind., was a visitor at Kyle & Foerster's establishment August 27.

Vaughan's Seed Store is showing named Dutch hyacinths and tulips on their counters, five weeks from Holland.

Peter Hoefelder is again attending to his duties at Kennicott Bros. Co.'s store, after a well deserved vacation.

Visitors: A. M. Terrill, Calgary, Alberta; John G. Esler, Saddle River, N. J., and W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., returning from the St. Louis convention.

North Shore Horticultural Society.

The North Shore Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting at Lake Forest, Ill., August 2, with President Thomas Head in the chair. After the usual business of the meeting, a discussion took place on the advisability of holding a chrysanthemum show this fall, the majority of the members being in favor of such an exhibition, and in accordance the first week in November was decided upon as the time.

The monthly exhibits consisted of 12 spikes of gladioli by Thomas Head, which scored 95 points; 12 of phlox by George Wilson, also scoring 95 points; Lilium Henryii, exhibited by J. Kiley, 80 points, and Globe artichoke by J. H. Francis, 80 points. The judges for the evening were O. Petterson, K. Lofing and E. Bensen.

MARKET CONTINUES DULL.

The wholesale market was dull the past week. The only outlet for surplus stock was funeral work, and of this there was not very much. Roses have been coming in fairly heavy, but mostly of the lower grades, short stems and poor color. The past week showed a little better color, but still no improvement on the size of flowers and stems. With weather conditions of the past week continuing for a few weeks, the quality of all flowers should improve. Asters and gladioli continue to lead the supply of stock, and the lower grades are down in price. Some few carnations are also seen, but of very poor quality. Easter lilies are plentiful, but are not shipping well; most of them arrive in poor shape. Lily of the valley is scarce with very little call. Fancy ferns and plumosus are plentiful, but good smilax is limited.

NOTES.

In the contest for the first prize offered by President Totty of the S. A. F., of a $100 Liberty Bond, for the greatest number of new applications to the S. A. F. presented during the current year up to the time of the convention, W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, ran a great race against Frank Friedley, of Cleveland, Mr. Pilcher losing by two votes. Mr. Pilcher really turned in 75 new applications, but, through an oversight, failed to endorse them himself, and he was not given official credit for about 14 of them. However, he was tickled to win the second prize, which was a $50 Liberty Bond.

The ladies' florist club will hold its September meeting September 4, at 2 p. m., at the music pavilion, Tower Grove park. The members are to be congratulated on their wonderful teamwork in entertaining the visiting ladies at the recent S. A. F. convention. The Ladies' Society of American Florists also gained a number of new members as a result of their meeting in St. Louis.

The results of their excellent work at this convention should result in an increase in both the local membership and in the membership of the Ladies' S. A. F.

The fine talk rendered by Major O'Keefe, of Boston, on advertising, proved to be one of the most interesting items of the convention to the local florists, and a great many points

Toledo.

AUGUST HOLDS ITS OWN.

Business during the month of August has been characterized by no more than the usual seasonal dullness. At times when deaths were numerous flower shops presented an encouraging appearance of briskness as the call for funeral pieces increased. July proved to be a better month than the same period last year, but August will just about hold its own. Despite the light demand, flowers have been none too plentiful. There are, of course, no carnations, and gladioli have been very scarce at times. Asters are on the market in fair quantity, and are bringing good prices. Roses are plentiful, and are enjoying a fair sale for this time of the year. Other flowers that have been filling in very acceptably are snapdragons, sweet williams, rubrum lilies, etc.

NOTES.

The long established and well known East Toledo firm of rose growers, Krueger Brothers, has dissolved partnership, and the separation was accomplished with no friction whatever. Otto Krueger has taken for his share the retail store and range located at Clark and Nevada streets. Will took the rose ranges and Henry his share in cash. This firm has been doing a prosperous business for many years, and was noted for the excellent roses grown in its houses. Last winter they suffered several disastrous losses from fire, snow and tornado.

Miss Helen Patten has a display that is attracting much attention to her Madison street front. It consists of a water scene that occupies the full length of her large window. It is real water, too, with real fish swimming about, and a castle of rocks rising in the center. In the background are banked ferns, plants and seasonable cut flowers.

Arthur C. Kneisel, advertising manager of Schramm Bros., and publicity man of the florists' club, has returned from Camp Jackson, South Carolina, where he spent 10 days soldiering. He was rejected on account of defective eyesight and is back on the job again boosting the sale of flowers. His motto at all times is: "Say It With Flowers."

Theodore Lankowski, chief grower for Schramm Bros., will leave soon for a cantonment, and his place will be hard to fill at this time. Schramm Bros. expect a fine crop of chrysanthemums this fall, and are looking forward to a lively trade despite the war. Frank Schramm will leave next week for northern Michigan to rest up.

Everything is going along nicely at Mrs. Freeman's. She was incapacitated for a few days by a slight illness. John Lambert, decorator, has returned from his vacation. A new delivery car has been added to the equipment. Business is as good as could be expected.

BUSINESS SLACKENS DOWN.

This week showed a falling off in the volume of business done. There was very little funeral work to report, and as this is practically all the stores have to depend upon, trade as a consequence was quiet. There was more than enough stock in practically all items. There is a large supply of roses, such as Ophelia, Hadley, Ward and Ulrich Brunner. These are the four principal offerings. There are few, if any, American Beauties or Russell. Cecile Brunner is very plentiful, and very popular as well. Ulrich Brunner is not so good of late, and as the quality is gradually deteriorating right along, the season for this stock will shortly come to a close. Asters are being sent into the market in ever increasing quantities. The stock being offered is as a rule good. Some exceptionally fine stock is coming in from the peninsula district. Flowers must be strictly choice to obtain fair prices. Carnations are a glut and are moving very slowly. We wonder what has happened to this old favorite flower. Nobody seems to want it now. The great majority of the stock goes to the street peddlers, and they do not appear to find the call for it very strong. Dahlias may safely be said to be at their best just now. Some elegant stock is being displayed by the different shops. Notwithstanding that many varieties are poor keepers, the call is quite steady. Gladioli still continues in large supply. The call for them continues slow, although some splendidly grown stock is being shown. In chrysanthemums, Crocus and Golden Glow are the two leading yellows, while Early Frost continues to be the only white offered. The stores report a poor call for them, most of the florists keeping them for window displays only. Zinnias are improving every day, and we may expect to see some extra good stock in a short while.

A few good Spencer sweet peas are being received and meet with ready sale. Gardenias are still very plentiful and are in fairly steady demand. There are no orchids of any kind to be had. Cyclamen flowers are being largely used in basket work. Lilium rubrum and auratum of the first quality are being shown at all the stores. They are commanding very good prices. Not very many albums are to be seen. In pot stock, a few Begonia Lorraine are beginning to come in, also celosias. Pot lilies are to be had also, and one store has azaleas from their own greenhouses. Boston ferns are of good quality at present, and are selling very satisfactorily. Greens of all kinds are in oversupply.

NOTES.

Great interest is being manifested by dahlia growers in the show which will be given by the California Dahlia Society in the Palace hotel, September 2-4. The committee of arrangements is headed this year by T. A. Burns, of San Raphael. The schedule is a very comprehensive one, there being 53 different classes. Among the prizes, for which there will be keen competition, is the one offered by the American Dahlia Society. Angelo J. Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., has been appointed manager of the show. This will be welcome news to the exhibitors, as no better qualified man could have been selected.

At the orchid range of John Carbone, at Berkeley, we saw a grand lot of plants coming along for fall trade. His stock of labiate is very fine. He expects to begin cutting in about four or five weeks. The houses of trianae are also in the best possible shape and a heavy cut is looked for this winter. Mr. Carbone has many hybrids of his own crossing from which he expects great results. He told us that notwithstanding war conditions, his business has kept up well.

Milton Tonini, president and manager of the Bay Counties Seed Company, is planning to extend his nursery business this coming season. This firm is seriously considering the question of larger quarters, the present store being too small for the growing trade. Mr. Tonini states that the firm will probably locate further uptown.

P. Couchi, the Ulrich Brunner specialist, has acquired more land adjoining his nurseries at Colma. He intends to increase his rose plantings, and will also pay more attention to dahlias.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co.'s store is this week displaying some finely grown azaleas in pots. It is rather an unusual thing to find these in August, but they are a very welcome addition, as there are practically no flowering plants to be had at present.

At the Sunset Floral Co.'s store, on Haight street, we noted a few dozen Golden Glow chrysanthemums. The flowers appeared rather soft. Navarrett Bros., the proprietors, are both in the new draft age, and consequently are uncertain as to their future activities.

Henry Goertzshain, of Redwood City, is busily engaged in preparing for the coming season. His new lath house is being filled with palms and other decorative plants, which he will use at his new store. His carnation houses promise a heavy cut this winter. As has been the case for many years, there has been several houses of chrysanthemums. His Ongowa and Appleton look very good. His surplus is disposed of in this market. He has a fine cut of asters at present.

Richard Deiner, at Kentfield, is busily engaged these days working on his new seedling gladioli. He has many new ones that give great promise, and he is rapidly working up a stock of the best varieties. He is also trying to improve the new variety of wheat which attracted so much attention at the land show last fall. He has a large area devoted to a much improved strain of stocks.

E. Serveau has entirely recovered his health and is a frequent visitor at his large store on Fillmore street. He is sending in a large lot of fine stock from his place at Redwood City. Albert Serveau, who acts as manager of the store during his father's absence, is well satisfied with trade at present.

H. Plath, of the Ferneries, is sending in some great Boston ferns to the different stores. His stock of palms and begonias are all in their usual fine condition. Mr. Plath expects the fall and winter trade to be good, and has worked up a fine quality of stock for his customers.

The Blossom Shop has been showing some fine Liliun rubrum in pots this week. They report that this has proven a good seller right along. They are also receiving fine lots of gladioli and dahlias.

Hayashi Bros. will have their usual stock of cyclamen for the coming season. They have made a great success of growing this plant, and their stock consists of many thousand in the different sizes.

M. H. Ebel, of Sacramento, paid the trade a visit during the week. He says business has kept up steadily with him and is an optimist when the prospects for the coming season are discussed.

E. Jacobsen reports an increased trade since moving to his new location on Haight street. He is at present enjoying a two weeks' vacation at Boyes Springs.

Walter Bates has a nice stand of chrysanthemums at his Fruitvale nurseries. He has practically every variety of merit, and is a very successful grower.

Illinois State Florists' Association.

At a meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association held at Moolah Temple, St. Louis, Mo., August 21, President W. J. Keimel in the chair, it was arranged to leave the matter of the Red Cross fall sale of flowers in the hands of the Springfield florists and the executive committee. Among those in attendance were the following: J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville; I. L. Pillsbury, Galesburg; W. J. Hembreiker and A. C. Brown and wife, Springfield; F. L. Washburn, Bloomington; Prof. H. C. Dorrer, Urbana; C. Loveridge, Peoria; George Jacobs, Canton; and August Poehlmann, Walter Poehlmann, George Amus, Fred Lautenschlager, Allie Zech, Matt Mann, T. McAllister and M. Barker, Chicago.

MODERATE DEMAND FOR GOOD FLOWERS.

Business is fairly good with the better grades of stock cleaning up readily, with at times a shortage. The shipping demand continues good. Roses sell fairly well, with a supply rather limited, yet sufficient for all needs. Asters are in good supply, excellent northern grown blooms being received. Gladioli, while shorted somewhat in supply, are still plentiful, and the same is true of Easter lilies. Rubrums are scarce. Some excellent dahlias are offered and field carnations are also available.

NOTES.

Ed Schwartz, who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis, is recovering.

C. E. Critchell has been experiencing a good call for supplies during the past fortnight.

Will Shafer is operating the range of the Hoffmeister Floral Co.

Ray Ech and Joseph Durban will leave for camp this week.

Visitors: Louis R. Finermann, Chicago; Mrs. J. F. Young and Olive A. Ritter, Dayton, O.

BALTIMORE, Md.—John McCormick, a veteran florist of this city, is dead at the age of 79 years. His business will be continued by his son, Thomas J. McCormick.

WILMINGTON, DEL.—The Outdoor Arts Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $100,000 and will engage in business as nurserymen and landscape architects.

DALLAS, TEX.—O. A. M. Miller, of the Green Floral Co., who underwent a serious operation at a hospital in New York some time ago, is reported making good progress.

DETROIT, MICH.—The outing of the local florists will be held August 29, the date having been postponed out of respect to the late Frank Danzer, whose death occurred last week.

WELLESLEY, MASS.—Wm. R. Morris, who has made a specialty of roses for many years, will devote his houses to carnations during the coming winter as a coal conservation plan.

THE BOOK OF GLADIOLUS

THE first authoritative book on this bulb ever printed in America, or possibly the world, issued April 1, 1911. This 120-page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating, storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

TRADE OUTLOOK APPEARS PROMISING.

Business the past week has been encouraging. It is the wind-up of the summer season and when not much is looked for, and an extra demand now may forecast an increased trade later on. Good stock is scarce; all roses, particularly that grade up are sold on sight. American Beauties are in demand, the quality being very good for the season. Other leading varieties, due to the favorable weather, are gaining in size, color and length of stem. Most of the stock finds purchasers at fair prices. There is now a good stock of asters, Ostrich Plumes, Semples Branching and asterums. The first grades bring good figures, but the balance are jobbed off at buyers' prices. Gladioli are plentiful, but choice stock cleans up very well at top figures. Easter lilies are holding their own as a staple flower; in fact, their record the past summer, in quantity, quality and good returns, has never been equaled before. Hydrangea paniculata is a great factor at this time in decorative and all kinds of design work. Large quantities are sold. Dahlias are now making their appearance, and will dominate the market. The crop promises to be up to the standard, if help can be obtained to market it when the rush comes.

NOTES.

Henry C. Geiger, of the Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa., severed his connection with the company August 15, retiring from business after an energetic and very active life in the successful management of the above firm's Floral Exchange, which made a specialty of decorations. He later became manager, and superintending the erection of their large greenhouse establishment at Edgely, Pa., where the first of the large greenhouses of the country, 50x300, was built. A total of 40 houses were erected here. He later attended to the details and management of the mammoth houses of the Florex Gardens at North Wales, Pa., owned by the same company, which have been wonderfully successful. Mr. Geiger had great foresight and was a master of detail, preparing plans that were possible of being carried out to the fullest extent. He has been with the company continuously since March 1, 1881. The good will of the management and the best wishes of all his friends in the trade are his for a long and congenial life.

John Habermehl is an optimist. Although his firm suffered last year in the loss of the large decorative work, which is such a feature of their business, due to the cutting out of all large social functions, he says they did a very fair business and were not at all discouraged over the outlook. They have just reconstructed their greenhouse plant at 22nd and Diamond streets, increasing the height of all the houses, buying their heating apparatus up-to-date and greatly added to the efficiency of the whole range. D. T. Connor had charge of this work, which was erected with Lord & Burnham Co. material. In common with others, their great trouble now is labor, on which the new ruling of the government labor board will make even further inroads.

MUCH INFERIOR STOCK NOTED.

Business during the past week has been very poor, and while the supply of stock has been plentiful the quality has been generally inferior, especially in gladioli, which have been flooding the market for the past two weeks. The early crop will soon be over, and it is hoped the late varieties will show an improvement. Some very good asters are now received daily, and will continue to arrive for about six weeks. The quality of New York state asters is always good, and the coming of better stock should make business in this line good. Some good roses are to be had, but principally in the short-stemmed grades. Several growers are cutting from the new carnation plants, and the offerings look very fair. There has been a heavy supply of lilies, and prices have dropped in order to move them. American Beauties move very slowly. There is a heavy supply of specials at present and many are offered at bargain prices. The street fakirs seem to be on every corner with roses and gladioli, and even they seem to find it difficult to dispose of their wares. Most of the florists are now back from vacations and are getting their establishments in shape for fall business.

TRADE CONTINUES VERY QUIET.

There was "business as usual" during the past week, meaning usual for the dog days, which is always on a diminished scale. The great scarcity of orchids keeps prices up to high figures, $1.50 to $2 per flower in the wholesale market. There were plenty of roses, but no surplus of good ones, consequently such stock as Francis Scott Key, Russell and Columbia brought good money for summer time. The funeral work always creates a demand for white lilies and lily of the valley, so there is little change to note in these factors. There was a generous supply of the late and larger asters, and a little of the very best stock sold for $3 per 100, the surplus going much lower. There was a falling off in the supply of gladioli, and the quality in general was poor. The dahlias are to a certain extent, competing with the asters, but the weather is too hot for dahlias. Small lots of the chrysanthemum, Golden Glow, were on the market during the past week, but the buyers were not eager for them at $2 per dozen, the first asking price, $1.00 to $1.50 being usually their offers. In cut hydrangeas and various other outdoor stocks, there has been some trade, always cheap.

August 26.—The market is stagnant and stock accumulates. Even the best roses are hanging fire, while the short stock is just about impossible. For the past 24 hours a blanket of humidity has enveloped the city, which adds to the discomfort and irritation. The grouching of the wholesale district is in particularly bad humor. He figures it out that if things keep going as they are, a lot of florists will need a home more than a bank.

NOTES.

A report from Washington, D. C., published August 23, has created talk and uneasiness among the florists. The community labor board of the District of Columbia has announced a list of 24 classes of work regarded as nonessential, in which managers and employees of florist establishments are included. One report says that 40 classes of industry are included, and it is added that it is expected that the action of the District of Columbia board will set "a national precedent." There are now so many boards managing—some of them mismanaging—the business of the country, that to the common mind, some of their orders are confusing. It is of course understood that this order will apply to men within the draft age, but the new draft, 18 to 45, will take a wide sweep. It must be acknowledged that if this order is necessary to hasten the winning of the war, it should be cheerfully complied with, regardless of loss or inconvenience to the lines of business involved. The bridge across the Atlantic must carry its load of freight in order that our brave boys "over there" may be well supplied. In view of all these circumstances, florists in every branch of the business should realize that the carrying on or launching of Utopian experiments, is, at this time, reckless and almost criminal.

Miss Kingsley, secretary to Henry Hart, the retailer, of 1000 Madison avenue, has recently been active in Red Cross work. She made an extensive canvass, with great success, of the florists of this city, selling tickets for an entertainment for the benefit of the Red Cross, which was held at the Hotel Lorraine, Edgemere, L. I., August 29. The Hotel Lorraine is conducted by Henry Hart.

As a member of the Society of American Florists, the writer here registers his complete satisfaction with the election of J. F. Ammann to the presidency, and believes that no better choice could have been made. There can be no doubt that he will receive the wholehearted support of the members of the society—and the trade in general.

Of the large trees along the Mall in Central park, 25 per cent are dead or dying and the boathouse is unpainted and in bad repair. The public patronage is good and the superintendent would do well to ask for and insist upon better maintenance, failing in which the public service commission should take a hand.

William Mansfield and wife, of Lexington avenue and 80th street, are summering among the Maine lakes and woods. During their absence, James Wallace, the efficient manager, is making the store look as good as new, in painting and decorating.

Mayor Hylan has in a proclamation designated September 1 as Heroes' day, urging a flower mound in each borough of the city, and that every citizen at some time during the day drop at least one flower in memory of our fallen heroes.

To hold a flower show in this city, on Saturday and Sunday in August, without newspaper publicity, is to insure non-attendance. Everybody leaves town Friday night or Saturday morning to return Monday.

John Curry, of Lexington avenue and 78th street, who is master of several trades, has been busily engaged during the past week in painting and decorating his store.

Vaughan's Seed Store is featuring good displays of named gladioli, also first Holland grown hyacinths and tulips.

Miss Ethel Frankel, of Leikens' staff, is spending her vacation at her mother's cottage, Auerne, L. I.

John Young & Co. are receiving good stock of the chrysanthemum, Golden Glow.

George J. Polykranas is handling a fine stock of dahlias and asters.

A. F. F.

Horticultural Society of New York.

The above named society held a creditable exhibition of gladioli and other stock in the Museum building, Bronx park, August 24-27. The exhibitors were largely commercial growers and included John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, N. Y.; the Cedar Hill Nurseries, Glen Head, N. Y.; Mills & Co., Mamaronock, N. Y., and Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J. There was also an exhibit by John Scheepers & Co., Inc., New York. The private estates were represented by Mrs. Payne Whitney (George Furguson, Gr.), who took a number of prizes for vases of gladioli, Buddlein, Varietals and other stock. The most extensive exhibit of gladioli was by John Lewis Childs, and he took first prize for the largest and best collection of named varieties, which included a number that are well known in the trade. He also took prizes in other classes. The Cedar Hill Nurseries took first for 25 spikes of any white variety, with Europa; John Lewis Childs, second, with Giant White. For 25 spikes of any pink variety, Cedar Hill Nurseries was first with Panama, and Childs second with Gretchen Lang. Both these exhibits were fine.

A special prize of a silver medal was awarded John Scheepers & Co., Inc., for a display of gladioli. We judge that the stock in this exhibit was grown at the Cedar Hill Nurseries.

Mills & Co. were awarded a bronze medal for a display of dahlias, and a special prize for display of gladioli.

The dahlias in this exhibit were good. Bobbink & Atkins were awarded a special prize for a collection of hardy flowers.

We do not recall having previously seen much of the pink gladioli, Gretchen Lang, but it is a fine production and a close rival to Panama.

New York Federation of Societies.

A meeting of the New York Federation of Horticultural Societies and Floral Clubs will be held at the state fair grounds in Syracuse at 2 o'clock, Wednesday afternoon, September 11. There are several important questions to come before the federation at this time, and it is hoped that there may be a good representation of delegates from the various organizations in the federation. The room in which the meeting will be held has not been definitely decided upon, but information regarding the place of meeting may be obtained from Professor David Lumsden, superintendent of the flower department.

Rochester, N. Y.

TRADE SHOWS SOME IMPROVEMENT.

Business during the past week has shown a slight gain over the previous fortnight, undoubtedly due to the favorable change in the temperature. The market is full of gladioli of all varieties, which are being offered at ridiculously low prices, many going as low as $1 and $2 per 100. The dry weather has affected the crop of asters, and many are far below the average in quality, although some good stock is available and brings good returns. Sweet peas are not very good, arriving in a somewhat burned condition. Other outdoor stock is also suffering to some extent, but moves fairly well. Unless good rains are forthcoming, the outlook for later flowers is not very promising. Roses are none too plentiful, the shorter grades being insufficient to meet the demand. Carnations are seen, but are small and inferior.

NOTES.

Joseph Haddleton, a pioneer wire-worker of this city, passed away August 17, in his ninety-second year. He is survived by four sons and three daughters.

E. F. Wilson, accompanied by his eldest son and friends, are enjoying a camping and fishing trip in the Adirondacks. They are traveling by auto.

CHIESTER.

Buffalo.

WEATHER FAVORS OUTDOOR STOCK.

Weather conditions have been normal, with an occasional rain, with the result that outdoor flowers are of good quality. Asters, in this locality, are better than they have been for several years, entering into selling competition with roses without any trouble. Gladioli are not of the quality to be expected, many of the flowers being small, and salable colors, with the exception of pink, being scarce. Phlox, calendulas and snapdragons are among the other offerings, but the quality is only fair. In roses, Francis Scott Key, Russell, Sunburst and a few September Morn are the best varieties; others grade poor.

NOTES.

J. A. Cannon, who has been with S. A. Anderson for several years, has returned to Philadelphia, where he has taken a position with H. H. Battles. Miss Edna Goehring, who has also been on the Anderson staff for a number of years, has resigned to enter other work.

Peter Stroh, formerly with the Anderson forces, is now stationed at Syracuse. Overseas, possibly, later.

W. J. Palmer and family will remain at their summer home in the Muskoka district until September 1.

E. C. Brucker has returned from the Adirondacks, and Wallace Eliss has gone on a fishing trip.

When completed, S. A. Anderson will have a neat store on Elmwood avenue.

R. A. Scott and wife are on a pleasure trip.

Visitors: J. P. McCarthy and Arthur Zirkman, of Philadelphia; Stephen Green, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., also of that city.

BISON.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—The Rhode Island Horticultural Society has issued its schedule of premiums for the exhibitions to be held at the Narragansett hotel, this city, September 12-13 and November 14-15. Ernest K. Thomas, Kingston, is the secretary.

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, N. Y., August 14. There was an exceptionally good attendance, with President Robert Jones in the chair. Robert Greaves of Glen Cove and William G. Carter of Glen Head were elected as active members of the society. The following committee was appointed by the president to act as judges for the monthly exhibit: Benjamin Sutherland, Hector McDonald and Thomas Henderson. In the contest the judges made the following awards: Twelve gladioli, William Noonan, first; 25 pods of lima beans, Frank Petroccia, first; six ears of sweet corn, Frank Petroccia, first; four artichokes, exhibited by William Noonan, awarded honorable mention.

A general discussion was held regarding the potato blight that has been so prevalent in Nassau county. A number of the members stated their opinions and observations on the disease. The majority seemed to favor the theory that potatoes planted early, in well manured ground, were practically immune from the blight, and that potatoes planted late, in ground where only fertilizer was used, were the first to be attacked by the disease. It would be interesting to hear from other horticultural societies and get their views and experiences on this most important topic.

Andrew Wilson, Springfield, N. J., who was present at the meeting, offered a prize of a $5 gold piece to be competed for with the 12 best potatoes, at the next meeting, which will be held September 11. The regular society prizes that will be competed for will be for three heads of celery, 12 mixed dahlias, and one outdoor muskmelon.

SPINACH price is easier.

THERE will be a good crop of pepper seed.

SHORT California crops are salsify, parsnip and red onion.

GREELEY, COLO., advises indicate considerable damage to beans by hail.

SOME New York importers have cable advices that their Dutch bulbs are aloft.

NEW YORK—A. Hogewoning left for a training camp in the south, August 19.

ONION SETS.—In the Chicago district the latest guess on fall prices is $3.00 for whites.

AN American seed grower sailed for Europe last Saturday for a three months' selling trip.

REPORTS from the west on peas continue discouraging, especially as regards dwarf garden kinds.

ONE lot of Dutch bulbs, about 100 cases, was on display in New York August 26, a very early date.

LE ROY, N. Y.—N. B. Keeney & Son have filed papers of incorporation with capital stock amounting to $300,000.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—The Pacific Seed Co., to facilitate its business, has moved headquarters to this city from Caldwell, Ida.

IT is regarded as possible, that enough sugar beet seed can be brought out of Russia to take care of 1919 plantings.

PARIS, FRANCE.—The total wheat production this year is estimated at 183,500,000 bushels, an increase of 25 per cent over last year's yield.

SALESMEN in some New York seed stores have been called before their local board to show why they should not work in essential industries.

O. L. COULTER, representing C. C. Morse & Co., who has been on vacation in Michigan, left for California this week, stopping off at Rocky Ford, Colo.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade August 28 were as follows: Timothy, $8.00 to $9.50 per 100 pounds, no change from last week.

MAINE corn is backward, and advices state that, in addition to short crops, difficulties in securing the necessary amount of labor will cut deliveries materially. [Sweet corn grown in Maine for canning.—ED.]

MT. PLEASANT, MICH.—In the matter of the dissolution of the Harris Bros. Seed Co., on motion of Francis McNamara, attorney for the plaintiffs, the court has ordered all parties interested to appear before Cyrus E. Russell, court commissioner in this city, September 28, at 10:00 A. M.

TOLEDO, O.—Clover made slight recessions, August 27, closing $17.60, 10 cents higher than on the previous day, and showing a drop of 50 cents since our last report. Cash timothy was unchanged, selling at $4.60, September closed at $4.85½, October $4.87, December $4.87, March $4.92 and April $4.92.

Corn and Vine Seed.

Waterloo, Neb., August 22, 1918.

Our summer has been a hot, dry one. Some say we are 10 inches short on rainfall. August 4-6 were the worst days for crops that we have had in many years, and much damage has been done. A careful estimate indicates that corn prospects have been reduced 30 to 40 per cent, many fields being hurt far more than this, while others have passed through in fairly good shape. Our valley lands have suffered less than the upland. We will have a good amount of corn, but it is seriously hurt, and will show in the grain as well as in the quantity.

Vine seeds will be about an average crop, with a short acreage. Many fields have not made a good setting of fruit.

J. C. ROBINSON SEED CO.

Timothy and Clover Seed.

Receipts by dealers of timothy seed were indicated to be 85,000,000 pounds less for the year ending July 1, 1918, than for the year ending July 1, 1917, according to the seed reporting service of the bureau of markets. However, the carry-over on July 1, 1918, amounted to about 12,000,000 pounds more than that of the year before and 59,000,000 pounds more than that of two years ago. This large carry-over, it is thought, will offset the greatly reduced acreage cut for seed this year. Incomplete returns from the war emergency seed survey of July 1, 1918, show exports for the 12 months ending on that date have decreased from 12,767,580 pounds to 8,568,241 pounds. The United States has always been the largest exporter of timothy seed, and the falling off in exports, it is stated, may be due to difficulties in securing ocean transportation and to a decreased demand in Europe for seed to produce hay crops.

Incomplete returns from the survey of stocks and receipts indicate that the stock of clover seed in the hands of dealers on July 1, 1918, is less than one-third of the quantity held by them a year ago. The receipts by dealers for the year ending July 1, 1918, were 24,000,000 pounds less than for the previous year.

Vegetable Seed Production Survey.

The total production of vegetable seed, with the exception of cabbage, lettuce, salsify and turnip, will be ample for the needs of the coming year, according to preliminary returns from the seed production survey of July 1, 1918, and crop reports from important commercial seed growers to the Weekly News Letter. In some cases where the condition of crops is not satisfactory increased acreages are expected to bring the total production up to normal, while more than normal production of seed is indicated for some kinds of vegetables. This condition, it is pointed out, does not necessarily mean a large surplus, for it is known that large orders have been placed for certain vegetable seeds by foreign concerns for export to countries in Europe which formerly have been exporters of these seeds to the United States.

Interest Rate Decrease Possible.

New York bankers, in commenting on a Chicago dispatch quoting J. B. Forgan, chairman of the First National bank, as saying that "Banks can make money enough loaning out at 6 per cent, and the public and the country is entitled to protection against an increase in rates if they can be maintained at the present level," declared that the situation as regards the eastern market promises a lowering, rather than an increase, in the legal rate now prevailing. The rigid scrutiny by the $200,000,000 money pool of all applications for accommodation and the elastic conditions resulting from the operations of the federal reserve institutions are sufficient to meet any emergency.

What Is Good Seed Corn?

Good seed corn must be—

Well adapted to the seasonal and soil conditions where it is to be planted.

Grown on productive plants of a productive variety.

Well matured and preserved from ripening time to planting time in a manner that will retain its full productivity.

This sort of seed corn can best be secured by gathering the ears from the stalks as early as they mature in the fall, by promptly drying the seed immediately after it has been gathered, and by keeping it constantly dry and safe from rats, mice and insects.

CANNED tomatoes will be priced at cost, plus a fair profit.

MODIFICATION of the scale of express charges for short hauls within the so-called "first zone," now being worked out by the railroad administration, will, it is believed, result in a number of increases in rates on fruit, produce, etc., shipped into cities from adjoining localities.

SO-CALLED Montreal muskmelons are sold by New York retail grocers at $2 each. The melons are orange fleshed, eight inches in diameter, with outer surface deeply lobed. Hotels serve them cut into about five portions at 75 cents per portion. These are reported grown near Rochester, N. Y.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, August 28.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, 35 to 40 cents; celery, crate, 35 to 50 cents; head lettuce, 2-dozen $1.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.25 to $1.50; tomatoes, 4 baskets, 25 cents to 40 cents.

New York, Aug. 26.—Celery (state), per bunch, 15 to 30 cents; cucumbers, $1.00 to $3.00 per basket; mushrooms, $2.50 to $5.00 per basket; tomatoes, per pound, 3 to 5 cents; lettuce per package, 50 cents to $1.75; radishes, per 100 bunches, 50 cents to $1.00.

Embargoes Prevent Food Production.

Farmers are requested by the department of agriculture to order insecticides, fertilizers, seeds and agricultural implements early. By early is meant way in advance of the time they will be needed, so the goods, owing to the delays now encountered in shipping, may still reach the farmer by the time they will be needed. This is wise. Insecticides received a week after they are needed are worthless for the present crop. Seed arriving after planting time may be entirely worthless. Last spring whole carloads of insecticides shipped from the east to distant western points did not arrive in time and the merchants who had ordered them refused the goods.

Just now there is an embargo on insecticides from New York and possibly from other points in the east. The manufacturers are told that the embargo will be removed in "the season." Unfortunately, "in the season" will probably be too late, as it was last spring.

The shipping board and the department of agriculture will do well to cooperate. It is useless for the department of agriculture to advise farmers to do what the shipping board will not permit. There should be no embargo on seeds, fruits and vegetable plants. Insecticides, fertilizers and agricultural implements covering any prolonged period.

It is folly to establish a department to conserve food, and then to prevent food production through the blunders of another department.—E. C. Vick, in New York Sun.

Cucumbers Without Fertilization.

With the object in view of securing a White Spine type of cucumber that will set its fruit without fertilization experiments were begun by the Welland, Ont., horticultural experiment station in 1915 and the following number of plants were secured from the crosses made that year: Telegraph x Early White Spine, germination 19 from 31 seeds sown; Early White Spine x Telegraph, 176 from 210 seeds; Fordhook Famous x Telegraph, 106 from 112 seeds. There were a large number of undeveloped seeds which were also sown but none germinated.

Four of these plants were selected at random and grown in the greenhouse; the remainder were transplanted to the field. Ten flowers on each plant were covered with a paper sack to test the plant's ability to set fruit without fertilization. Most of the plants set no fruit at all from these flowers, but a few set one and some two. That means a few set 20 per cent. of their fruits without fertilization; but it was later proven that the pure White Spine varieties would also set a similar percentage without fertilization.

All of these plants were of intermediate type, between the two varieties crossed, with one exception, which was a dwarf plant. The plant appeared the same as all the others, with the exception that the internodes were very short. An attempt was made to self-fertilize one or two of its blossoms, but failed. The same plant matured three fruits, open fertilized, but they contained no viable seeds.

The plants in the greenhouses were given the same treatment as those in the field, that is, 10 flowers on each plant were covered to set fruit parthenogenetically, but none set. Five flowers on each plant were also self-fertilized, with the result that considerable seed was secured for growing the Telegraph x Early White Spine generation. During 1917 these were grown, but the results were a decided disappointment, owing to climatic conditions. The young plants at the start had a hard struggle against the rains and were kept very late. As soon as possible, bags were put over the female flowers, to see if they would set without pollination.

It was hoped to get 10 sacks on each plant, but, as there was no pruning of the vines, the supply of flowers became exhausted. Before more had developed a severe attack of cucurbit wilt cleaned off most of the patch. Attention was next turned, not to getting parthenogenetic results, but to self some of the most promising ones for seed. Several days were spent in this work, but no fruit resulted. Open pollinated fruit, however, from some of the best plants left was secured and the seeds taken for another year, which it is hoped will be more favorable.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex., President; J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa., Vice-President; Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass., Secretary and Counsel. Forty-four annual convention will be held at Chicago in 1919.

THE President has authorized a loan of $100,000 to forest fire fighters to meet emergency conditions in national forests.

RYE, N. Y.—The Ford Nursery has been incorporated by J. M. Redfield, L. I. Hand and E. Ford with a capital stock of $10,000.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.—The city has under consideration the employment of a city forester, among the trees here being in danger of total destruction by insect pests.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J.—The summer meeting of the state association of nurserymen was held in this city, August 17, with a good attendance and an interesting programme.

RECENT advices from Washington state that nearly 28,000 acres in the Lincoln national forest are being eliminated in New Mexico to simplify boundary lines and make the land available for farming.

Nursery Instruction For Soldiers.

Located in Allingtown, a suburb of New Haven, Conn., is one of the government's large convalescent hospitals. After the men have become strong enough to take some exercise, their training begins. During the summer there has been an interesting class in horticulture. Every Thursday and Friday one of the big army trucks rolls up to the barracks and loads up with the men who are interested in learning some of the principles of horticulture. They are then taken to the Woodmont branch of the Elm City Nursery Company, six miles distant, where instruction is conducted in a practical and thorough manner. They are taught to distinguish between different grades of soil, instructed in the principles of cultivation, taught pruning, budding, the making of cuttings, how to transplant and train plants and the general methods of caring for them.

Connecticut Nurserymen's Association.

The Connecticut Nurserymen's Association held its annual outing at Lake Compounce, Conn., August 21, the party making the trip to this delightful spot by auto. It was in every way a fine turnout, and the event was enjoyed to the fullest extent by all present. There were two good ball games, the features of which were the unusual batting abilities shown by Messrs. Campbell and Barnes, the losers being so badly beaten that they have begged the writer not to mention the scores. The management of Compounce is to be congratulated upon the splendid barbecued sheep dinner it prepared, differing from most resorts in that it was most bountifully served at tables. No business meeting was held, the order of the day being recreation, and all present seemed to enter into the spirit thoroughly.

F. L. THOMAS, Sec'y.

Fruit Stone Conservation.

Dr. Mary S. Rose, deputy director of the conservation bureau of the federal food board, is interested in the idea of organizing fruit-stone and nutshell clubs in this country, following the discovery that these make a good absorbent for gas masks.

Oil worth $135,000 is being wasted every year in the cherry canning industry, according to Popular Science Monthly. The oil is of a golden, fatty nature similar to the oil of sweet almonds.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Lorraine Begonias.

Begonias of the Glôiré de Lorraine type should now be making active growth, the bud shoots starting and the plants taking on shape. The earlier struck cuttings will now be fine plants in five and six-inch pots and will need a center stake to keep them erect. It is yet too early to tie the plants into shape, but if any of the branches are long enough to hang over the edge of the pot, they should receive some support. These branches hanging over the edge of the pot are in the way when watering and if the leaves get wet it takes some time for them to dry off and many will become spotted, and besides the branches grow crooked and are much harder to tie into place later on when this will have to be done. Keep the plants in a good warm house, from this on until the buds begin to show color, when they can be placed in cooler quarters, but do not keep the house too close. Give a little ventilation every day possible. If kept too close and moist some of the foliage will spot and be ruined. Constant light fumigations will be necessary to keep down the green aphids. These plants do not like heavy fumigation but light fumigation carried on frequently will keep the vermin in check and not damage the plants. These insects must be conquered before the plants begin to bloom or they will cover the young blooming shoots completely.

Dahlias.

As the cool nights approach it pays to make preparations to cover the best varieties and protect them from the early frosts. Generally the first frosts are followed by two or three weeks of pleasant warm weather, when flowers are more or less scarce, the outside stock being cut down and the greenhouse stock not being yet in full crop, and a supply of dahlias is a great boon at such a time. See that the plants are properly labeled so when it comes to lifting time there will be no mistakes made. A good large label placed beside each root with the correct name is essential in growing this crop. This label can be tied on to the root when the clumps are lifted and all danger of misnaming be obviated. Keep the plants securely tied to the stakes so that the high winds which are prevalent in the fall cannot break the plants down or the branches off.

Early Firing.

"Economy is wealth." This maxim has been drilled into the young for generations, but false economy is waste. And to put off starting the fires until all the plants have cold feet and have received a check that is going to take them two or three months from which to recover is false economy. As soon as the temperature in the house drops below the point at which it should be maintained, it well pays to start the fires. Many nights at this time of the year at 8 o'clock the temperature outside will be above 60°, but by morning it has dropped to 40°, and if the houses are closed the glass will be covered with moisture, the house cold and damp. This condition is not at all conducive to good growth, and gives the plant a check from which it often takes it some time to recover. It is far better and a money-making proposition to have the fires going and the proper temperatures maintained. The small expense of a little coal burned and the few weeks' wages of a night fireman that are necessary will be more than made up in the excellence of the crop. At this season of the year there will occur cold, stormy days when a little heat will be necessary to keep up the growing temperature all day. This is the time to look over all the piping and see if the boilers are working right. If steam heat is used see that none of the pipes have dropped from their fastenings and have made pockets in the circulation. If this has happened, fasten them up and straighten out the flows. Turn on the valves and see if they leak, and if they do repack them; in fact, it is good policy to repack all valves every fall, whether they actually need it or not, for they will require it before the winter is over. This early firing will also give the opportunity to spread sulphur and nicotine extracts on the pipes and keep the insects and mildew from getting a foothold. Looking at this question from all sides, early firing is an economical proposition and should not be neglected.

Cannas.

As soon as the frost kills the cannas, preparations should be made for the storing of the stock plants for next year. The tops should be cut off about six inches above the ground and removed from the field and not left lying around to attract cut worm millers. The roots should be dug and each variety should be carefully kept separate so that there will be no chance of their being mixed another season. Unless the weather is very severe they can be allowed to dry off a little before being housed, but if there is any chance of the night temperature dropping below the freezing point it is much better to get them under safe covering at once. Under a bench in a cool house is one of the best places to keep them during the winter months, but if the soil under the bench is inclined to be moist, boards should be placed running lengthwise of the bench and the canna roots placed upon these. They must, however, be looked over occasionally to see that they do not run too dry, for there is just as much danger of losing the plants by their drying up as there is by their rotting from an excess of moisture. In placing the clumps under the bench set each variety by itself and leave space enough between it and another variety that it will be impossible, no matter what may happen, for them to get mixed. Mark each variety with a label, written plainly and in full. It takes but a few seconds longer to write the name in full and abbreviations are to be deprecated; we have known cases where the man who always does things in a hurry to abbreviate the name so short that, when he tried to read it six months later he could not make out what name he intended to write. This is often a case where "haste makes waste." Attach the labels in such a manner that they will not become misplaced or lost.

Anemone Japonica.

One of the finest fall perennials is the Anemone japonica, which is now in bloom, and if it is not included in the grower's stock at present, it should be procured. There are both white and pink, but for general use the former is to be preferred. Where the plants are in bloom a framework should be built over them that heavy cloth may be drawn over and protect them from the early frosts, and they will bloom for some two or three weeks yet. If it is desired to increase the stock, a plant can be lifted and the roots cut into several pieces about an inch long and the pieces inserted in the propagating bench and they will root in about four weeks. Put them in 2½-inch pots and when the roots have spread into the soil the pots can be placed under a bench and run dry until spring, when they should be potted in 3-inch pots and grown on until all danger of frost is passed and then planted out.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

While there is no material increase in the general demand until after September 15, which period virtually closes the vacation season, there is every reason to have the store looking its very best with a fair and well arranged stock of seasonable plants and flowers that will make a good impression on the returning customers. The great mistake of many in the craft is that of preparing for business after it comes.

Basket of Dahlias and Gladioli.

Most people, when they have made up their minds to get anything, want it right away. "We are just out; the stock has been ordered, and we expect it any minute," are familiar phrases in far too many stores. The customers are disappointed; they come expecting to see the goods, and are almost certain to try elsewhere, with the result that this sale is lost and, most likely, much future business.

The first demands of the season are for plants that will help brighten up the home, a few showy cut flowers for the library or dining table, and the initial filling of the fernery.

The supply houses are featuring willow or rattan latticed open-worked, inside jardinières or boxes for the window shelf, or on stands that can be placed in the bow window or used in any decorative scheme of room adornment. These have galvanized iron liners which prevent drip. They are enameled and finished in two-toned shades of green, blue and yellow, with white, which will combine with the decorations of almost any room. When well filled, these make an attractive addition to the stock of any store. They are just the thing for a wedding present, and are meeting with favor in all the large cities. At this time, feature the seasonable flowers—gladioli, asters and the dahlias that are just coming in. Summer cosmos is also bright and attractive. A wide-mouthed bowl or vase full of cosmos in loose bunches, in cornucopias of wax paper, looks very inviting and with a price card results in many sales.

Too much attention cannot be given to this featuring of seasonable specialties, all conspicuously priced. Many sales are made to customers who had no idea of purchasing until they were attracted by the display and the apparent low price. It is not necessary to say the price is reduced; the fact that it is conspicuously displayed gives that impression.

It is time now to take down the summer rock work and water garden feature in the window and start the fall campaign with a display of choice plants of crotons, dracenas, ferns, etc. A few large, well colored specimens that stand out individually are sure to attract attention and help sell the smaller and more convenient sizes in stock, best suited for the house.

Dahlias will soon be at their best. They should be carefully handled, not placed subject to drafts, which cause them to wilt. It is best to have the stock ordered the day before, packed at the dahlia farms, the boxes coming directly through your dealer to you. This insures the arrival of the flowers in the best possible condition. The selected varieties are wonderfully fine, available for almost any kind of work. Do not forget that a few drops of formaldehyde in the water will keep all flower stems sweet and clean.

Commence at once to feature the work of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery. The idea that flowers can be delivered all over the United States is new to most people. This association opens up a great avenue for new business. Do not wait for the other fellow to send it to you; originate all you possibly can yourself. Every new customer made this way means increased local business from him in the future. Have you tied up to the S. A. F. publicity campaign? Hundreds of the brightest men in the business are contributing thousands of dollars to this movement, in which your business is directly benefited as well as theirs. The beautiful slogan sign, "Say It With Flowers," should be in your window and store, also on all your stationery. Join in this movement at once by purchasing a subscription to John York, secretary, 1170 Broadway, New York.

Feature the Dahlia.

With the great acreage now given to the cultivation of this showy fall flower in the vicinity of many of the large cities, it is possible to obtain a continuous supply of flowers of all the best varieties. The improvement of the dahlia in the past 10 years has been most marked. To the old globular flower, the pride of our grandmothers' gardens, has been added the flat and twisted petioled forms of the so-called cactus and peony flowered varieties, which, with their brilliant range of coloring and varied sizes, are wonderfully effective for all kinds of decorative or design work. When flowers such as the dahlia, and others that have a comparatively short season, are at their height they should be featured and given prominence, so that customers may have a change from the roses, lilies, carnations and other all-the-year-round flowers. Dahlias are now handled commercially in a way that makes their transportation well nigh perfect. They are placed, as soon as possible after being cut, in buckets of water. After the stems and flowers are filled with this necessary fluid, they are then packed in shallow corrugated straw-board boxes holding one or two layers, according to size or grade of flowers. These boxes are crated three and four together for shipping. With many wholesale florists the practice is "No dahlias received except as ordered." These orders, secured the day before, are phoned to the grower. They are then delivered by the dealer without further handling to the stores. In this way, all waste due to rough usage in selection of orders from boxes in the wholesale houses during busy morning hours is avoided. Empties are gathered and returned the next day. By these efficient methods, there is little waste; no stock left over to be thrown on the streets at ruinous prices. The shopkeeper, to protect himself, carries a larger stock than if he were able to replenish at short notice, which induces greater sales and is, therefore, more advantageous to all interests.

The growers, by careful selection of varieties and disbudding are furnishing long-stemmed stock that is much used for making into sprays, elegant examples of such work being seen in many stores at this time. For special sales, to quicken up the opening of the season, there is nothing better than a "special" of dahlias. The small tumbler, or vase-handle basket, filled with a dozen small sized Minnie McCullough, that beautiful orange and red variety, has an inviting "take me" look that is almost irresistible. A window filled with these, suspended in shower effect from the top, is sure to attract attention, while the conspicuous price card of $1 or $1.50 each brings in the customers.

Boxes of a size that will hold a dozen or as many as will show a good profit at $1 or $1.50 each will also, when nicely displayed in the window, keep things moving. Just a few need be filled, while the balance of the window contains boxes closed or tied up as for delivery, some tagged, and with a few flowers tied on the outside.

An avenue is open for trade with stores in other lines, who are featuring their fall goods, who might be induced to display a vase of choice dahlias in their window or on the counter, these to be renewed with fresh stock early every morning. A vase of the gorgeous Geisha Girl will attract a crowd in front of any window.

For table decorations, there is nothing more effective than the dahlia, the pinks, the reds and the oranges all light up beautifully, and when used either in solid color effects or combinations are wonderfully gorgeous and decorative. Delight, a glowing pink, Jack Rose, crimson; Minnie McCullough, orange; Sylvia, shaded white and pink; Krenhilda, pink with twisted petals, and Geisha Girl, a splendid loose-petaled orange-colored flower of great size, are popular varieties.

Seals and Stickers.

Superior service is one of the greatest factors of the successful florist. His stock is fragile and perishable, subject to more or less damage with every handling by even the most skilled, while the novice is almost sure to leave evidence of his meddling hands. Many patrons of the flower shops are very particular; while they have every confidence in the ability and integrity of the management, yet in numerous instances, they desire to select the flowers and see them arranged, even to the placing of the accompanying note or card. When the finishing touch has been given, they are then satisfied; in their mind, they hear the words of surprise and delight of their friend as the beauty of the box opens to them.

The best laid plans are, however, often upset by meddling and curious people, who come in between the donor and the recipient. The servant, who receives the box at the door, may have the curiosity to take a look at its contents, and perhaps call others to see the lovely flowers, even going so far as to pick some of them up to get a closer look and smell. Perhaps, as many florists know to their sorrow, the thought comes that one or two out of so many will not be missed, and the muddled up box is then hurriedly tied up to await its owner.

At times, curious people desire to see the accompanying card. To such, the knotted string or tape is no obstacle, even the secrecy of the sealed envelope being easily overcome.

The up-to-date florist, who prides himself on his excellent service, overcomes this difficulty by means of seals and stickers, which effectively close the package and protect it from all prying eyes. Tape has succeeded string in most modern stores in tying boxes of flowers. The seal is placed over the two ends of the tape, which project from the knotted bow. These are left a trifle long so that they extend about an inch beyond and are convenient to break the seal when the box is opened. The ultra method is real sealing wax, dropped on hot, and stamped with the seal of the store. At busy seasons, however, this takes much valuable time and a method quite as effective which requires but a moment to adjust, is found in the manufactured embossed and plain printed seals and stickers, which are entirely practical and used in all shops as an evidence of their methods to please.

Where the box is wrapped in paper, seals are often placed over the folds at the ends, giving additional security. Now that war time economies often call for the use of paper in place of the more expensive box, particularly for home orders, stickers, one inch in diameter, which cost but 10 cents per hundred, are used to bind the edges of the paper and give a square end, boxlike appearance to the package.

The John Henry Co., Lansing, Mich., has introduced a unique seal showing a rose bud, stamped with the S. A. F. slogan, "Say It With Flowers." This is known as the firm's "rose bud" sticker, and is offered in two sizes at such low prices, in quantity, as to be available for the sealing of all store packages.

FARGO, N. D.—The Shotwell Floral Co., the Smedley Floral Co. and the Briggs Floral Co., of this city, closed their establishments August 19, in order that their employees might assist farmers in shocking the wheat crop.

NEWPORT, R. I.—The Newport Garden Club has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: Mrs. Charles Hoffman, president; Mrs. Thomas J. Emery, vice-president; Mrs. Frederic Pearson, secretary; Mrs. John J. Whyson, treasurer.

National Publicity for Flowers.

The cordiality with which our slogan, "Say it with Flowers" has been accepted by the general public is, to say the least, most remarkable. The 20,000 paper signs, embodying the slogan, which our promotion bureau supplied to the National League for Woman's Service, were speedily exhausted through its 700 or more branches throughout the country, and like Oliver Twist, the league is back for more. Chapter houses of the league which received a quota of 25 signs, complain that the "ration" was too small to meet the opportunities for local publicity, and their motor cars have been obliged to operate with "just one sign." The promotion bureau, therefore, is arranging for another large output of these signs, not only for purposes of the league, but to supply a great demand coming from other organizations engaged in similar work. Does anyone give a thought to the vast amount of direct publicity for flowers which is accomplished in this direction—and it is only a single feature of our campaign, maturing because we are organized sufficiently to be able to influence it?

There are many ways of obtaining publicity other than those for which our campaign fund was more particularly expected to provide; and it is the object of our promotion bureau to embrace all opportunities presented. But, we must not forget that such opportunities become apparent only because of the expenditures made according to our programme. Consequently, if we do not progress on the lines laid out, and which entail the expenditure of the major part of our resources, the auxiliary publicity which costs practically nothing is hardly possible of accomplishment.

All this is said because it is imperative that there should be no let-up in the influx of subscriptions to the fund. We are nearing the attainment of our object. The committees have asked for the subscription of $50,000 per year to meet the expense required by their efforts to obtain all this publicity for flowers, and are but a matter of $6,000 short of their aim. There are enough florists in the country who have not yet subscribed a cent to the fund to cover this shortage many, many times over, even with an aggregate of small contributions. Will they wake up to the necessity of performing the small part asked of them? The committees think they will. There is every reason to believe that a sense of loyalty to the trade of which they are members, and from which they make their living, will prompt them to make a contribution to our fund in proportion to their means. This done, the plans for the completion of the 1918 programme may be at once put into effect, and a continuation of the good results already obtained assured.

The promotion bureau has in contemplation the issue of a new line of dealers' helps toward direct publicity very shortly. As these aids are provided at actual cost, they will only be sent upon a cash order basis. This opportunity is taken to remind the few to whom shipments were made last season on faith of their individual responsibility and who have not yet discharged their obligations, that remittances are expected forthwith, as these transactions were not of an ordinary commercial character, and advantage should not be taken of a courtesy.

Through the miscarriage of a communication, a seeming neglect on the part of the secretary to note, during his recent trip in the interests of the campaign, his visit to Denver, Colo., leads him now to acknowledge with gratitude the many courtesies extended to him in that city, and particularly the kind assistance and support given him by N. A. Benson, Sam Lundy and Ben Boldt, through whom he was enabled to take the best advantage of the limited time at his disposal.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Promotion Bureau Report.

From a departmental standpoint, the actual work of the publicity campaign may be said to date from January 1 of this year, when the plans formulated by the publicity committee and publicity finance committee were put into effect, and the campaign was fairly launched. At a meeting of the joint committees in Cleveland on December 7, 1917, it was arranged to place in the hands of the P. F. O'Keefe Advertising Agency, Boston, Mass., all matters concerning the insertion of suitable advertisements in the national magazines, and all other matters in the hands of a promotion bureau, which your secretary was to establish in connection with the administration office of the society, and which was to be under the direction of the joint committees. The work of the bureau was to include the preparation of literature calculated to awaken among the trade, interest in the campaign, and to provide such helps toward direct publicity as might be determined upon. Through a misunderstanding, which was occasioned by the necessity for immediate action, the P. F. O'Keefe Advertising Agency prepared and sent out a series of "broad-sides" explanatory of the campaign, with proofs of electrotypes, sign reproductions, and a sample of the booklet "Say it with Flowers;" the latter, however, was redesigned, before publication, by our promotion bureau. Consequently, such preliminary work is not accounted for in this report, and the expense of it forms no part of the detailed expenses of the bureau.

While this work was in progress, the staff of the bureau was engaged in general promotion work, much of which entailed considerable correspondence, and which resulted in a large influx of subscriptions. The demand for signs of the different patterns provided, and electrotypes, soon assumed heavy proportions, and our staff was kept constantly busy with the filling of orders and the answering of many hundreds of inquiries in regard to our offerings. We were also favored with personal visits by representatives from practically all national publications of standing, and from newspapers throughout the country, all of whom professed to be interested—mainly from selfish motives—in our campaign.

An important section of our bureau has been that which has had for its object the dissemination of stories and articles of interest to the public through the columns of such newspapers as could be induced to publish them. In this direction we have met a good measure of success, the value of which can hardly be determined in dollars and cents, for the reason that it cost us nothing beyond our bureau expense covering preparation and dissemination. Through the service of a clipping bureau we have been able to trace a liberal use of these stories and articles, and the publicity obtained from them has been extremely valuable. Our article covering Valentine's day was used by papers of high standing and general circulation, such as the New York Herald, the Chicago Daily News, and others of that class. We have found that many newspapers which did not care to publish our copy used it as a basis on which to build exclusive articles of their own.

I am of the opinion that our success in the direction of inspired publicity would have been far greater had not a complete description of our campaign and its aims appeared at the outset in "Printer's Ink," a journal which reaches the editorial and advertising departments of the general press. This write-up was unfortunate for us, and we were compelled to adopt different tactics for a proper dissemination of our matter. Through our clipping bureau, we got a line on the individual advertising florists were doing, and we compiled a list of several hundred newspapers whom we believed should be friendly on account of this advertising. To these newspapers we confided our plans, showing plainly that one of our prime objects was to encourage local newspaper advertising among our craft, the result being that we established a friendliness that has been to our advantage. Besides this, the advertisement clippings have proved most valuable to us through the ideas they embodied, and also for the fact that they are helpful to us when called upon to refute the charge that florists as a class are not advertisers. Our bureau classifies these advertisements in expandible index form, and the volumes are considered to be a valuable aid to us in our work.

While, of course, it has not been our mission to exploit any particular form of direct advertising—for few forms are without value—we have been free to accept for consideration suggestions which our subscribers from time to time make. The outcome of a composite suggestion in this respect was the production of our set of four lantern slides for use in moving picture houses; had we been able, or incited, to produce these slides earlier in the season we believe the demand for them would have been large. However, the slides we have in stock are good for all time, and we have not the slightest doubt but that they will be taken up early in the coming season. Their design and coloring make them very effective, and they are pleasing to the audience of any moving picture house.

Due to the fact that your promotion bureau had, as previously pointed out, no part in the preparation of the initial broadsides sent out by the O'Keefe Advertising Agency, it was not able to determine the prices at which the glass signs, electrotypes, and the transfer signs should be sold, but we, as well, realized the difficulty confronting anyone who might attempt at that time to establish a price on anything in which metal, glass or paper should figure for orders to be placed later than the time when such orders were merely in the projective stage. Consequently, the glass signs and electrotypes, on account of the advertised prices, were put out at a cost which yielded very little profit.

With the transfer signs, slides and stickers it was different, the quantity purchased in advance, based on careful estimates as to what could be disposed of allowing of a good profit with sales made on a basis of price which should still make these items of small cost to those who could use them. While the stocks on hand of these items might be considered large in proportion to the sales effected, it should be pointed out that deliveries were completed so near to the close of the florists' season that we are obliged to depend upon the demand for the coming season to close them out. There is room for very little doubt as to the disposal of this stock, the more important doubt being as to our ability to obtain further stocks at anything like the cost of the supplies we have.

The stock of booklets was handed over to the promotion bureau at the invoiced cost, with selling price already established. These booklets were advertised by the O'Keefe Advertising Agency in the different trade papers at a cost which, added to the cost of production, made the selling cost altogether too small if we were to consider the price established from a profit producing basis. There are still many thousands of these booklets on hand, and no effort is being spared to close them out at the established prices. The booklet is considered to have served a very important purpose, in that a large number of copies have been sent out in response to requests received through our magazine advertisements.

Perhaps the most significant note struck in the campaign has been the establishment of our slogan, "Say it with Flowers." We have ordered altogether 900 slogan signs in the glass and brass form which is on display here, of use in its chapter houses, meeting which almost 700 have been sold. Through the difficulty experienced by the manufacturers in securing the glass and sheet metal required for the production of these signs—which is ascribed to the government's wartime necessity—much delay has been experienced in the fulfillment of orders, particularly as our bureau did not feel justified in placing at once any order approaching the aggregate mentioned. These signs have been supplied at $1.50 each, delivered, a price which just about covered actual cost. The bureau also contracted for a supply of paper transfer signs, for affixation to windows and door panels. Considerable delay was also experienced in the delivery of these. Miniature reproductions of the sign in "sticker" form, three sizes, have also been provided, but here again delivery was delayed and our stock did not arrive until late in the season.

Our newspaper electrotypes service was unhampered by delays in delivery, and the filling of orders was most prompt. Altogether, the bureau sent out about 1,600 electrotypes. The value of this department of the bureau's service can hardly be overestimated. Wide-awake florists readily see that the use of these electrotypes, featuring, as they do, the current campaign advertising in the magazines, tends to connect their own establishments with the expensive magazine advertisements. The correctness of this theory has, time and again, been demonstrated, and our service might be considered as a medium for drawing upon the vast amount of publicity accruing from the magazine advertising.

The use of the these electrotypes in many hundreds of newspapers has resulted in our slogan becoming impressed on the mind of the public, and if we can only continue our work there is no reason why the impression should ever be effaced. I may, perhaps, be permitted to go further and say that our promotion bureau has been used by the public to a large extent for the very purpose of our slogan. Very many people have concluded that the Society of American Florists is a sort of trade name for a concern engaged in the distribution of flowers commercially, and as a clearing house, and have sent to us orders for flowers, accompanied by cash, calling for deliveries in various parts of the country—particularly was this the case prior to St. Valentine's day, when our office received 50 or more orders, which were relayed as directed. On very many occasions we have been called upon to play the part of "Cupid," most of the orders under the star of the God of Love coming to us from soldiers and sailors—officers, privates and seamen without distinction as far as their requirements were concerned in various departments of home service, and many from France. In addition to all, this we have supplied to hundreds of correspondents, information asked as to the possibility of filling orders by wire or otherwise in distant cities. While, of course, this business was trifling, as far as its relation to our country-wide trade could be considered, it showed the receptive mood of the public, over a wide area, as regards the extended use of flowers advocated through our publicity. Added to this, it might be mentioned that our bureau received over 3,500 requests for copies of our booklet, "Say it with Flowers," in response to the offer made in our magazine advertisements.

Your promotion bureau has lost no opportunity to exploit our slogan, and to keep our products prominently before the public. It is not generally known, but it is a fact nevertheless, that it was through the bureau that Italian day, May 24, 1918, was made a special flower day, the citizens of our country being called upon through exercises and gifts of flowers to show to Italy, our ally, that in spite of the propaganda spread by the Teutons, the sympathy and good will of this nation went out to her, and that our friendly aid was available to the end. The great United States said all this with flowers. Your secretary, through the trade press, called upon our craftsmen to render all assistance possible to make the day the success it proved to be.

When that great and noble organization, prominent among all our societies whose objects make for the welfare and comfort of our soldiers and sailors, the National League for Woman's Service, decided to establish as one of its important sections, its national flower distribution committee, with chairmen or branches in over 700 cities in this country, it sought the aid of our promotion bureau, with the result that your secretary sent out the following appeal to all the florists in the 700 cities:

May 29, 1918.

"Dear Sir:

"Here is a project which, if you will support it, is calculated to impress permanently our slogan 'Say it with Flowers' on the public mind throughout the country, and, as well, will give publicity to your own business.

"The National League for Woman's Service, which works with and through the American Red Cross and kindred organizations, has undertaken to visit all hospitals in which are wounded and sick soldiers, for the express purpose of presenting each of our boys incapacitated in our service with a flower or flowers. Here in New York, such distribution is now being effected on a large scale, and it is found that above all things the poor fellows crave flowers—offerings in the way of delicacies seem of secondary importance.

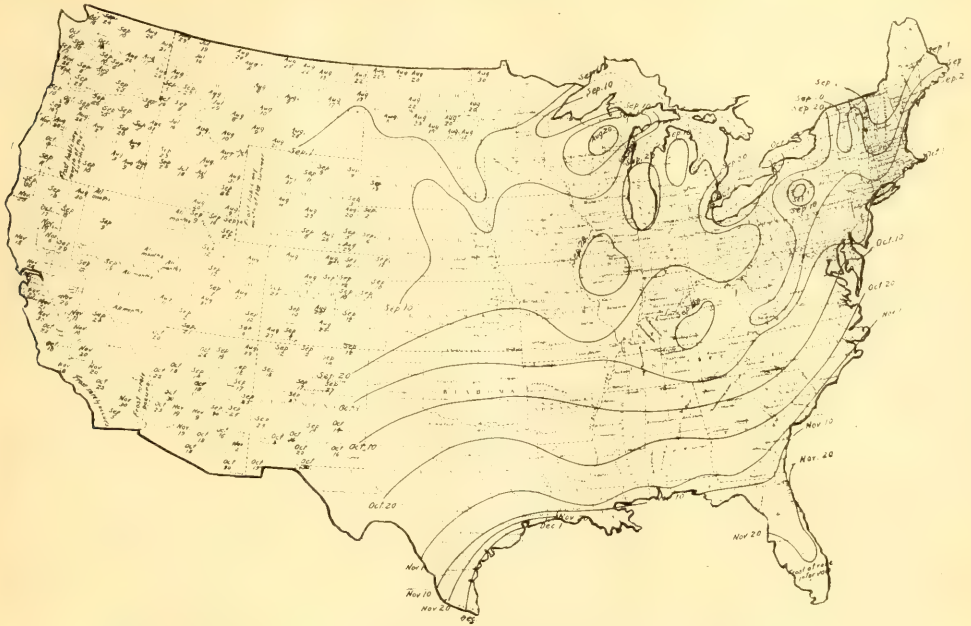

CHART 2, SHOWING EARLIEST DATE ON WHICH KILLING FROST HAS OCCURRED IN AUTUMN.

"The New York Florists' Club is supporting the movement to the fullest extent, and the S. A. F. is urging its members and the trade generally to help the local branches of the league in cities and towns where the soldiers are in hospital, by donating any flowers which may be available for this special purpose.

"The gratitude of the league for this anticipated co-operation on the part of the florists is shown in the fact that the organization has adopted the slogan of our publicity campaign 'Say it with Flowers' as its slogan for this work, and our promotion bureau is providing slogan signs for posting in all chapter houses of the different organizations, for display on all motor cars and vehicles engaged in the work, and various other ways. Probably 20,000 or more of these signs will thus go into public use, displayed and actively featured by the very best people in the country.

"You are asked to do this 'little bit,' and in doing it you will help to gain publicity for flowers such as would ordinarily have seemed impossible of achievement. The chairman of your district branch will, doubtless call upon you.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y."

The bureau is in close touch with the league in so far as this work is concerned, and, up to the present we have not learned officially of a case where a florist refused support as asked. What have we received in return? The league has put out to its branches, for halls, and on its automobiles, paper reproductions of our slogan "Say it with Flowers," some 12,000 in number, and has told the story of our co-operation through its own press bureau, its official bulletins, and in other ways. For the florists, which could well be spared, and no doubt will be forthcoming right along, the trade has received publicity which is practically priceless; and, in addition, every florist who has contributed flowers to his local branch has endeared himself and his business to many of the very best flower buyers in his community.

Further, when a prominent hospital in the northern part of the state of New York placed a ban on flowers for the sick in that hospital, notice of such action going through the newspapers of the country as a press dispatch, your promotion bureau at once sought the aid of the league in the condemnation of such a proceeding in any hospital, so that it should not be said that the florists fathered the objection. Under official signature, the league, through its publicity department, sent out a letter to the press strongly condemning the action of the hospital in question, and emphasizing the fact that such a restriction now or at any time was cruel, inhuman, and unnecessary. We have heard no more of the banning of flowers in hospital service.

At a joint meeting of the publicity committee and the publicity finance committee, held in New York, March 16, the campaign work was discussed at length. That part of the work looking to the procurement of subscriptions to the fund came especially under consideration. The cost of the "broad-sides" and other literature calculated to arouse interest and bring in subscriptions was gone into, and all in attendance were of the opinion that this literature was sadly ineffective in proportion to its cost. Chairman Asmus suggested that the appeal for subscriptions would be more productive if made of a personal character, and he proposed that the secretary be instructed to cover the country as far as possible in personal appeal for subscriptions. A trip of this kind, Mr. Asmus thought, might entail a cost of $12 to $15 per day, but compared with what our broadsides, with postage, were costing, he believed the results would be beyond comparison. Your secretary, therefore, mapped out a trip which took him to the Pacific coast and back, and the predictions of Mr. Asmus were fulfilled, but at a cost much less than anticipated. The trip resulted in an addition to the subscription list of $5,448 annually for four years, and 225 new members for the society. In every town visited, the florists were found to be greatly interested in the campaign, and it is safe to say that we can count upon the trade to stand back of the society in a four-year campaign for publicity for flowers.

Frost Charts.

The accompanying charts, showing the earliest dates and the average dates of the first killing frost in autumn have been prepared by the weather bureau, United States department of agriculture, from data based upon observations made in the open country secured from approximately 1,000 stations with records varying from 10 to 30 years.

In chart 1, showing the average dates of the first killing frost in autumn, the country east of the Rocky mountains has been divided into sections, the frost dates being represented by a five or six day period, as designated by the irregular lines showing such dates and bounding the respective section on the north and south. Due to the irregular topography west of the Rocky mountains, much diversity of data was apparent and it was found impossible to draw corresponding lines.

In chart 2, showing the earliest dates on which a killing frost has occurred in autumn, the arrangement of sections is similar to that in chart 1, except that as dates were too diverse to allow closer comparison, the periods between the lines represent 10 or 11 days.

Frost Dates.

Truckers and gardeners planning for late crops should be aided in determining their "best bets" on the first frost by referring to this historical summary of frost occurrences in various sections, issued by the United States weather bureau:

Killing frost has never occurred earlier than September 10 south of the extreme southwestern portion of South Dakota, extreme southern Minnesota, central Wisconsin, and the interior northern portion of lower Michigan. It has never occurred earlier than October 1 south of the extreme north portions of Oklahoma and Arkansas, southern Tennessee, and the mountain districts of North Carolina and Virginia. It has never occurred earlier than October 20 to the southward of the extreme northeastern portion of Texas, northern Louisiana, the central portions of Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, and eastern North Carolina.

The chances are even that killing frost will not occur before September 15 in most of North Dakota, Montana, and the extreme northern portion of Minnesota. By the first few days in October, killing frost occurs on the average one year in two as far south as the southern portion of Nebraska, southern and eastern Iowa, southern Wisconsin, most of the interior portion of lower Michigan, and throughout the greater part of New England. By October 15 it may be expected in at least half the years as far south as the central portions of Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, throughout eastern Kentucky and the mountainous sections of the Virginias.

There is one chance in two, that killing frost will not occur earlier than November 1 at the latitude of central Oklahoma, central Arkansas, and the northern portions of Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, and eastern North Carolina. The chances are even that it will occur by November 15 a little south of the central portions of Texas and Louisiana and well toward the southern portions of Mississippi, Alabama, and Georgia. This does not mean that killing frost will occur in the localities and on the dates specified every other year, but that in the long run it occurs, as indicated, in half the years.

There prevails in some sections a popular belief that in the season when frost may be expected, its occurrence is largely influenced by the phase of the moon, or other periodical phenomena. Careful tabulation of frost data and its comparison with moon phases fails to disclose any such relation. All persons interested are therefore cautioned to watch, not the moon, but the forecasts issued by the weather bureau.

Greenhouse Management—III.

This is the third of a series of interesting articles by L. C. Corbett and J. H. Beattie, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., the first and second having appeared in our issues of August 10 and August 24 respectively.

Practically twice as much radiation is required to maintain greenhouses at a temperature of 70° to 75° as for houses to be carried at a temperature of 45° to 50°. With heating systems of equal efficiency, this means that it will require nearly twice the fuel to grow warm crops demanding the higher temperature than will be needed for a crop like lettuce, which may be grown between 45° and 50° F. As a fuel conservation measure, the greenhouse vegetable grower can, in many cases, substitute cool crops for warm ones and enable himself to keep his plant in operation on the amount of fuel available.

Fall tomatoes, when grown as a greenhouse crop, require large quantities of fuel to maintain the temperature necessary to their development, as the crop occupies the houses during the short cold days of early winter when the amount of sunshine available is very limited. Many greenhouse men regard fall tomatoes as a very uncertain crop as it does not yield as well as when grown in spring when the days are longer. The same is to a large ex-

Mrs. J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, O.
Pres.-Elect Ladies' Society of American Florists tent true of cucumbers, and they require an even higher temperature than tomatoes. They are usually grown as a spring crop, but those growers who produce this crop in the fall can, by substituting some cool crop, enable themselves to keep their plants in operation.

CUCUMBERS AND TOMATOES.

As possible substitutes for fall tomatoes and cucumbers, lettuce and cauliflower are perhaps the most promising crops. While it is true that the market is usually well supplied with lettuce, there is a good demand for cauliflower. Other crops that will thrive at comparatively low temperature, and which may be grown in place of high temperature crops, are radishes, chard, beets and dandelion.

Radishes are forced in practically all vegetable regions, and as a rule, are in considerable demand. It is, however, an easy matter to overstock the market for radishes as the demand is limited. Many vegetable men can profitably devote at least a portion of their space to fall and winter radishes. The temperature required is even lower than that for lettuce. This vegetable is not subject to attacks from many insects or diseases, and is, on the whole, very easily grown.

Beets may be grown in the greenhouse when the conditions are similar to those suited to the growing of lettuce. Greenhouse beets are in considerable demand both for the tops for greens and for the roots. They will, however, come in competition with stored beets and with those grown in cold frames in the warmer portions of the country, and it is not probable that it would be safe to devote any considerable space to their cultivation without assurance that a market exists.

SWISS CHARD AS A GREENHOUSE CROP.

Swiss chard presents interesting possibilities as a greenhouse crop. This vegetable requires the same conditions as its relative, the beet, but owing to its fine quality when used as a salad plant, it should take well, and owing to its attractive appearance, it would be a good seller when once introduced.

The dandelion requires about the same conditions as lettuce, and is a crop that might readily be substituted for high temperature crops. The demand is somewhat limited, however, but it is worthy of the attention of vegetable growers who are lacking for substitute crops for cucumbers and lettuce.

While greenhouse grown cauliflower comes in competition with the southern and California grown product, it is altogether probable that the market will consume all the winter grown cauliflower that the greenhouse men are able to produce. This vegetable is a cool crop, demanding a temperature little higher than lettuce. While the plants are small, intercropping can be practiced, using lettuce or radishes, which will be removed before the cauliflower attains sufficient size to interfere with these crops.

GROWING CAULIFLOWER.

In the past, the difficulty in securing good seed has deterred many greenhouse men from growing cauliflower, and particular attention should be paid to securing seed of a satisfactory strain. The plants are started and handled in the same way as cabbage. Planting distances vary from 15x15 to 24x24 inches. When intercropping is practiced, the cultivation must be such as to suit both crops. About the time the heads are formed, the leaves may be tied together so as to protect the heads from the light, keeping them white, although in many cases this has not been necessary.

It is altogether probable that by devoting some space to one or more of the crops mentioned, the greenhouse man will be able to keep his plant in operation on the amount of fuel available. The grower of cut flowers and ornamental plants is not, as a rule, situated so that it is possible for him to substitute one crop for another, as his stock must be provided and set in the houses before the forcing season. Roses and carnations are planted in the house in midsummer. It is possible, however, to carry both of these crops at lower temperature than is the usual custom, resulting in somewhat slower development, but in a better product.

BOSTON.

AUGUST SHOWS GOOD RECORD.

Business has started to improve and August developed much better than last year. The new crop of carnations has begun to arrive and is bringing $2 a hundred. Asters are quite plentiful and selling as high as $3 a hundred for the best. Gladioli are a drug on the market. Growers who specialize in bulbs are flooding the stores and hotels with the blooms at a very low figure, therefore, giving a grower who raises flowers for a living, a small chance to break even. Rubrum and Easter lilies are in a great demand, selling for 4, 6 and 10 cents each. Sweet peas have practically gone for the season. Those that are in the market are of a very poor quality. Golden Glow chrysanthemums are arriving in small quantities and sell for 75 cents and $1 a dozen.

NOTES.

The first fall meeting of the gardeners' and florists' club will be held in Horticultural hall on the evening of September 17. As several matters of importance will be discussed it is desired that a large attendance be present.

At Penn's store, everyone is busy with funeral work. The duck farm, arranged in one of the windows, is attracting lots of attention.

The Wm. W. Edgar Co. is cutting rubrum and Easter lilies. They also have a good crop of begonias and cyclamens ready for market.

The Mishawan greenhouses of Woburn, Mass., are sending to market some very good Golden Glow chrysanthemums and asters.

Welch Bros Co. reports good business and is very much pleased with the summer trade.

Ed Winkles is cutting from his new crop of Morning Glow carnations.

ADVANCE IN PRICES PLANNED.

The labor problem is growing to be very serious with florists in this city and vicinity, the wages for common laborers paid at present being $18 to $20 per week, and help hard to get at even that price. Many of the growers are considering the plan to curtail production and thereby reduce the number of employees necessary to the operation of their ranges. In speaking along these lines, J. J. Hess, of Hess & Swoboda, says "It takes more to sell, more to heat and more for fertilizer to raise first-class roses than it does to raise trash, and it takes more attention." At this time florists here are planning to raise the price of flowers this fall, but just when the increase will go into effect has not been announced, but they say it must come or they cannot continue in business under existing conditions and increasing costs. Those closely in touch with the situation express the opinion that a 25 per cent increase will meet the difficulty and if they show quality there will be no complaint as to prices in proportion.

NOTES.

Louis Rogers, a florist of this city, was seriously hurt and two of his companions were killed in an automobile accident near Milford, Ia., when their car turned over while going at a high rate of speed. The party were on their way to Minnesota where they intended to spend several weeks camping and fishing. The injured man was brought back to this city and is said to be recovering.

The leading florists of this city are well to the front among the liberal contributors to the special fund being raised to pay for local advertising in the newspapers during the coming Liberty Loan campaign.

FLORISTS' CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS.

The annual meeting and election of officers took place August 29 in connection with the outing in the beautiful grove of the Breitmeyer Nursery & Landscape Co., near Rockwood, Mich. A more suitable and delightful location for such an event would be hard to find. There was a good attendance with President E. A. Feters in the chair.

He paid a high tribute to Ex-President Frank Danzer, whose death occurred August 20 and which was deeply regretted by the local craft. A committee was appointed consisting of J. F. Sullivan, M. Bloy and George Doemling to draft suitable resolutions, copies to be sent to the bereaved family of the deceased and to his business associates.

By a resolution unanimously adopted the American Peony Society will be invited to hold its next annual meeting in this city.

The election of officers resulted as follows: J. F. Sullivan, president; M. Bloy, vice-president; H. Forster, secretary (re-elected); J. K. Stock, treasurer. The names of Walter E. Cooke, Cleveland, O., and George Streit and M. Gibson were proposed for membership.

The Late E. A. Seidewitz.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the Breitmeyer Nursery & Landscape Co. for the hospitality extended the members of the club and their families.

CLUB OUTING.

The annual outing was a most pleasing event and was participated in by about 20 florists, their families and friends, the total attendance being about 100. The programme of events was well arranged and successfully carried out under the supervision of M. Bloy and his committee. A list of the events and the names of the prize winners is as follows:

Grand special prize for the largest number of representatives of any family attending the outing—J. Sylvester and family, first; F. Meisel and family, second.

Dash, 100 yards, boys 10-14 years—Robert Heisel, first; Fred Meisel, second.

Dash, 100 yards, men—Myron Bloy, first; John Berlin, second.

Dash, 50 yards, boys under 10 years—Sol Roseman, first; A. Skrzabki, second.

Dash, 75 yards, girls 10-14 years—Eleanor Meisel, first; Elvira Sylvester, second.

Dash, 50 yards, girls under 10 years—Theresa Roseman, first; Nathely Roseman, second.

Dash, 75 yards, men over 30 years—George Doemling, first.

Dash, 75 yards, ladies—Mrs. Laura Dexter, first.

Married ladies' race—Mrs. Doemling, first; Mrs. Berlin, second.

Shoe string race—Fred Meisel, first; Earl Cooke, second.

Three-legged race—John Berlin and M. Bloy.

Tug-of-war—Won by team captained by J. Streit.

Baseball—Retailers won from wholesalers.

Score, 8 to 5.

The printing of the programme was donated by E. A. Feters, who also distributed cigars which were enjoyed by all.

The prizes were donated by the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago; Walter E. Cooke, Cleveland, O., and Frank Holzmagel, Joseph Streit, Peter Pates, Albert Poehel, Walter Taenke, George Doemling, R. W. Jean, John Breitmeyer & Sons and the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange.

OBITUARY.

Edwin A. Seidewitz.

Edwin A. Seidewitz, of Baltimore, Md., one of the best known florists in that section, with a retail store in that city and a range of glass at Annapolis, Md., died at his home, August 24, from a bullet wound in his right temple, self-inflicted. The deceased had been in poor health for more than a year, suffering from a nervous disorder, and it is believed that business worries brought about by present-day conditions unbalanced his mind.

Mrs. Seidewitz was born in Baltimore 52 years ago, and for several years resided at Annapolis, where he built several houses and specialized in roses to quite an extent. The chrysanthemum Edwin Seidewitz was named for him. He served as mayor of Annapolis and at the end of his term returned to Baltimore and opened the store on North Charles street, taking an active interest in its management up to the time of his death. He is survived by a widow, Mrs. Adelaide Seidewitz; a daughter, Adele; three sons, William E., Edwin W. and Albert R., and a sister, Mrs. Amelia Feiger.

The Late Frank Danzer.

At a meeting of The Detroit Florists' Club, August 29, 1918, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, Frank Danzer, a most cherished member and former president, has been called to the great beyond, and

Whereas, our club through his untimely end, has lost a valued, loyal and sincere worker in the ranks, therefore, be it

Resolved, that in the passing of Frank Danzer, the club has suffered an irreparable loss. His administration much cohesive work among the members, who at all times extended to him the highest praise for his successful efforts. Be it further,

Resolved, That we tender to his bereaved widow and children our heartfelt sympathy in their affliction, and that a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to them, and spread upon the records of the club.

Dr. Byron David Halsted.

Dr. Byron David Halsted, formerly professor of botany at Rutgers College, at one time managing editor of the American Agriculturist, and contributor of a number of interesting articles to THE AMERICAN FLORIST, died at his home in New Brunswick, N. J., recently, aged 67 years. Dr. Halsted was a graduate of the Michigan Agricultural College at East Lansing in 1873 and later occupied the chair of botany at Ames College, Ames, Ia., joining the faculty at Rutgers in 1889.

PORTLAND, ORE.—Henry Pfeifer has reopened his flower stand in the market house.

FAIRBURY, N. Y.—The stock and implements at the range of the late Frank O'Brien have been sold at auction.

DECATUR, ILL.—George C. Schmitt has opened his more commodious quarters on South Main street and will add two houses.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—John White, who had been in the florist business in this vicinity for many years, died August 26, aged 77 years.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Public notice is hereby given that, as no objections have been filed, the following plant registrations become complete:

Roses Premier, Victor, Golden Rule, and Mme Butterfly, by the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.

Pyrethrums Rutherford, President Wilson, Sylvia, Pink Beauty, Rosy Morn, Cactus, Dainty, Favorite, Columbia, Delight, Rose Pearl, and Purity, by Robbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J. Sept. 3, 1918. JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

American Rose Society.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

The following request for registration of a rose has been received, and this has been approved by the rose registration committee. Unless objections are received within three weeks from the date of this publication, the registration will be permanently accepted:

Name—Mrs. J. C. Ainsworth. Class, hybrid tea; parentage, sport of Mrs. Charles Russell. Description—Habit of plant, upright and vigorous; character of foliage, light green, leathery; freedom of growth and hardiness, free grower; flower, large; color, light rose pink; form, high built center, fairly full; fragrance and bud, finely fragrant; petalage, 45 to 50 petals; freedom of bloom and lasting quality, remarkably free and most noticeable for keeping qualities, absolutely fadeless.

The rose is similar to Mrs. Bayard Thayer, but is different in size, form, growth and color, and superior for the following reasons: Its fine form, opening freely and evenly; its excellent shade of color. More vigorous and more easily propagated than Mrs. Charles Russell.

Flowers Essential.

Our attention has been called to a long article by Bernard M. Baruch advocating the reduced use of flowers and other so-called luxuries. Flowers being necessary to human life, the people will regard this effusion in much the same light as Frank H. Vanderbilt's empty utterances on floral extravagance last fall. The place of flowers in the hearts of the people is well shown in the following from the Philadelphia North American of August 26:

"When the white sheet was removed from the body of a soldier in the Camp Dix dead house the stiff fingers clutched a bunch of wild flowers. A few hours before death he had asked the nurse to push his cot where he could see the sun go down back of the New Jersey pines. When the doctor told him he was about to die he made no reply, and continued to gaze out into the twilight as it deepened into darkness. Then he asked the nurse to pick him some wild flowers, just outside the window and, when she did, he said, 'I used to pick them at home.' The night nurse came on duty and was told what the doctor had said, and that the dying soldier had no near kin to notify. A few minutes before he died he whispered, 'I feel lonely.' The night nurse had noticed him fondling the flowers, like those he used to pick at home,' and she did not have the heart to take them from his hand before the attendants carried the body away."

Many authorities say the war will be followed by a prolonged period of unusual prosperity. The business man who is not preparing now for the good times coming will lose. The business must be preserved to enable the owners to pay the taxes necessary in winning the war.

Greenhouse and other property must be kept in the best possible condition for service. To let the stock and trade run down now, would be a criminal injustice to our men at the front and commercial treachery to the nation.

Mid-West Horticultural Exhibition.

The Mid-west Horticultural Exhibition of flowers, vegetables, fruits and food conservation, which will be held at the Coliseum, Des Moines, Ia., November 5-8, under the auspices of a number of prominent florist, horticultural, nurserymen's, vegetable growers' and allied organizations, promises to be an event of more than usual interest. The preliminary announcement of premiums just issued covers 30 classes in the flower and plant section and many divisions for fruits, vegetables and food products. For information and copies of the premium list address Hon. Wesley Greene, chairman of committees, secretary of the Iowa State Horticultural Society, Des Moines, or J. S. Wilson of the J. S. Wilson Floral Co., Des Moines, chairman of committee on flowers.

Burpee's Sweet Peas

New Winter Flowering Spencers.

The coal problem is one of great concern to the commercial florist, and there appears to be no alternative, except to produce such crops as can be grown with the smallest amount of heat. Sweet Peas can be successfully grown under conditions that would not allow production of other popular flowers.

We recommend to our florist friends that they sow Sweet Peas under glass for a commercial winter crop. Sweet Peas are the logical paying crop for the coming winter. They may be grown with very little heat.

Early Lavender King
Greatly reduced.

WHITE

3395 Burpee's Early Sankey. Magnificent white. Black seeded. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 75c; oz., \$1.25; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$3.75; lb., \$12.50.

3396 Burpee's Early Snowstorm. The best of the white-seeded, early flowering Spencers yet introduced. The flowers are of great size and substance, beautifully waved and are borne in great profusion. $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., \$1.00; oz., \$1.75; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$6.00; lb., \$20.00.

CREAM

3381 Burpee's Early Canary Bird. This is a splendid, rich, deep cream or primrose colored self. $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 75c; $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., \$1.25; oz., \$2.00.

3391 Burpee's Primrose Beauty. An attractive and pleasing shade of deep primrose, flushed with rose. $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 75c; oz., \$1.25; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$1.50; lb., \$15.00.

LIGHT PINK

3385 Burpee's Early Lovliness. The color is white, the entire flower being suffused soft pink until it reaches the edges, which are distinctly picotee with rose-pink. $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 75c; oz., \$1.25; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$3.75; lb., \$12.50.

3397 Burpee's Early Sweet Briar. Color a lovely shade of pink throughout, but with a soft salmon or amber suffusion, this being more accentuated in the younger flowers and buds. $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 75c; $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., \$1.25; oz., \$2.00.

DEEP PINK

3384 Burpee's Early Enchantress. It is a bright rose-pink, becoming deeper toward the edges of standard and wings, gradually softening in tone toward the center of the flower. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 75c; oz., \$1.25; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$3.75; lb., \$12.50.

3390 Burpee's Early Pink Beauty. A soft rose-pink on white ground, richer toward the edges, gradually softening in color as it reaches the center of standard and wings. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 75c; oz., \$1.25; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$3.75; lb., \$12.50.

ROSE PINK

3383 Burpee's Early Empress. This is a magnificent flower of largest size. A most distinct and glorious shade of bright deep rose-pink. $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., \$1.00; oz., \$1.75; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$6.00; lb., \$20.00.

CREAM PINK

3382 Burpee's Early Daybreak. The color is a pleasing shade of rich rose-pink on cream ground, the color becoming deeper toward the edge of standard and wings. $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 75c; $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., \$1.25; oz., \$2.00.

3396a Burpee's Early Sunburst. The color is a pleasing shade of rich pink, becoming lighter toward the base of standard and wings. The entire flower is suffused with soft amber and salmon. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 75c; oz., \$1.25; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$3.75; lb., \$12.50.

W. ATLEE BURPEE CO., Seed Growers, Philadelphia

Early Sankey. Greatly reduced

CRIMSON and SCARLET

3386 Burpee's Early King. A glowing, rich, bright crimson. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 75c; oz., \$1.25; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$3.75; lb., \$12.50.

3394 Burpee's Rosy Morn. The color is a pleasing shade of rose with crimson-scarlet standard, immense flowers. $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 50c; oz., 85c; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$2.50; lb., \$8.00.

ROSE

3393 Fordhook Rose. This lovely variety is a charming shade of rosy carmine. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 50c; oz., 85c; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$2.50; lb., \$8.00.

LAVENDER

3389 Fordhook Pink. A distinct shade of pink suffused with lavender throughout. Under artificial light it is particularly pleasing. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 50c; oz., 85c; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$2.50; lb., \$8.00.

3391a Burpee's Early Princess. Color a lovely shade of soft lavender suffused mauve. A color in great demand. The flowers are most attractively fluted or waved. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., \$1.00; oz., \$1.75; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$6.00; lb., \$20.00.

3399 Burpee's Early Zephyr. Briefly described as a silvery blue self. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 75c; $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., \$1.25; oz., \$2.00; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$6.00.

3392 Burpee's Early Lavender King. A first-class lavender has been much wanted in this type, therefore we have great pleasure in offering the new Lavender King. This glorious new variety is a rich, true, deep lavender throughout. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., \$1.00; oz., \$1.75; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$6.00; lb., \$20.00.

BLUE

3380 Burpee's Early Blue Bird. This is a charming shade of blue. Somewhat similar to Wedgwood. $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 75c; $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., \$1.25; oz., \$2.00.

MAUVE

3388 Burpee's Early Mauve Beauty. Color a pleasing shade of rosy mauve. Charming under artificial light. $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 75c; $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., \$1.25; oz., \$2.00.

BICOLOR

3398 Yarrowa. The color is a bright rose-pink with a clear, creamy base. Floradale-grown seed exclusively. Oz., \$0.75; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$2.40; lb., \$8.00.

3387 Fordhook Pink and White. This is the most popular color in early-flowering Sweet Peas. Having a bright, rosy-pink standard with creamy white wings, lightly suffused rose. Oz., \$1.00; $\frac{1}{4}$ lb., \$3.75; lb., \$12.00.

PICOTEE EDGED

3384a Burpee's Early Exquisite. The ground color is a soft shade of primrose, the edge of the standard and wings being beautifully "picotee" with deep rose-pink. A strong, robust grower, the large flowers are freely borne on long stiff stems usually in threes and fours. $\frac{1}{4}$ oz., 75c; $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., \$1.25; oz., \$2.00.

ROSES ARE IN LARGE SUPPLY.

Roses are more plentiful this week than they have been for some time, but are moving nicely and clean up as well as can be expected under the existing market conditions. American Beauty roses are good property and are selling at high prices in the fancier grades, with no surplus when the stores close at night. Mrs. Chas. Russell and Columbia are quite plentiful and are reaching the market in splendid condition, compared to a week ago. Some particularly fine Champ Weiland and Sunburst are obtainable, not to mention the choice My Maryland and Mrs. George Sawyer that are offered. Hoosier Beauty are in ample supply and are to be had in large lots at special low prices, owing to the heavy cuts. Fancy Milady appear to be plentiful, but are in good demand and holding their own. Killarney Brilliant, Ophelia, Hearst, Double White Killarney, White Killarney, Tickwood and Ward are in good supply and, like the other varieties mentioned above, have shown a marked improvement in quality the past few days. Gladioli are in large supply, but the daily receipts are gradually becoming smaller, and the quality is better than the early stock. Asters are reaching the market in large numbers, and fancy stock is obtainable in this line. Carnations are more numerous, but are not moving any too well, and many of the growers will be disappointed with their returns when they compare them with last year's figures, which were exceptionally good. Lilies are in brisk demand and, while there are enough on hand at nearly all times to fill the orders, there is never a surplus. Orchids are scarce, and there does not appear to be any too much lily of the valley. Chrysanthemums are in better demand than they have been for the past month, and some of the fancy home-grown Golden Glow are bringing as high as $4 per dozen. The first white chrysanthemums made their appearance here this week. Green goods are in large enough supply to fill all orders. Fancy smilax is obtainable in quantity this week.

NOTES.

George Stollery made his annual trip to the Eagle river territory, Wisconsin, last week, bringing back about 400 pounds of high-grade birch bark, and arrangements were made for heavier shipments later. This bark is used during fall and winter in the making of flower baskets, etc.

J. E. Morichard, who formerly covered the southern territory for the S. S. Pennock Co., Philadelphia, Pa., is calling on the trade here this week. He is better known as "the smiling Frenchman."

A. T. Pyfer, manager of A. T. Pyfer & Co., celebrated his forty-sixth birthday August 26.

Provost Marshal General Crowder declined to change the date of the 18-45 draft registry in Illinois, because it conflicts with the primary election, so September 12 stands as registration day. Among those in the wholesale market who will register on September 12 are: N. J. Wietor, Charles Erne, Allie Zech, Joseph Foerster, A. T. Pyfer, John Michelsen, John Risch, Paul Klingsporn, H. B. Kennicott, J. E. Pollworth, T. E. Waters, Fred Hoerber, John Kruchten, Henry Kruchten, Archie Spencer, George Fisher, Harry Manheim, Guy Reyburn, Michael Freres, Fred Ottenbacher, Bert Cole, Max Awizuw, Robert Northam, Frank Ayres, Otto Goerisch, William Lorman, Bill Marshall, Max Ringier, Adolph Benesch and Albert Koehler. A. L. Vaughan, Chas. W. McKellar, Philip Schupp, A. L. Randall, E. F. Winterson, August Poehlmann, O. Johnson, E. C. Amling, Peter Reinberg, W. P. Kyle, George Reinberg, Otto W. Freese, John Enders, George Poehlmann, A. C. Kohlbrand and D. S. Musser are above the new draft age.

The Florists' Club will meet at the Randolph hotel, Thursday evening, September 5, at 8 o'clock. This meeting has been designated as "Retailer's Night" and several of the prominent dealers have promised T. E. Waters, chairman of the good-of-the-club committee, to prepare and read a paper. The club has been officially selected to represent all branches of the trade in connection with the fourth liberty loan campaign, which starts September 28 and continues for three weeks. F. Laufsenschlager has been appointed chairman of the florists' trades division. Committees from all branches of the trade will be appointed immediately. It is very important that organization begin at once. Ways and means to carry on this work will be discussed at this meeting—Do Not Fail to Attend.

Mangel, the Palmer House Florist, had the order for the King-Mitchell wedding, September 4, which helped to increase the week's sales considerably, and was one of the best orders he has booked for some time. The George Withold Co. arranged the church decorations, which amounted to considerably over four figures.

Ed. Vilter and wife, of Wendell, Ind., passed through here this week on their way to Hammond, Ind., where they will make their home in the future. Mr. Vilter was at one time employed in the local wholesale market and is well known to the trade here.

Bassett & Washburn are in heavy crop with Hoosier Beauty roses, which they are offering at specially reduced prices in quantity lots this week. Mr. Washburn reports that business is good and that Bassett & Washburn's sales for the week ending August 31 were very satisfactory.

Peter Reinberg is cutting heavily in roses, particularly extra fancy Mrs. Chas. Russell, Sunburst and Champ Weiland. The first white chrysanthemums to reach this market this season made their appearance at this establishment this week.

Frank Konczal is back on the job at Chas. W. McKellar's store after spending several months with the national army at Camp Jackson, S. C. He was rejected for military service on account of having flat feet.

Charles Richter who was with the national army at Syracuse, N. J., arrived home this week having been rejected for military service. He was married in Buffalo recently.

At the A. L. Randall Co.'s store roses are arriving in large supply, including a big percentage of fancy Mrs. Chas. Russell and Columbia. Gladioli are seen in quantity here.

The J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, is considering an offer of $8,000 for the firm's greenhouses. It is said the plant was considered worth $40,000 a few years ago.

Mrs. Chas. W. McKellar was injured quite severely last week when her hand was caught in an electric washing machine and was cut between the thumb and first finger.

Percy Jones, Inc., is strong on fancy asters, which are in brisk demand, especially from out-of-town points. The shipping trade is more than holding its own here.

C. L. Washburn is speaking a good word here and there for C. M. Moderwell, who is a candidate for the republican nomination for representative in congress in the tenth district. Mr. Moderwell was one of the men on the fuel administration last winter, who was responsible for the growers receiving coal enough to tide them over until the crisis was passed.

Zech & Mann are having a heavy out-of-town demand for stock which is keeping the force busy at all times. Among the rose offerings at this house are noted particularly fine Mrs. Chas. Russell and Columbia. Allie Zech and wife, who are enjoying their vacation in an auto trip through Missouri, are expected home this week.

A. Miller is another man in the trade who is busy electioneering. His father-in-law, John J. Bielman, is the regular republican candidate, the loyalist platform, for associate judge of the municipal court at the primary election September 11. He was prominent in city affairs under the Busse administration.

Peter Reinberg is again a candidate for president of the county board on the democratic ticket, and his many friends in the trade are doing all they can to pass the good word along so he will be successful at the primaries, September 11.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is supplying its trade with extra choice roses in all the leading varieties, including a splendid cut of American Beauty. Carnations are arriving in fair supply at this house, and are of good quality for early season stock.

TRADE CONDITIONS UNCHANGED.

Business conditions for the last week in August were much the same as those preceding it; local demand still at low ebb, while the shipping trade began to show new life, although nothing to get excited about. The market is well supplied in all lines, especially roses, in all lengths, and asters of inferior grade. The oversupply of both rubrum and Easter lilies has diminished so that supply and demand are again well balanced. Indoor carnations are more plentiful, but due to short stems and inferior blooms, do not yet cut much of a figure. More asters of real good quality could be moved to good advantage. With two holidays, Sunday and Labor day, following each other, business for this week did not commence till Tuesday. Both wholesalers and retailers kept open till noon to get out such orders as were on file. With the opening of all public schools, September 3, which has a tendency to force many summer resorters back to the city, we now look to the time when conditions should take a turn in our favor.

NOTES.

Many of the local craft, who must register September 12, and especially the "bachelors", are wondering just what is in store for them. Several are in business, and there would be quite a change should they be called for active service.

Gust Rusch & Co. are adding another star to their service flag; Oscar Meyer, of the store force, who just reached his twenty-first birthday, had to report August 31. Gust is also one of the many who must register September 12.

At the Brown Deer plant of the Holton & Hunkel Co., a large pile of screenings, said to contain 3,000 tons has become heated and must be rehandled in order to save it from ruination.

Outside of funeral work, things have been rather quiet of late with the J. M. Fox & Son, Inc.; still they do their share by always having a fine window display of seasonable stock.

Art Leidiger, of the Edlefsen-Leidiger Co., will again officiate as assistant superintendent of the horticultural department at the Wisconsin state fair, September 9-14.

It was glad news to all of us, when we learned that C. C. Pollworth was elected a director of the S. A. F. at the recent convention. He is deserving of the honor.

The regular florists' club meeting will be held at Kurtz Bros., September 5. The organizing of a state florists' association will come up for final action.

Fred Bliese, of the Waukesha Floral Co., who was a visitor the past week, says their place is in fine shape for the new season.

E. O.

HARTFORD, CONN.—J. A. Brodribb has decided to close his range during the coming winter.

The employes of Vaughan's Greenhouses, Western Springs, had a flag raising recently with appropriate exercises. The service flag in the office window carries seven stars in honor of James LaMond, Frank Schmidt, Otto Huber, Wm. Giffert, Wm. Gregory, V. L. Barnes and Philip Thorsen.

Kyle & Foerster, who have been engaged in the wholesale commission business since September 20, 1900, have dissolved partnership by mutual agreement. William F. Kyle retiring from the firm. Joseph Foerster will continue the business under the old firm name of Kyle & Foerster.

W. N. Rudd and wife will attend the annual convention of the American Association of Cemetery Superintendents at Rochester, N. Y., September 11-14. Mr. Rudd, who is president of the association, returned from an extended fishing trip up the Gunnison, September 4.

Anton Then has returned from a several weeks' stay in California.

Cincinnati.

TRADE GOOD CONSIDERING SEASON.

The demand is excellent for summer. There is an adequate supply of stock, while the call is steady and active. Roses are fairly plentiful and carnations are now in a supply that is fairly good. They have been selling well. Northern and New York asters are in the market and are proving good property. Easter lilies may be had, but they are not very plentiful. Gladioli are in a good supply; some excellent stock is coming into the market from the north.

NOTES.

C. E. Critchell arrived home from St. Louis the middle of last week. He had been held up by bad roads that made driving almost impossible. His establishment has been getting in some excellent cuts of asters from New York state and had a good market for them.

Clarence J. Ohmer and wife, and son, James, drove through from their home at West Palm Beach, Fla., to this city. They are the guests of E. G. Gillette and wife.

Chas. Windram has returned from France for training in this country, for special work "over there."

B. E. Ruch, of Shreveport, La., was in this city last week.

Ed Kavanaugh leaves for Camp Sherman this week.

SEPTEMBER OFFERS GOOD PROSPECTS.

The past week saw very little improvement in business, it still being a bit early for summer dullness to disappear. During the month of September many of the flower-buying public return to their homes from their vacations, and business should increase steadily. The weather has been quite favorable to greenhouse stock, and a few more weeks should see a wonderful improvement. Roses are beginning to show it now, although they are still a bit short and off color. Carnations also are improving, but the cut is very limited. Local asters are of poor quality, but some of the shipped stock are of very good quality and moves well. Gladioli are almost all short stemmed. Dahlias have made their appearance on the market, but they are still a negligible quantity. Harrisii lilies are plentiful, but being shipped stock, are not arriving in the best of shape. The demand is fair. Greens of all kinds are plentiful, with smilax the only exception.

NOTES.

The floral department of Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney, has been leased to Julius Schaefer, formerly with Mulanphy Florists, and F. H. Weber. Edwin Westman, whose management he succeeds, is going to take charge of the floral department of the Famous & Barr Co.

The retail florists' association will begin holding monthly meetings again beginning this month. At the coming meeting a new secretary will have to be selected, as Charles Young had to resign on account of his being unable to take care of the work.

Officers of the florists' club will meet this week at W. C. Smith's to arrange the programme for the next meeting, which is installation meeting. The place is at H. J. Weber & Sons, Nursery, Mo., and the date is September 12.

DEMAND CONTINUES QUIET.

Trade is still rather quiet here, the chief outlet of stock being funeral work. Chrysanthemums are becoming more plentiful every day and the stock may be said to be rapidly improving in quality also. Golden Glow is past, Crocus is becoming popular and so is Monrovia, the first of which appeared this week. Crystal Gem has succeeded October Frost, and it is very good indeed for this time of the year. They are all bringing fairly good prices. We have also noted that their keeping qualities are exceptionally good. Yellow pompoms are in limited supply and move rather slowly. In roses, there is an ample supply for all demands. Hadley is the best seller among the reds, and Ophelia and Shawyer lead in their respective colors. There are very few white roses to be had. Ulrich Brunner is still the leading fancy. There are no Russells or American Beauties. Cecile Brunner is plentiful and sells steadily at $1 per dozen bunches. Carnations are in oversupply with very little demand. Most of the stock goes to the street. There is a grand cut of Lillium rubrum coming to the market. They are bringing $1.50 per dozen, and is without doubt the finest stock handled here in years. Auratum is not so plentiful as was the case the past few weeks. There is still a heavy cut of gladioli, most of which is used in basket work. A few excellent Spencer sweet peas are being received. This stock is a fine seller, the only difficulty being to get enough to fill orders. A few cattleyas are beginning to show now. The supply however, is very short and will be for some time. There are plenty of gardenias for all requirements, and in the absence of orchids, they move rapidly. Dahlias are now in oversupply and it must be extra good stock to bring good prices. Zinnias are very fine and are much used in decorative work. They are commanding good prices. Asters are arriving in tremendous quantities. As a rule, most of the stock offered is excellent, but too much of it is demoralizing prices. The street peddlers absorb great quantities every day. In garden flowers delphiniums are the most popular. Celosias and Begonias Lorraine are the most noticed flowering plants. Cut cyclamen are in ample supply and bring good figures. There is an oversupply of all green goods. Some grand sprays of Eucalyptus leucocorymbosa are noticed and sell very rapidly.

NOTES.

The chief topic of interest among the trade just at present is the coming annual show of the Dahlia Society of California which will be held at the Palace hotel, September 2-4. Premium lists of the show were distributed last week and many entries are being received by Angelo J. Rossi, who is to be the show manager. Members of the exhibition committee held their final meeting to complete arrangements. War conditions have proved an incentive to the production of dahlias in this vicinity. In past shows, foreign introductions have predominated, but now, owing to war conditions about 90 per cent of the varieties shown will be of California origin. Last year showed the first big exhibits of California produced dahlias, but the coming year promises to be a record breaker in this respect. Many experts state that the new varieties of California origin are much superior to varieties from foreign countries that have previously occupied the show benches and it is now apparent that local hybridizers have produced types more suitable for this locality. T. A. Burns, president of the Society, states that the careful study of the dahlia has been a big factor in improving existing types, but he attributes the San Francisco climatic conditions as being ideal for this flower. Burns is authority for the statement that the show this year will have over 100,000 blooms on exhibition. Entries are coming in so heavily that the society has engaged every inch of available space on the main floor of the Palace hotel for the exhibition. The officers of the society are: T. A. Burns, president; William Kettlewell and C. S. Quick, vice presidents; F. C. Burns, secretary; Frank D. Pelicano, treasurer. Directors: A. Twitchett, Jesse Seal, Richard Lohmann, L. T. Pockman, Mrs. E. W. Lybberly, L. Kessingand and P. Durbrow.

Edwin Hoff, manager of the MacRorie-McLaren Co.'s store on Powell street, reports business better than usual last week. The death of the chairman of the French commission to Australia, in this city, called for a great amount of funeral work. His firm is making a grand showing of azaleas, and they are selling just as fast as they are received. This stock is being grown by Andrew McDonald at the company's greenhouses in San Mateo.

P. Vincent Matraia, manager of the Art Floral Co., has received a second consignment of very large kentias during the past week. They are to be placed in one of our leading theaters. They are beautiful specimens, about 16 feet in height, and perfectly finished. He has also received a large quantity of Bostons.

Frank Pelicano says funeral work was quite brisk with his firm last week. Angelo J. Rossi is busily engaged attending to the affairs of the coming flower show of which he is the manager. Mr. Pelicano has a great number of promising seedlings, which he intends to show here for the first time.

W. E. Kennedy, of the firm of Brown & Kennedy, on Sixteenth street, has just returned from an extended motor trip through southern California. His partner, Mr. Brown, is now in the service and is at Camp Fremont. Mr. Kennedy says business is quite satisfactory in his district.

Avensino Bros., on Geary street, have stocked up heavily with foliage and flowering plants this week. They are also showing some fine tuberous begonias and celosias. They report that they are always kept busy, and are satisfied with the condition of trade.

Mrs. Rose Gladding, wife of William F. Gladding, an Oakland nurseryman, was probably fatally burned when her clothing caught fire in a gas explosion Rosaia Bros., of Colma, are sending in large shipments of gladioli every day. They have made a great success of the growing of this flower and intend to increase their acreage next season. They are also large growers of Asparagus plumosus.

J. Kruse is sending in some of the finest stock of Cecile Brunner that is coming to this market. This is his specialty and he grows it to perfection. He is growing adiantums on a large scale also.

H. L. Marks and J. O. Burns, of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., of Los Angeles, are enjoying a few days in this city. They tell us that business with their firm has been excellent this season.

The Park Presidio Dahlia Society held its annual dahlia show August 24-25. This society is composed of dahlia enthusiasts in the Richmond district, who always stage fine exhibits.

Domoto Bros. are receiving heavy cuts of all seasonable stock at their Bush street store. Their greenhouses all appear to be in fine condition for the coming season's trade.
